"In this place and in the gravest moment of the world's history, I want to reaffirm the unshakable faith of the Allies in the cause of liberty and justice, and to proclaim our irrevocable determination to conquer, to protect weaker peoples, and also not to tolerate the violation of elementary social laws after centuries of struggle."

The Premier sent a "message of faith and affectionate salutation" to the "heroic army of Italy and to the whole Italian people." He reminded his hearers that this was the first time a British premier had been received by "the first citizen of Rome in the capitol—the temple and citadel of the ancient world, the outpost of the world of the middle ages, and now a monument symbolic of the renaissance and the unity of Italy."

After the reception Premier Asquith received a delegation of representatives of the Italian press.

COMPLETE BLOCKADE LIKELY.

Suspension of Rule 19 of Declaration of London Causes Stir.

LONDON, April 2.—A great stir has been caused in Scandinavia by the report that Great Britain has decided to suspend Section 19 of the Declaration of London, according to the Copenhagen correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company. The general opinion is that the decision is attributable to a determination to prosecute the blockade of Germany with more rigor.

Some newspapers suggest the suspension is possibly a preliminary to a formal announcement of a complete blockade, which may have been decided upon at the Paris conference of the Entente allies.

Great Britain issued an order-in-Council March 10, which declared that "neither a vessel nor her cargo shall be immune from capture for a breach of blockade upon the sole ground that she at the moment is on her way to a non-blockaded port." This is in contradiction to Section 19 of the Declaration of London, which declared neither a vessel nor her cargo on the way to a non-blockaded port could be captured.

March Shipping Loss Extensive.

LONDON, April 3.—The Board of Trade's summary of casualties to British shipping reported in March shows that 19 steamers, aggregating 44,400 tons, and eight sailing vessels of 1,866 tons, were sunk by enemy warships. Ten steamers, of 12,937 tons were sunk by mines. One steamer of 2,131 tons was sunk either by an enemy warship or a mine. Forty-three lives were lost in the case of the steamers sunk by warships and 81 in steamers sunk by mines.

Aurora at Port Chalmers, N.Z.

PORT CHALMERS, N.Z., via London, April 3.—The Shackleton Antarctic auxiliary exploration ship Aurora has arrived here. All on board the ship are well, except two members of the crew who are suffering from a minor illness.

THREE ZEPPELIN RAIDS

Two German Dirigibles Are Brought Down in England.

German Airships Visit East Coast Districts on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, Occasioning Considerable Loss of Life and Damage to Property—Successful Allied Air Operations Along the Western Front.

LONDON, April 3.—Two more raids by Zeppelin dirigible balloons occurred on Great Britain on Saturday and Sunday nights, making three raids on successive nights. At least 16 persons were killed and about 100 others injured in the Saturday night raid, which was over the north-east coast of England.

The coast of Scotland and the northern and south-eastern counties of England were attacked by Zeppelins Sunday night.

Bombs were dropped at various points.

A correspondent in a north-east coast town says that a Zeppelin was sighted there at 11 o'clock Saturday night. It dropped 14 explosive and seven incendiary bombs. Ten men, three women, and three children were killed, and 25 persons were seriously injured. In addition, about 80 others received minor injuries.

A tramcar inspector was killed and a woman tram conductor had a leg blown off. Several houses were wrecked in one street. One house was completely wrecked, but the family of five managed to scramble out without serious injury.

As some compensation for this sacrifice of life, however, the British public finds satisfaction in practical proof afforded of a great improvement in the defensive methods of dealing with aerial incursions. For the first time since the inception of this method of warfare on the British coast not only has one raiding Zeppelin been brought down and its crew taken prisoner, but the official report recounts an exciting aerial fight between a Zeppelin and a British airman, Lieut. Brandon, who, mounting to a height of 9,000 feet, got over the raider and dropped several bombs on it with effect. There is doubt about the fate of the enemy craft.

The L-15 was surrounded by British craft when brought down in the Thames estuary, and did not have much time to escape, according to a young lieutenant of the British aeroplanes. "First we sighted two Zeppelins," he said. "They were followed closely by three others, all flying at about 10,000 feet toward the south-east coast. We signaled the land batteries and got out of the zone of fire ourselves.

"Three of the Zeppelins received terrible punishment. We saw one distinctly drop its tail and shoot upwards. One of the balloonets had caught fire, and the commander, turning off his light, sent the airship upwards until it disappeared from view. Then Brandon flew over one of the Zeppelins and dropped several bombs, which did not appear to take effect. But making a swift dive closer he dropped three more bombs and believes he broke the Zeppelin's back, as the craft swiftly dropped to the water.

"I cannot be sure whether the airship fell or the commander was able to let her down. We immediately signaled the destroyers and patrols, and got within two hundreds yards of the derelict, ready to finish her with bombs if necessary. But she surrendered as our ships came up.

A correspondent who visited a portion of the raided area, says that eyewitnesses concur in a declaration that the Zeppelin raiders never previously have met with such a cannonade from anti-aircraft guns. The raiders, individually and in concert, attempted to penetrate inland during a greater part of the night, but were repeatedly checked by a tornado of shells.

Allied Air Victories.

PARIS, April 3.—The French and British airmen and special guns have claimed many victims in the past 24 hours. The British airmen drove down two hostile airships Saturday. In the Woevre the special French guns brought down an Aviatik. Saturday night a bombarding French squadron dropped 28 shells on the railway station at Etain and the bivouacs established in the outskirts of the village of Nantilliois. The same night three French aeroplanes dropped 22 shells, which caused numerous fires in the villages at Azannes and Brieuelles, on the Meuse. Sunday French aviators brought down three enemy machines on the Verdun front. Two other German aeroplanes were compelled to land precipitately in the same region. Finally a Drachen was brought down in flames by one of the French aeroplanes.

U. S. Minister Protests in Vain.

PARIS, April 3.—A despatch from Athens Saturday, received by the Havas Agency of Paris, says: "The populace has pillaged the building of the Serbian legation at Sofia, says information obtained from a reliable source. The Bulgarian authorities arrested the men left in charge of the building. The American Minister at Sofia protested to Premier Radoslavoff, who justified the action of the people on the ground that Serbia, having ceased to exist as a nation, the legation building belonged to Bulgaria."

British Warcraft Wreck Smyrna Fort.

LONDON, April 3.—Forts St. George and Sanjak, as well as the other coastal defences of Smyrna, were destroyed Friday in a three-hours' bombardment by a British warship, says a despatch to The Times from Salonica. The Turks did not reply to the fire of the warship.

Sanjak is the chief work commanding the entrance to Smyrna harbor. St. George is about three miles to the south-east.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Editorial

LAST week the Bruce battalion was reported 1070 strong, which is an excellent showing. Within a very short time it will be at full strength.

TWO of Bruce County's merchants were fined $49.50 each for selling adulterated maple sugar. This kind of stuff is always sold a few weeks before the genuine article appears.

WHATEVER may be said of Sir Sam Hughes this much is true that it is largely due to his dynamic force that Canada has been enabled to so splendidly come to the assistance of the Empire in the hour of need.

IT is proposed that flags shall be flown from the masthead on all government buildings, April 22nd, on the anniversary of the battle of St. Julien, when the Canadians won undying honor for Canada.

AND now it will cost $5 to take out a marriage license. This is a big jump from $2, and surely the war is not to blame for it. The reason cannot be that the licenses come from Germany. Well, some people can thank their lucky stars that they got married some time ago but after all the $2 license fee was the cheap end of it, the aftermath was the thing that counted.

WALKERTON wants the Bruce 160th Battalion to train there this summer. In the opinion of this journal a large centre where the soldiers will be trained is what is needed. During the winter the various local places have served the purpose of getting together the battalion but now that it has been formed the boys are entitled to the very best training that can be given them. And in our opinion it can be given better at some large centre, where a number of battalions are brought together, than at any County town.

St. Pauls. Church

The sacament of the Lords Supper was observed in St. Pauls Church Sunday morning.

Next Sunday evening the Rev. Mr. Laird, Toronto, will preach in St. Pauls Church and will speak on behalf of the budget schemes of the church.

Methodist Church.

Rev. W. W. Prudham's sermon Sunday evening was on 'Heroes of Faith" and was based on Hebrews chapter 11. Taking advantage of this theme he referred to Bishop Francis Asbury as a Hero of Methodism the Centennial of whose death is being generally observed. Bishop Asbury's greatness was not due to physical prowess or intellectual acuteness but to moral heroism devotion to duty, courage to face hardships, sacrifice to serve the suffering He received into the membership of the Church and ordained to the ministry more persons than any other individual. He died at Fredericksburg Va., March 31, 1816.

CLAVERING

Mrs. James Symon will not receive on Thursday of this week.

On Friday evening Miss Ruby Fielding entertained a few of her friends in honour of Miss Eileen Symon. Euchre and dancing were the amusements of the evening, and Miss Fielding served a very tasty luuch to the guests.

The members of the Methodist Church choir were very sorry to hear that Mrs. Mathews was resigning from their number. Mrs. Matthews had been a faithful member, and in fact has a history that perhaps no one in the choir now have of being in the first choir ever held in Wiarton. On Saturday evening the members of the choir were entertained by Miss Mildred Philips, the organist. The evening was spent with music and contests. They presented Mrs. Matthews with an exquisite tea-set of China and the following address was read.

Wiarton April 1st 1916

Dear Mrs. Matthews:

It is with sincere regret that we your friends of the Methodist Church Choir heard of your resignation. We feel that we cannot accept such without an expression of our regret. You were always ready with a smile and cheery words to help us when called upon. Our Choir looses a member who has ever been characterized by principles of honour, and genuine kindness which are more valuable than mere wordly success.

On behalf of the members of the the Methodist Church, Wiarton, we wish you to accept this China as an expression of our good wishes, and when you use the same, we hope it will remind you of your many friends

Signed on behalf of the Choir.

Do Not Stir It

Try a package of Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal. It contains 25 per cent. bran, both wonderful foods. The flaxseed is rendered absolutely odorless and tasteless by electricity depriving it's linseed oil of oxygen and changing it into a rosin. If porridge is made without stirring, it positively has no hint of flaxseed. If stirred while boiling the resin again takes up oxygen from the atmosphere and is changed back into linseed oil, ruining the porridge. Do not stir and Roman Meal Porridge is the most delicious nut brown breakfast known. It's very nourishing and prevents indigestion and constipation. Most grocers sell it.

Last fall when it was proposed to secure 25 recruits, at this point in order that they might be stationed here, it was regarded as quite a difficult task. At the present no less than 172 have presented themselves at Wiarton for enlistment and of this number only 6 have been rejected. very few indeed would have thought this possible.

A despatch in the Globe last week stated that a Red Cross nurse, a Miss Ridley, of Belleville, had been honored by the King. It was Miss Ridley, who nursed the King after he had been thrown from a horse in France, and went home to England and nursed the King through his illness. Miss Ridley is a neice of the Rev. T. S. Campbell, Wiarton.

They were two country recruits, they marched into the office and said put something in the paper about these town slackers, who will not enlist, "My dad has two farms and both my brother and myself are here, and he has to work them alone Girls can do the work in the stores, and girls cannot do it on the farm, Girls cannot fork hay and plough," and the young man was correct. He was disgusted with the town young man, who can go and who has not got enough red blood in his veins to go. When the history of the part that each town and township took in this war is written there are some young men who will appear smaller than a punched nickel.

Points to Consider, When Purchasing a Railway Ticket

A Canadian Pacific Railway ticket does not represent merely a means of transportation between given points. It, in addition provides the traveller with every comfort and convenience, developed by modern railway science, "Safety First" with up-to-date equipment, unexcelled dining car service, palatial sleeping cars, in a word, everything that a railway can provide for the comfortable transportation of its passengers, including courtesy.

The bells rang Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock —and the whistles blew —what was wrong? was there a fire? people looked and could not see anything, they looked again. Three quarters of the people did not know the reason of the music. It was because the Empire is at war and Bruce County wants to raise its battalion to full strength. The bells are a reminder that recruiting is still going on.

Private Earl McFarlane was sent to Walkerton jail Monday to serve 6 months for desertion. He joined the 34th in London last July and soon afterwards deserted. He spent the winter in the bush on the Peninsula and upon coming home about a month ago joined the Bruce Battalion. In due time his name went in to headquarters in London and they saw that he was the deserter from the 34th. He was arrested and brought before the Police Magistrate, acknowledged his guilt and received the above sentence.

The above figures represent the estimated loss by farmers through SMUT in grain crops in Ontario in 1915.

If you had a field of oats, barley or wheat you no doubt contributed to the great loss. By reason of the prevalence of Smut last year the danger is rendered greater this year. There is one way to prevent this and that is to

Treat Your Seed for Smut

The method usually adopted is as follows:—Mix one pint of formalin with 40 gallons of water or 2 tablespoonsful to 1 pail of water. Place the grain to be treated in a heap on clean canvas or floor. Sprinkle the formalin solution over the grain, then shovel. Repeat this until every grain is moistened by the solution; then cover the pile with sacking and leave for 3 or 4 hours. At the end of this time spread the grain out thinly to dry; shovelling it over three or four times will hasten the drying. Forty gallons of the formalin solution is sufficient to sprinkle thirty or forty bushels of grain, smaller amounts in proportion.

Immersing the grain in a bag is sometimes practiced and is equally effective.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By
GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,
Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr McCutcheon.

"A man never gets anywhere, Mr. Smart," said he, disrupting by his miserable exhibition. "unless he keeps plugging away at a thing. That's my principle in life. Keep at it. There is satisfaction in putting the blamed ball in the hole, even if it does require twenty strokes. You did it in three, but you'll soon forget the feat. I'm not likely to forget the troubles I had going down in twenty, and there lies the secret of success. If success comes easy we pass it off with a laugh; if it comes hard we grit our teeth and remember the ways and means. You may not believe it, but I took thirty-three strokes for that hole one day last week. Day before yesterday I did it in four. Perhaps it wouldn't occur to you to think that it's a darned sight easier to do it in four than it is in thirty-three. Get the idea?"

"I think I do, Mr. Titus," said I. "The things that 'come easy' are never appreciated."

"Right, my boy. It's what we have to work for like nailers that we lie awake thinking about."

We came out upon the eminence overlooking the next hole, which lay far below us. As I stooped to tee up my ball a gleeful shout came up the hillside.

"Hello, John Bellamy!"

Glancing down, I saw Jasper junior at the edge of the wagon road. He was waving his cap, and even at that distance I could see the radiance in his good looking young face. A young and attractively dressed woman stood beside him. I waved my hand and shouted a greeting.

"I thought you said he'd gone to Covington to see her off," I said, turning to the young man's father, with a grin.

"Not the same girl," said he succinctly, squinting his eyes. "That's the little Parsons girl from Richmond. He was to meet her at Covington. Jasper is a scientific butterfly. He makes both ends meet nearly always. Now, no one but a genius could have fixed it up to see one girl off and meet another on the same train."

Later on Jasper junior and I strolled over to the casino veranda, the chatty Miss Parsons between us, but leaning a shade nearer to young Titus than to me, although she appeared to become somewhat overwhelmed at meeting a real live author. Mr. Titus, as was his habit, hurried on ahead of us. I afterward discovered he had a dread of pneumonia.

"Aline never said a word about your coming, John," said Jasper junior. He called me John with considerable gusto. "She's learning how to hold her tongue."

"It happens that she didn't know I was coming," said I dryly. He whistled.

"She's off somewhere with Amberdale. Ever meet him? He's one of the finest chaps I know. You'll like him, Miss Parsons. He's not at all like a Britisher."

"But I like the British," said she.

"Then I'll tell him to spread it on a bit." said Jappy obligingly. "Great horseman he is. Got some ripping nags in the New York show next week, and he rides like a dream. Watch him pull down a few ribbons and rosettes. Sure thing."

"Your father told me that the countess was off riding with him and another chap—off to Fassifern, I believe."

"For luncheon. They do it three or four times a week. Not for me. I like waiters with shirt fronts and nickle tags."

Alone with me in the casino half an hour later, he announced that it really looked serious, this affair between Aline and his lordship.

I tried to appear indifferent—a rather pale effort, I fear.

"I think I am in on the secret, Jappy," said I soberly.

He stared. "Has she ever said anything to you, old chap, that would lead you to believe she's keen about him?"

I temporized. "She's keen about somebody, my son. That's as far as I will go."

"Then it must be Amberdale. I'm on to her all right, all right. I know women. She's in love, hang it all! If you know a thing about 'em you can spot the symptoms without the X-rays. I've been hoping against hope, old man. I don't want her to marry again."

I have visited the popular and almost historic Fassifern farm a great many times in my short career, but for the life of me I cannot understand what attraction it possesses that could induce people to go there for luncheon and then spend a whole afternoon loafing about the place. But that seems to have been precisely what the countess and his lordship did on the day of my arrival at the Homestead. The "other chap," Skelly, came riding home alone at 5 o'clock. She did not return until nearly 6. By that time I was in a state of suppressed fury that almost drove me to the railway station with a single and you might say childish object in view.

I had a pleasant visit with Mrs. Titus, who seemed overjoyed to see me. In fact, I had luncheon with her. Mr. Titus, it appeared, never ate luncheon. He had a dread of typhoid. I believe, and as he already possessed gout and insomnia and an intermittent tendency to pain in his abdomen and couldn't drink anything alcoholic or eat anything starchy, I found myself wondering what he really did for a living.

Mrs. Titus talked a great deal about Lord Amberdale. She was most tiresome after the first half hour, but I must say that the luncheon was admirable. I happened to be hungry. Having quite made up my mind that Aline was going to marry Amberdale, I proceeded to upset the theory that a man in love is a creature without gastronomical aspirations by vulgarly stuffing myself with half a lamb chop, a slice of buttered bread and nine pickles.

Along about 5 o'clock I went to my room. I daresay I was sulking. A polite bellboy tapped on my door at half past 6. He presented a small envelope to me, thanked me three or four times and as an after thought announced that there was to be an answer, whereupon I read the countess' note with a magnificently unreadable face.

I cleared my throat and (I think) squared my shoulders somewhat as a soldier does when he is being commended for valor and said:

"Present my compliments to the countess and say that Mr. Smart will be down in five minutes."

The boy stared. "The—the what, sir?"

"The what?" I demanded.

"I mean the who, sir."

"The countess, the lady who sent you up with this note."

"Wasn't no countess sent me up here, boss. It was Miss Tarsney."

Somehow staggered, I managed to wave my hand comprehensively.

"Never mind. Just say that I'll be down in two minutes."

He grinned. "I reckon I'd better hustle or you'll beat me down, boss."

* * * * * * *

She was still in her riding habit when I found her alone in the parlor of the Titus suit.

I give you my word my heart almost stopped beating. I've never seen any one so lovely as she was at that moment—never, I repeat. Her hair, blown by the kind November winds, strayed—but no! I cannot begin to define the loveliness of her. There was a warm, rich glow in her cheeks and a light in her eyes that actually bewildered me, and more than that I am not competent to utter.

"You have come at last," she said, and her voice sounded very far-off, although I was lifting her ungloved hand to my lips. She clinched my fingers tightly. I remember that and also that my hand shook violently and that my face felt pale.

I think I said that I had come at last. She took my other hand in hers and, drawing dangerously close to me, said:

"I do not expect to be married for at least a year, John."

"I—I congratulate you," I stammered foolishly.

"I have a feeling that it isn't decent for one to marry inside of two years after one has been divorced."

"How is Rosemary?" I murmured.

"You are in love with me, aren't you, John, dear?"

"Goo—good heaven!" I gasped.

"I know you are. That's why I am so sure of myself. Is it asking too much of you to marry me in a year from?—"

I haven't the faintest notion how long afterward it was that I asked her what was to become of that poor, unlucky Lord Amberdale.

"He's a dear, and he is going to marry a bred-in-the-bone countess next January. You will like him, because he is every bit as much in love with his real countess as you are with a sham one. He is a bird of your feather. And now don't you want to come with me to see Rosemary?"

"Rosemary," I murmured, as in a dream—a luxurious, lotos born dream.

She took my arm and advanced with me into a room adjoining the parlor. As we passed through the door she suddenly squeezed my arm very tightly and laid her head against my shoulder.

We were in a small sitting room, confronting Jasper Titus, his wife and his tiny granddaughter, who was ready for bed.

"You won't have to worry about me any longer, daddy, dear," said Aline, her voice suddenly breaking.

"Well, I'll be—well, well, well!" cried my late victim of the links. "Is this the way the wind blows?"

I was perfectly dumb. My face was scarlet. My dazzled eyes saw nothing but the fine, aristocratic features of Aline's mother. She was leaning slightly forward in her chair, and a slow but unmistakably joyous smile was creeping into her face.

"Aline!" she cried, and Aline went to her.

Jasper Titus led Rosemary up to me.

"Kiss the gentleman, kiddie," said he huskily, lifting the little one up to me. She gave a sudden shriek of recognition, and I took her in my arms.

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed I, without the slightest idea of what I was doing or why I did it. Sometimes I wonder if there has ever been any insanity in our family. I know there have been fools, for I have my Uncle Silas' word for it.

Mr. Titus picked up the newspaper he had been reading.

"Listen to this, Allie. It will interest you. It says here that our friend Tarnowsy is going to marry that fool of a Cincinnati girl we were talking about the other day. I know her father, but I've never met her mother. Old Bob Thackery has got millions, but he's only got one daughter. What a blamed shame!"

* * * * * * *

It must be perfectly obvious to you, kind reader, that I am going to marry Aline Tarnoway, in spite of all my professed opposition to marrying a divorcee. I argued the whole matter out with myself, but not until I was irrevocably committed. She says she needs me. Well, isn't that enough? In fact, I am now trying my best to get her to shorten the probationary period. She has taken off three months. God bless her, but I still hope for a further and more generous reduction—for good behavior!

THE END.

Prohibited Coffee Houses.

So many coffee houses sprung into existence in England during the reign of Charles II. that he, entertaining a belief that many political intrigues had their beginning in those places, issued an edict ordering them to be closed. In this proclamation the following words occurred: "The retailing of coffee or tea might be an innocent trade, but it was said to nourish sedition, spread lies and scandalize great men. It might also be a common nuisance."—Exchange.

Amending a Proverb.

There are a lot of silly proverbs knocking about. Take, for instance, "If pigs had wings they would fly." Now, this is absurd if you like. Do you know what sized wings a pig weighing eighty pounds would require in order to fly? They would measure about thirty yards from tip to tip. A nice state of things to keep pigs in an aviary with wings of that size! The proverb would run much better:

If pigs could fly
Pork would be high.
—London Scraps.

Slept at Will.

It must be essential to every general and indeed to every man who is bearing a heavy load of anxious business to be a good sleeper. Napoleon was a first rate sleeper; so was Pitt; so was Brougham; so was Mr. Gladstone; so was Wellington. At Salamanca Wellington, having given his order for the battle, said to his aid-de-camp: "Watch the French through your glass, Fitz Roy. I am going to take a rest. When they reach that copse near the gap in the hills wake me." Then he lay down and was fast asleep in a minute. In the midst of the critical operations before Waterloo, feeling weary, he laid himself down, put a newspaper over his face and took a nap.

Ships Take Oil "on the Run."

The method of supplying vessels, especially battleships, with fuel oil at sea is remarkably simple when compared with that required for coaling. A tanker is run up to within about 600 feet of the vessel needing oil, a tow line is attached, and a second line supports a hose through which the oil is pumped. Meanwhile the ships are steaming at an hourly speed of ten to twelve knots. An automatic tension furnishes the necessary elastic medium for paying out and taking up the supporting cable as required by motion of the vessel. By this method it is possible to transport from the tanker to the vessel taking on the fuel nearly 700 barrels an hour.—Wall Street Journal.

Drug Store Lights.

The colored lights that are characteristic of drug stores possess a charm for many reasons. Robert Louis Stevenson records that his friend Walter Ferrier "had a romantic affection for all pharmacies, and the bottles in the window were for him a poem. He said once that he knew no pleasure like driving through a lamplit city, waiting for the chemists' to go by." The present sultan of Morocco owns somewhat similar tastes. When Muley Yusuf paid his first visit to Casablanca he departed with an assortment of green, blue and red jars purchased from the chemists. These caught his eye as he passed through the streets and were bought to adorn his residence.

Willing to Oblige.

A lady warned her new gardener that her husband had an irritating habit of disparaging everything in the greenhouse and of ordering in a reckless manner new plants to be bought, but on no account was the gardener to humor him. "Whatever he says throw cold water on him, or he will ruin us with his extravagance."

At this point the new gardener turned on her a white and startled face. "Ma'am," he said, "if he orders me to pitch every plant in the place on the rubbish heap I shan't ever have the pluck to douse him with cold water. Won't it do as well if I get a drain of warm water out of the boiler and let it trickle gently down his neck?"

Laughter Saved the Ship.

Humor has been credited with the saving of many things, but perhaps never before has a ship been saved by its judicious application. In a great storm many years ago a ship's crew were all at prayers when a boy burst into a fit of violent laughter. Being reproved for his ill timed mirth and asked the reason for it, he said, "Why, I was laughing to think what a hissing the boatswain's red nose will make when it comes in contact with the water." This judicious remark set the crew laughing, inspired them with new spirits, and by a great exertion they brought the vessel safely into port.—Liverpool Post.

SECRET OF LIVING.

If we can only come back to nature together every year and consider the flowers and the birds and confess our faults and our mistakes under the silent stars and hear the river murmuring in absolution we shall die young even though we live long, and we shall have a treasure of memories which will be like the twin flower, a double blossom on a single stem, and carry with us into the unseen world something which will make it worth while to be immortal.—Henry van Dyke.

Letter From Pte. E. D. Schwan

Somewhere in Flanders

Dear Father—

You letter received some time ago but as we were in the first line trenches and the weather bad on ac- of the snow, I did not answer at once. We are at the rest camp now and have plenty of time to write. We had our first snow, and it was great I tried to believe I was in Canada out hunting rabbits, instead of the good hunting we get here it is much the same though for they take to their holes just like a rabbit and you have to frighten them out. I certainly am glad the boys are coming to the uniform so well in Owen Sound and can certainly say she is doing her bit, still there are a few yet who could join and I don't see why they don't. There is only one thing which gets our goat out here and that is when we think of any chap who can come and won't, you can believe me the boys don't think any too well of them. There is not an Owen Sound boy out here who is sorry he came, but after five months they begin to think it time to see new faces, the ones who shook hands and said so long, I'll be with you soon, we will give them the grip when they come.

Well this is a healthy country, lots of fresh air and no stuffy rooms here I have been in the trenches three months now and feel fine have not even had a cold and we have had all the worst weather it is getting better all the time now.

Your loving son
E. D. Schwan

P. S. When you send tobacco send cigarettes, you can imagine me on the firing step with pipe in my mouth rifle in my hand trying to cut a pipe of plug tobacco. The sox came o. k.

Walkerton

Mrs. Annie Elizabeth Routledge, widow of the late Geo. W. Routledge and an old pioneer of Brant township, who died from pneumonia at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Bradely, in Brandon, Man., on Wednesday of last week, was interred in the Walkerton cemetery yesterday afternoon, the funeral taking place from the home of her son, Mr. J. E. Routledge, of Dunkeld. The deceased, who had passed her 75th year, was one of the best known and most esteemed women in the township, having resided for over 50 years in Brant. Her husband predeceased her on Feb. 4th last. She leaves a grown-up family of five sons and four daughters to mourn her loss.

As a result of a communication from the Mayor of Woodstock, asking Bruce and other counties to unite in having the different rural battalions train in their respective counties, instead of mobilizing in some city, a joint meeting of the Town Council and Board of Trade was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening last, when it was decided to send a delegation consisting of Mayor Lippert, R. E. Truax, David Robertson and John Rowland to Ottawa to urge that the 160th Battalion be permitted to train during the coming summer in Walkerton. This is a step in the right direction and our citizens will hope that the mission, which is shortly to be undertaken, will be successful.

The last of the red card decorations has been removed from the houses of Walkerton and the only sad part of the epidemic now is left is a number of unpaid bills that the Town Council will have to meet. All told the tax-payers will be out about $300 as a result of the visitation. The silver lining to this dark cloud is found in the fact that although there were nearly two hundred cases of the malady in town, yet not a single fatality occurred from it's ravages here.

Having purchased a likely-looking beef from a Brant farmer on Thursday last for about $57.00, Bruder & Schnurr, butchers here, while slaughtering the beast on Friday were horrified to find strong symptoms of tuberculosis about the animal. Summoning Dr. Fortune the local vet., their worst fears were confirmed and the beef found to be in the last stage of consumption. Chief Ferguson was called in to view the remains, with the probable object of being used as a witness at a later date. A meeting of the local Board of Health was also called on Monday, and with Coroner Porter strolled off to the scene of horror, where they gathered around the slaughtered victim, and viewed the White Plague in it's worst form. That the tribe was not tempting vision is evinced by the fact that Mayor Lippert was so overcome by the repulsiveness of the sight that no vestige of supper passed his lips that night. The authorities ordered Chief Ferguson to cremate the carcass and on Tuesday the fagots were lit and the animal went up in smoke like an ancient sacrifice. The question now is, who will stand the loss the farmer who sold the beast or the butchers who paid for the steer and slaughtered it? As a letter despatched by Robertson and McNabb to the former immediately after the killing of the beast and the discovery of the disease, requesting that he come and take it away, failed to bring him in, it looks as if he has the "no surrender" signal out and will not submit without a fight. Hence the courts will likely be left to decide who is the loser in the tub-tenbar meat ordinance.

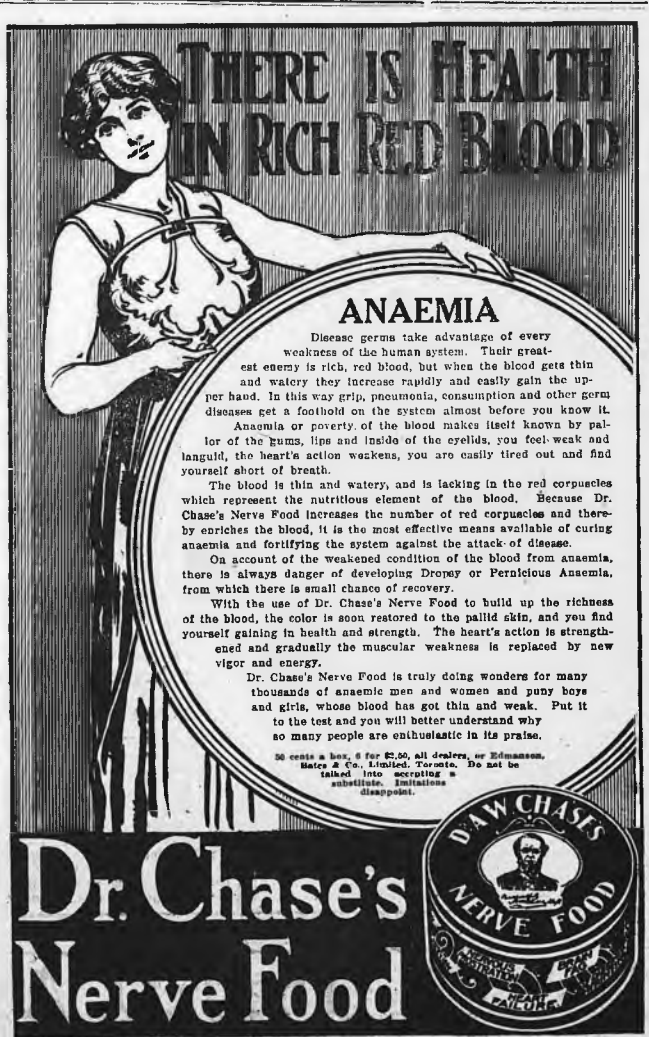
Presentations and Address at Ottewell Settlement.

On the evening of Tuesday the 28th of February, a very pleasant time was spent at the home of Mr. Geo. B. Ottewell, when Pte. Willie Benson, Pte. Wilfred Ottewell, Pte. Harold Miller, Pte. Sinclair Gibson, of Ottewell Settlement, at present with the Bruce batallion, were presented by the neighbours with beautiful wrist watches and an address. Percy Ottewell was also presented with an excellent fountain pen and address, Mr. J. H. Wilson presided and Mr. Stephen Ottewell made the presentation, the boys making suitable replies. Mr. Geo. Ottewell in a suitable address heartily welcomed all to his home.

Impromptu speeches were made by Mr A.J. Guest, and Mr. Stephen Ottewell. A very interesting letter from Richard Ottewell with the C. E.F. in France was read.

Some time was then spent in music and entertainment after which a very dainty tea was served, after ten the ladies organized a patriotic league. After singing the National Anthem all departed for their homes having spent a very enjoyable evening amidst a large gathering.

The following is the address to the boys.



To Pte. Willie Benson, Wilfred Ottewell, Harold Miller and Sinclair Gibson of the 160th Battalion.

We, your friends and neighbors take this opportunity of assembling here this evening to show in our own humble way some small measure of our appreciation of your loyal and prompt response to the call of our beloved King and Country.

You are departing from our midst for a time leaving us with emotions of regret mingled with admiration. You have realized the fact that you are about to defend, not only Canada and the Empire but our very civilization and the cause of the weak, and we know the Empire will have reason to be proud of you. Let us hope that this war may see the end of Prussianism with all its horrors

And now we ask you to accept of these wrist watches, not for their intrinsic value, but as a small token of the esteem in which you are held in this community. May they remind you of this settlement whether you be in Canada, England or on the far-off battlefields of Europe.

May God bless you and keep you and grant you a safe return to your homes when you have done your bit for King and Country.

MILLER LAKE

Mr. Malcolm Smith's friends here are very sorry to hear that he is not improving any, but we hope soon to hear that he will soon be well again.

Mr Rob Holmes who has been visiting his mother and brothers here went to his home in Southampton on Monday

Mr. Fred Thompson of Southampton, was a visitor here for a couple of days. Fred likes to make a trip to Miller Lake where he was once one of the largest timber owners, even if it is only to get an old horse we like to see Fred.

Mr. Dan McLennan of Stokes Bay was a visitor here and at Brinkmans Corners the latter part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. John CoClough left on Thursday for their new home in Clinton we all wish them well in their new home

Mrs. Seymour Hawke was over to Dyers Bay on Tuesday for a load of supplies and had a strange experience on the way home, the roads were very bad and when within a mile and a half from home the little mare stopped and appeared to be going to die Mrs. Hawke was alone and she let the mare stand thinking she would get better, but instead she quit breathing and appeared to be quite dead. Mrs Hawke was alone and it being dark could not unhitch her, so she left her and walked home. Next morning they came out to where the mare was supposed to be dead and to get someone to take in the load. When they got there the mare was busy browsing.

Mr. John Doyle was down to Wiarton on Thursday and got back on Sunday.

Mr. J. T. Rouse was a business visitor to Stokes Bay on Friday.

We have had no preacher at Miller Lake for five or six weeks, we must either be too good to need preaching or too bad to preach to.

Miss Ruth Armstrong has returned to Woodstock after a pleasant visit with her mother here.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Couch, Adamsville called on a number of the sick people in Mar Sunday.

Mr. W. Crow and little son, spent Sunday with his sister Mrs. Henry White

Two popular young couples have moved from Mar, namely Mr. and Mrs. R. Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. W. Hyatt the former to Scotch Corners and the latter to Colpoys, these young couples will be greatly missed from the neighborhood, but we hope to see them frequently in Mar.

There has been and still is a great deal of sickness in the settlement among the ailing ones are Mrs. Wier Sr. Messrs Matthew and Alex White Sr., Mr. Krug, councillor W. Wier, Henry White, Mr. Kay and W. H. Adams

Much sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. J.T. Bardley and family, in the loss of their little daughter "Ethel Laurier" who was laid to rest in Bayview cemetery last Tuesday week amid a profusion of flowers. All that medical skill and loving hands could do was done to stem the tide of death but the battle was to the great end and the little one succumbed to the grim reaper March 25th. The pall bearers were Willie Wier, Wilfred Wier, Gilles White and Malcolm White

The school bell is to toll for five minutes every morning this week for recruits. Hasn't Mar done her share yet, we think so and more in comparison with the rest of the township Just recently Willie White son of J.D. White and John and James Given sons of ex-reeve Given thus making two boys from both these homes to enlist and bringing the total number up to ten from this neighborhood and among these are the very flower of the young manhood from Mar.

A Good Example.

On Monday afternoon little four-year-old Tommy Bain walked into the recruiting office here, and stepping up to Capt. Clark's desk said "I want to enlist."

This is recruiting week in Bruce, all over the County bells are ringing and whistles blowing for five minutes every morning, commencing at nine o'clock, calling the young men to the colors, and is there a man in the County of Bruce who would stand back and see a four-year-old child offer his services for King and Country and not step forward to take the child's place

Albemarle Council

Colpoys Bay, April 8th 1916

Albemarle Council met on the above date pursuant to adjournment of last meeting to arrange the road-work system and for general business: All members present except Mr. Wier who is still seriously ill; minutes of last meeting read and approved,

Adams and Craig:—

That the minutes of last meeting as now read be adopted cd

Couch and Craig:—

That this Council sincerely regret to learn of the continued illness of our Fellow Councillor Mr. Wm. Wier, and we very much desire to extend to him our sincere sympathy in his severe illness. It was thought at last session of Council he would now be fully recovered, but in this we are dissappointed. However although his recovery has been delayed, yet we now sincerely trust his usual good health will soon be restored. Cd.

Couch and Adams;—

That a rebate of Two dollars be made (the taxes due) on East 10 acres of Lot 30, Con.7 E.B.R. for the year 1915 as this has been held as church property for about five months of the year 1915 and is therefore legally entitled to be exempt from taxes for that period. cd

Mr. Carver then presented his report as to the Treasurer's Securities to the Council, which was as follows

To the Municipal Council of Albemarle,

Gentlemen;—

I have examined the Treasurers of Albemarle securities and I find that Messers, Jas. Brown, Alfred Farrow and Joseph B. Farrow stand as securities on the Treasurers Bond for Four Thousand dollars and that their standing is perfectly satisfactory.

(Sgnd) E. A. Carver, Auditor

Craig and Adams;—

That this Council do now adjourn to meet again on the 27th day of May as a Court of Revision and general business cd

Thos. Coveney, Clerk

A Dollar Weekly Passing

(The Farmer's Sun)

The local newspaper in the smaller communities throughout Ontario and in the other provinces as well have found it necessary to raise their subscription price from one dollar to($1.50)a year.

It is a universal failing of publishers to hesitate about raising their price to the subscribers or to the advertisers. Probably there is no class of men contributing to the needs of the people of Canada who are content with such a meagre profit as the men who conduct newspaper. To be a successful editor requires many years of training, which,in other professions would secure handsome financial rewards. A publisher has a investment also, in most cases, greater than the average businessman. His plant depreciates more rapidly than any other we know of, and if for the expenditure of his time and energy. he gets a bare living, he is thought to be getting all he deserves. .

This probably accounts for the fact that the dollar paper has not been raised to $1.50 long ago But at last, the weekly publisher finds that he can carry the burden no longer. He has to pay more for his paper, for his ink, and in wages, which has skimmed the thin layer of cream off his milk and left him a diet which does not contain sufficient nutriment to keep his brain working sufficiently. With many a weekly publisher, it has become a question of getting more money from the subscribers he serves so earnestly, starving to death or finding a job in the munition factory. Some of them have enlisted. There are others too old to escape in that way. All of which explain the reason why the rural publisher have raised their prices.

ZION, AMABEL

Death of Miss Florence Hunter

It was with sincere regret that the citizens of Kemble learned of the death at the General and Marine Hospital, Owen Sound, Wednesday morning March 22nd, of Florence Soloua Hunter third daughter of Mr and Mrs. J. Chas. Hunter. Kemble after an illness of three weeks with appendicital abcess and operation she passed peaceful away.

Deceased was born in Meaford fifteen years and five months ago. She was a regular attendant of Wolsley Methodist church, also a member of the choir, and her cherry, willing disposition made her beloved by all. A very promising young life plucked like a rose in bud, as a scholar of Wolesley school she will be very much missed by her schoolmates, some of whom were pallbearer's.

Rev. A. H. Wallis conducted the service at the house after which her remains were laid to rest in Greenwood Cemetery, Owen Sound, on Friday March 24th. Many floral tributes were sent, one from her Sunday school, Kemble. Her parents four sisters and three brothers survive, all at home but one sister, Mrs. Livingston Huff, Hepworth.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community in the loss they have sustained.

The Bruce Figures.

Several Townships Were Practically Unanimous For Prohibition in Recent Canvass.

Mr L. C. Benton, County President of the Citizens Committee of One Hundred, gives some interesting information in a circular letter addressed to the members of his committee throughout the County. Mr Benton figures that 74½ per cent of the electors signed the petition which he regards as most satisfactory, considering the time of year at which the canvass was made. Based on the number of votes polled in the last Provincial election 103 per cent of the electors of Kincardine Tp signed (surely a record), 101 per cent from Amabel Tp., the same from Bruce Tp. and 100 per cen from Saugeen. Wiarton leads the towns with 89 per cent Teeswater heads the villages with 90 per cent, closely followed by Lucknow 87 per cent, Port Elgin and Tiverton 86, Tara 85 and Paisley 84. Besides the regular voters, no less than 10,406 women and youths signed the supplementary petition which was not counted in the percentages above.

Fined $300 and costs

It was a heavy touch, but it could have been $500 had the magistrate so decreed. It was Joe Currie, liveryman, who was asked to put his hand into his dip and hand over the coin, and the reason was Joe was charged with having sold a bottle of whiskey to Biscuits West and from its contents he and Louie Plante had a toot. There was quite a trial, the Council Chamber was packed. Inspector Rainey was there to press the case for conviction and Mr J. C. Moore defended the accused. The case was heard by the Police Magistrate and Mayor Baines. Louie Plante swore that he saw West go into Curries office, and there saw Currie hand him the bottle, and afterwards saw him pay Currie $1.50 for the same on the street. His evidence was regarded as straight by the court. Biscuits West, however, swore that he found the bottle in Currie's office, and Currie did not know that there was any bottle in his office at all. He admitted that West had given him $1.50 but it was on a livery bill which he owed him. Plant swore one thing, West swore another, and Currie swore that he did not sell the grog. However there was sufficient corroborative evidence to warrant a conviction and the Court found Currie guilty

Are Weekly Paper Ads Read?

(The Dry Goods Review)

On several occasions lately merchants have asserted with some force, that they had given up advertising in their local weekly papers as no one ever read the ads. They knew because they had tried newspaper advertising without results. Daily ads. were all right, they admitted, judging by the continuous performances of some merchants but the weekly was not in their class.

And yet for all this claim coming from many parts of Canada, The Dry Good Review is disposed to take issue from many examples besides the Owen Sound one cited in this issue. We believe the merchant himself is to blame more than the paper or its readers. We have one town in mind where the whole advertising section of the paper looks dead, no more interesting than so much plate, fill up matter. The ads run week after week without a change and whenever they are altered they are filled with generalities, such as "See our new dress goods, our latest novelties in such-and-such our Spring millinery"—dead, dead, dead Not a price, not a line of description of the individual lines, nothing to show why they are worthy of the public's inspection and purchase, nothing better or more inspiring in fact than if we should read; "Jones Bros., we keep dry goods."

Good ads. have a definite news value that is appreciated by a newspaper as well as its readers. We have talked to newspaper proprietors of dailies, as well as weeklies, who value a live dry goods ad. on their page as highly as news. We have heard of papers that have out their rates—almost offered free space—to live dry goods stores, to make certain that their daily announcements would appear in their paper as well as in the rival one.

If a merchant finds these "dead" ads. in his weekly paper he should not only bring his own up to the modern standard demanded by wor man, but induce other local merchants,—even rivals—to get life into theirs, and line up the newspaperman,—who may be nodding himself—to do the same. The application of some galvanizing force should reverse your opinion on the value of weekly paper advertising.

Tara

The improvements at the Post Office have been taking place this week. The shop recently occupied by Mr. Biggs as a barber shop has been added to the Post Office, the partition taken down and it now becomes the business part of the office, with the rural mail delivery at the rear. The general waiting room has been increased in size and now leaves ample room for the public. The renovating of the premises is still going on which includes graining, modelling, painting and decorating and when completed Tara's Post Office will be a big improvement on the old one. Postmaster Young will much more pleasure in doing his work and the public will appreciate the better accommodation. The improvements are being carried through by Mr. Jas. A. McDonald the owner of the block.

Sergt. Milton Aiken, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Aiken, of Allenford, who has spent the past year in the trenches in Flanders, is returning home and will take a commission in the Bruce Battalion with the machine gun section. Serg. Aiken has had considerable experience on the battle front which will be of great advantage in instructing the machine gun sections of the 160th. His father we are sorry to report is in very poor health. Sergt. Aiken will be welcomed home by his many friends.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pains. But the Trouble Lies in the Blood

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The change from mild to cold, the raw, damp winds start the aches and twinges, and in the more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism. The trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather that merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The painkillers, liniments and rubbing may give temporary relief, but cannot possibly cure the trouble. The sufferer is only wasting time and money with this kind of treatment and all the time the trouble is becoming more deeply rooted—harder to cure. There is just one speedy cure for rheumatism—Dr. Williams Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, acid tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of the rheumatism. Here is strong proof of the above statement. Mr. Michael Personage, Fenelon, Man., says:—"My mother suffered several years with rheumatism. We tried a number of remedies but they all failed to cure. Then we got Dr. Williams Pink Pills and after using them for some time she was completely cured and has no sign of the trouble since."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Southampton

Mr. John (Moore) McIver left last Monday for Fort William, where he again takes charge of of the tug Welcome, belonging to the Central Contracting Co. The tug is used for towing pulpwood.

Dr. McLeod is still at Alexandria, Egypt, and is getting along well. He enlisted for one year, but will probably see the war through.

Mr. Fred Thompson is just starting up his sawmill this week. The war has caused considerable depression in lumber business and Mr. Thompson has secured a smaller quantity of logs this season than usual. Mr. Harry McHarty who has been Mr. Thompson's right hand man and before that with the Goderich Lumber Co., in all a period of over twenty years, has resigned his position and is taking life easy just now. He has not decided as yet whether he will or, or whether he will locate here. His many friends here will be glad to see him take hold at something which will keep him with us.

Capt. Dugald McAuley, an old Southampton boy, and a resident of here up to about eighteen years ago, died at Winnipegosis, Man, on Feb. 26th 1916, after a brief illness. He was 56 years of age. His parents died when he was yet young and he made his home after with the late Donald McAuley's. He was one of the firm of McAuley & Logie, who were in the fish business many years, operating three tug. He was related to a large number of people in Southampton. He visited here for some weeks about a year ago. He was a member of the Southampton Masonic Lodge at the time of his death, and his funeral was conducted under the auspices of the Masons, and a very large number were present at the funeral from nearby points. Interment took place at Winnipegosis.

OWEN SOUND

When Charles Ellis, of Owen Sound, stepped off the C. P. R. noon train yesterday with a suit case in his hand he was confronted by License Inspector Beckett who forthwith seized the case, which was found to contain twelve bottles of whiskey. Ellis claimed that the liquor belonged to him and that Mr. Beckett had no right to seize it, but later in the day appeared at the inspector's office and stated that the case belonged to another person and that he was only acting the part of a "common carrier" in the case.

Mr. T. Findlay, Fifth Ave East, received a telegram from Ottawa this morning informing him that his son, Corporal Victor H. Findlay, of the Machine Gun Section of the 20th Battalion has been wounded, and is now in the hospital in France.

About ten o'clock on Sunday evening, Mr. James Cannon, the veteran clerk of the township of Sydenham, passed away at his home in Annan. He held the position of clerk for 25 years, resigning three years ago and has been living retired since then. He enjoyed fairly good health up till two or three months ago, but since then has been failing rapidly, and the end was not unexpected. Mr. Cannon was a Fenian Raid veteran, having been a member of Col. J. P. Telford's then Liental company formed at Lieth. At that time his father was major in the 31st Regt.

A letter received from Sergt. Milton Aiken received by his sister Mrs. D. Brass, on Saturday, states that he is coming home to take charge of the machine gun section of the 160th Bruce battalion. Sergt. Aiken has spent a year in the trenches in Flanders and has been through the thick of battle, receiving a slight wound and going back to the battle line on his recovery. His experience must be of immense advantage in instructing the new machine gun sections, and no doubt when he reaches his old home in Allenford he will make it possible to get to Owen Sound for a few days, and his friends in his old school town given a chance to welcome him back.

Mr Malcolm Reid, a well known and highly respected resident of St. Vincent, was fatally injured by falling off a horse he was riding along the seventh line of the township on Friday last. He was picked up unconscious by a neighbor, Mr. Joseph Matthews, and taken to his home, where he died on Saturday morning without regaining consciousness. The deceased had resided in St. Vincent since 1879 and was a progressive farmer and a successful raiser of livestock. He was superintendent of the Riverside Sunday School for upwards of ten years. Besides his widow there are left to mourn his loss three sons and four daughters, also one brother. His funeral, which took place to the Meaford cemetery, was largely attended.

At the annual meeting of the Baptist church last evening, an incident of special interest took place when Rev. Mr Mullowney was presented with a purse of gold and Mrs Mullowney with a basket of beautiful roses. Mr Mullowney leaves on Monday next for Toronto to take a course of instruction along military lines which will fit him for his duties when he goes overseas as chaplain. Mr Mullowney will be away for six weeks.

A dispatch to Mr Geo Blythe of Shallow Lake received today the regular sources states that his son Pte Geo (Bob) Blythe, of Shallow Lake had been killed in action on March 16th. He was a signaler with the 34th battalion, enlisting at Hepworth He was unmarried and was a popular young man about the village.

The steamer Soo City was sold by sheriffs sale on Wednesday to the trustees of the company which owned the vessel before the company which operated her last year purchased the steamer. The sale was made subject to mortgage and was practically to save the interests of the former owners. Just what the new owners will do has not been decided and Mr. Morley Lemon, who was one of the large stock holders of the old company, stated today that no definite arrangements had been made, no doubt if the vessel can be sold her new owners will probable dispose of her at the earliest possible moment.

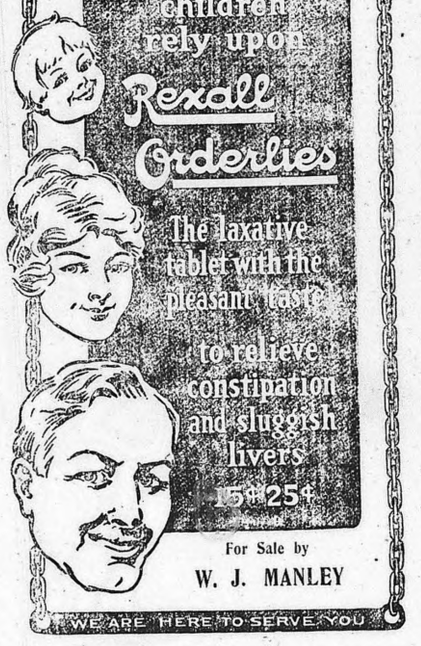
Misses L. Morrison, M. Logan, and E. Boyle attended the St. Patrick's concert in Lions Head, and reported a good time.

School being closed at Brinkman's corners, some of the pupils are attending our school, until a new teacher is secured.



Mr. and Mrs. C.H. Barnard of Owen Sound, Mrs. Hilditch of Lions Head Mr. and Mrs. W. Amos Lion Head, attended the funeral of A. Mathieson.

The death of Mr. Mathieson on March 11th, removed from our midst, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of our community. He had been failing very fast during the winter, but was confined to bed, only two weeks, retaining all his faculties until the last. Deceased was born in Pitchandlock, Scotland, Aug. 3rd 1834 and on June 12th 1858 was united in marriage to Miss Jean Stephen of Drumrossie, Inch., Scotland. In 1861 they sailed for Canada, being six weeks crossing the ocean. They settled at Salem, near Elora, when Mr. Mathieson was employed for fourteen years in Mr. Moffin's foundry. They afterwards moved to Holland and Lions Head, he having heard of land for sale on the peninsula, he with a number of others decided to come to this part and get homes for themselves. This was thirty-five years ago and Mr. Mathieson had lived here ever since, being one of the first settlers who often carried on their backs the necessaries of life, from Lions Head. Mr. Mathieson was a Presbyterian and before moving to Dyers Bay was an elder in the Knox church, Elora. He was a quiet industrious man, much attached to his home. He leaves to mourn his loss his widow and eight children which blessed their union, namely, William Mathieson Brandon Man. James Mathieson Wiarton, Charles at home, Mrs. G.S. Armstrong Edmonton, Mrs. Chas. Chamon Cordiva Man., Mrs. C. H. Barnard, Owen Sound, Mrs. W. Amos, Lions Head, and Mrs. A. M. Hilditch, Lions Head. The funeral took place on Thursday, March 16th to McVicar cemetery. Rev. R. Mercer officiating, assisted by Mr. John Hilditch, the pall bearers were Messrs. James Mathieson, John Tyndall, A. Wardrope, Will Lynch, Archie Amos, John Hilditch.

Childhood Constipation

Mrs. Andrew G. Lund, Hughendon Alta., writes:—"Two of my babies were very much troubled with constipation and I tried several remedies without success. # SALIENT IS GIVEN UP

French Withdraw to Make a Continuous Line at Verdun.

New Front at Bethincourt Withstands Furious Assault by Crown Prince's Forces—Evacuation of Bethincourt Has Effect of Flattening Salient on Western Bank of the Meuse—Germans Sought Weak Spot.

PARIS, April 10.—The village of Bethincourt forming the apex of the salient on the western bank of the Meuse, against which the Germans have been pounding for days with heavy artillery and with frequent infantry attacks, was evacuated by the French Saturday night, and Sunday the new line withstood the most furious assaults which have been made by the Crown Prince's army in many days.

As now established, the French line in this sector runs from the Avocourt redoubt along the wooded slopes to the west of Hill 304, follows the Forges creek to the northeast of Haucourt, and joins the positions already held to the south of the crossing of the Bethincourt-Esnes and Bethincourt-Chattancourt roads.

The evacuation of Bethincourt, in itself only a small, ruined village, has had the effect of flattening the point of the salient, although the successful holding by the French of the line on the Forges creek to the west of Bethincourt and the line just south of the village, leaves a still very pronounced salient projecting into the German lines, with the two very important hills, 304, east of Haucourt, and Le Mort Homme (Dead Man), south-east of Bethincourt, within it.

Bethincourt lies in the Forges valley at its juncture with a valley running into the Forges valley from the south, and was at the mercy of the German guns on the hills at three sides. The new French line skirts the higher ground to the south.

From the incomplete information now available it seems probable that the violent German attack on the western side of the river Sunday made simultaneously with the two extremely heavy assaults on the eastern bank, thus practically covering the whole Verdun front, was undertaken by the Germans as soon as they learned of the withdrawal from Bethincourt in the hope of finding the new French line in this sector not yet strong enough to resist them. The evacuation of Bethincourt has been regarded by military experts for some days as a military necessity, since it was evident that the group of ruins representing the village was so situated as to make it practically untenable under the protracted fire of the German heavy artillery. The German commanders, anticipating the withdrawal, appear to have timed their attack, which might almost be called a general assault on the Verdun front, to coincide with the evacuation. But the evacuation had been safely completed in the night, and the troops were waiting in the new trenches at the rear when the attack finally was made Sunday morning.

Sunday's attack was centred against two sectors on the western bank of the river, one extending from the Bois Avocourt to the Forges stream, and the other from Le Mort Homme to Cumieres.

Details of the fighting have not yet been received, but the official announcement indicates that it was of a most violent character.

ALIENS TO AID FARMERS.

Arrangements Are Made for Temporary Release of Prisoners.

WINNIPEG, April 10.—A meeting in connection with the proposal to release a large number of interned aliens from detention camps in order that they may aid farmers in the operations of the present year was held on Saturday afternoon in the office of the Commissioner of Immigration, J. Bruce Walker. Those present at the conference included Major-General Sir William D. Otter, K.C., who is in general charge of the detention camps of the Dominion; officials of the C.P.R., C.N.R., Bankers' Association, and Grain Growers' Association.

It was arranged that as the list of available men in the camp at Brandon was exhausted, special trains would be operated from Cochrane west, and if necessary 2,000 men would be brought from the camps near that place to Brandon. The cost of this transportation may be borne by the Federal Government.

Farmers using this labor will be required to take each man for a period of seven months, to pay the current rate of wages, and to report once a month to the commandant of the camp.

Only One Crater Retaken.

LONDON, April 10.—The three-day assault by the Germans against the positions captured from them by the British on March 27 did not profit the enemy much. Sir Douglas Haig reports under date of Sunday: "At St. Eloi our troops hold a considerable portion of the ground gained March 27, including three out of four of the main line craters."

The British communique also reports the capture of a hostile Fokker monoplane. The pilot, who was unwounded, was made prisoner.

Treason Charge Made.

AMSTERDAM, April 10—Director Corchetaux, of the St. Louis Church School, and a teacher named Trevoux have been arrested for treason, according to a Brussels despatch. They are charged with assisting young Belgians to join the army.

Teuton U-Boat Rammed by Russian.

PETROGRAD, April 10.—The torpedo-boat destroyer Strogi has rammed an enemy submarine near the spot where the hospital ship Portugal was sunk (in the Black Sea), according to the official announcement last night.

STFFRAGE ROWS AGAIN.

Sylvia Pankhurst Endeavors to Air Another Grievance.

LONDON, April 10.—London witnessed yesterday one of the old "suffrage rows" so familiar before the war. Trafalgar Square, the scene of such memorable events as the arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst several years ago, was again the centre of the fireworks yesterday.

Sylvia Pankhurst's east-end suffrage organization had announced a meeting of protest against the Defence of the Realm, Military Service and Munitions Acts. A large mixed crowd of soldiers and civilians gathered on the square long before the hour of the meeting. When the procession finally arrived, the paraders were greeted by derisive shouts, groans, and laughter. Red and green banners whipped jubilantly into the air by the marchers were torn to shreds.

The police were forced to make a way for the demonstrators, who included several women speakers who clambered for the plinth of Nelson's column. Sylvia Pankhurst had hardly opened the show when a bag of yellow powder burst on her head. She went to the other side of the plinth, but was similarly greeted there. Then a fusillade of bags with red and yellow powder burst upon the woman, smothering their hair and clothes.

The police prevented the crowd from rushing the plinth, but were powerless. A man broke through the police line and clambered to the plinth and then walked among the speakers calmly emptying his powder bags on their heads. Two policemen tried to capture him. The police line was broken and there ensued a series of scuffles around and upon the plinth of the Nelson column.

Finally two soldiers fell off the plinth dragging one of the women speakers along. This ended the meeting. The militants vanished and soldiers and others swarmed upon the plinth starting to sing "God Save the King." Thousands among the crowd joined and the row was over.

TURKS ON OFFENSIVE.

They Have Made Three Attacks Along Shore of Black Sea.

LONDON, April 10.—Considerable fighting between the Turks and the Russians has taken place in the Black Sea littoral, with the Turks the aggressors. Three attacks against the Russian entrenchments on the right bank of the Karadere were without result. The Russians are pushing their advance against the Ottomans in the upper Tchoruk River region.

The situation with Grand Duke Nicholas' army in Armenia remains somewhat obscure. It seems probable, in view of semi-official statements issued in Petrograd, that large Turkish reinforcements have reached both Armenia and the Bagdad district and that the Russian advance has been distinctly slowed up. Two new divisions of Ottoman troops appeared last week east of Trebizond, on the Black Sea coast, and an action of some importance occurred about 30 miles from the port, in which the Turks were assisted by cruiser and destroyer squadron. These new units were recognized as having opposed the Allies at the Dardanelles while the Gallipoli campaign was being prosecuted. It is known that after the withdrawal of the Anglo-French troops from Gallipoli the bulk of the army of defence was withdrawn for a period of rest, and that later it was sent to Aleppo and Nisibin. A part of it has reached the Black Sea littoral and the remainder seems to have arrived east of Bagdad, where it will meet the Russians coming out of the passes from Kermanshah. The main Russian army, which passed through Erzerum, remains in the vicinity of Erzingan.

Prison for Attempt to Rob.

MONTREAL, April 10.—Thomas Eagan, Jr., and Thomas Murphy, St. John, N.B., were this morning sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary by Judge Lanctot for attempting to rob Joseph Bilodeau, Rochester, N.H. Detectives O'Donell and Labine saw Eagan, Murphy, and Bilodeau leaving the rounds of the hotels Saturday morning, and suspecting that an attempt would be made to rob Bilodeau, followed the trio all day. At night in an alley off Cathedral street, Eagan and Murphy turned on Bilodeau, and the officers promptly arrested them. Bilodeau said he had $600 and a ticket to Saskatchewan.

Striking at Riga.

BERLIN, April 10.—A successful attack by four German seaplanes on a Russian aviation station on Oesel Island, at the entrance to the Gulf of Riga, is announced in an official statement yesterday by the chief of the Admiralty staff. The statement says:

"On April 8 four naval planes attacked the Russian aerodrome at Pappenaholm, near Kielkond, on Oesel Island. Twenty bombs were dropped. Two enemy aeroplanes which rose were forced to descend. In spite of heavy anti-aircraft fire our aeroplanes returned safely."

Flood in Minneapolis.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 10.—With the breaking of an ice-jam, behind which was 1,000,000 feet of logs, at Elk River, thirty-five miles north of here, a six-foot wall of water was released, which reached Minneapolis early Sunday morning. Four hundred persons were rescued from the flats in Minneapolis by the police.

Aged Man Died of Fright.

THREE RIVERS, Que., April 10.—Mr. Amedee Jacques, aged 81, living with his nephew, Mr. Prime Sarrasin, merchant on Badeau street, whose he had a good view of a fire raging on Platon street: Sunday morning, died of fright. The fire destroyed two brick blocks with a loss of $75,000.

TO DRIVE ON DVINA?

Germans Said to Be Planning an Eastern Offensive.

Large Movement of Troops Towards Bases in Courland is Reported from the Russian Front, and Enemy Generals Are Believed to Be Waiting for Hardening of Ground—First Aim is the Riga Railway.

LONDON, April 10.—Despatches from Petrograd forecast a serious German effort in Courland. Large troop movements have been noticed by Russian aviators—a constant stream of trains bound for the Courland bases, accompanied by big parks of new artillery. These forecasts are regarded as more than plausible because of the situation of the German armies on the Russian front.

No line in the east less easily defended could have been selected by the German staff than the one occupied by the German armies from the Gulf of Riga to Volhynia. Except for the field railways built since their offensive was stopped last September, the entire line from Dvinsk to the Galician frontier is without railway support. The nearest substantial defensive line in the rear is that of Brest-Litovsk, 75 miles away. Almost in sight of the trench line, however, is the Riga-Dvinsk-Rovno railroad. By it, cut only from Vilna to Lida, Russian troops and supplies can be moved from one end of the front to the other wherever danger threatens. Nowhere is the Russian army more than a day's march from this element of support. Pushed behind the railway the Russian forces would be in as difficult a position as the Germans are to-day, for the closest lateral rail line would be more than 150 miles in their rear. Every advantage of terrain at present lies with the Russians. Furthermore, they are nearer to their arsenals and their main supply depots than the Germans, so that in any general engagement the odds are strongly in their favor. This fact, however, cannot be expected to deter the German command from seeking a decision.

It is obvious, despite their initial handicap, that for a successful defence of their eastern line the Germans must obtain control of Riga-Rovno railway. This means the capture of Riga, Dvinsk, and Minsk. It is regarded as certain, then, that in the next few weeks Field Marshal von Hindenburg will make another and more determined effort to cover the ten and twenty miles that separate him from comparatively easy defensive positions. The thrust is not expected for at least three weeks, for the terrain will not be in condition for the manoeuvring of an army before that time. The ice has broken up in the Dvina River already, however, and advices from Petrograd indicate that in a little more than a fortnight the ground will have dried out sufficiently to permit troop movements.

MINOR ENGAGEMENTS ONLY

Enemy in Balkans Evidently Preparing for an Offensive.

PARIS, April 10.—Shots were exchanged by French and German cavalry detachments along the Macedonian front Saturday, says a Havas despatch from Salonica yesterday. A few men were killed and others wounded.

German field pieces fired on French trenches along the front without effect, according to the correspondent, who says that the cannonading recently reported has diminished in intensity in most sectors, but that minor engagements are taking place all along the front from Gievgeli to Doiran. Railway communication between Bulgaria and Greece, he adds, has been suspended because of a movement of Bulgarian troops.

An Athens correspondent announces that preparations are being made by the Germans and Bulgarians against the allied positions at Salonica. Two German regiments have been transferred from Nish to Monastir. The Bulgarians are building roads for artillery. A squadron of German cavalry and a detachment of infantry occupied the heights commanding the village of Poteros, but the French drove them out after a sharp encounter.

Children Burned to Death.

LONDON, April 10.—Five child performers were burned to death on the stage of the Garrick Theatre, at Hereford, Friday night. It was a children's entertainment to provide comforts for the soldiers. The curtain fell on the final scene and the audience was departing, when the cry of "Fire!!" was raised. A panic ensued. Many in the audience were crushed, but none seriously injured. The fire was confined to the stage, where the performers were wearing dresses covered with cotton wool for a snow scene. The flames spread furiously and the children ran frantically about the stage with their garments on fire.

Maxim Gorky Very Ill.

LONDON, April 10.—A despatch to The Exchange Telegraph from Amsterdam says that reports reaching Holland through Berlin are to the effect that Maxim Gorky, the Russian author, is suffering from pneumonia at Moscow. His condition is declared to be alarming.

Prince Sent to Austrian Resort.

BERLIN, April 10.—The ill-health of Prince Mirko of Montenegro, second son of King Nicholas, in Vienna, on his way to an Austrian health resort, was announced Sunday by the Overseas News Agency.

Austrian Transport Sunk.

PARIS, April 10.—It was officially announced Saturday that a French submarine has sunk an Austrian transport in the Adriatic.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. Free from harmful drugs.

Great Success at Lions Head.

Lieut. Pettigrew has certainly made a success of recruiting at Lions Head. Kitchener will take him by the hand and shake. On Tuesday morning he had 72 men on duty. A number far in excess of what anyone had ever thought would be raised at Lions Head, and as a bit of work it is second to none in Bruce County.

Dangerous Condition Relieved Just In Time By "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. F. J. CAVEEN

632 Gerrard St. East, Toronto.,

For two years, I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas In The Stomach. It afterwards attacked my Heart, and I had pains all over the body, so I could hardly move around. I tried all kinds of medicines but none of them did me any good. At last, acting on the advice of a friend, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. I bought the first box last June, and now I am well, after using only three boxes. I recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to anyone suffering from Indigestion, no matter how acute". FRED J. CAVEEN.

Simple Indigestion often leads to Heart Attacks, Catarrh of the Stomach and constant distress of mind and body. If you are bothered with any Stomach Trouble, and especially if Constipation troubles you, take 'Fruit-a-tives'.

CARE OF LIVE STOCK.

Barns, Pens, and Yards Should Be Kept Clean and Sanitary.

It is a well known fact among successful live stock men that it is very important to keep clean the barns, pens, and yards where the animals are kept. What is the meaning of clean? Well, there are many conceptions of cleanliness. Many farmers think if they keep their barns and yards free from manure that they are clean. This is true to a certain extent, for it is important to keep the premises free from manure and other refuse. Others will hold that not only must the manure be removed, but the walls and ceilings of the barn must be kept free from cobwebs, dust and the like in order to have a clean barn, and that whitewashing once a year is necessary. When the various buildings about the farm are kept clean, not only are better homes provided for the stock, but work is easier and more inviting. Being clean is not a fad. It is a dollar and cents proposition.

It is well known now that most, if not all, diseases are caused by germs. Cattle cannot have tuberculosis unless exposed to tubercular bacteria, nor suffer from abortion unless infected with abortion germs, nor foot and mouth disease unless they come in contact with the bacteria which cause this disease. Hogs do not have hog cholera unless they are exposed to the germ that produces this disease. So it is with the many other diseases which claim our live stock. It is plain that one of the factors in keeping live stock healthy is to destroy the bacteria, and disinfectants will do this.

Prohibited Coffee Houses.

So many coffee houses sprang into existence in England during the reign of Charles II. that the entertaining belief that many political intrigues had their beginning in those places, issued an edict ordering them to be closed. In this proclamation the following words occurred: "The retailing of coffee or tea might be an innocent trade, but it was said to nourish sedition, spread lies and scandalize great men. It might also be a common nuisance."—Exchange.

SELLING MILK.

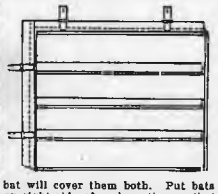
Dealing With the Consumer is R. R. Stevens' Method

"If we could only make a fair percentage of the retail price for our milk," many dairymen have been heard to remark, "we would be able to make that industry pay fairer returns for the immense amount of labor involved." When a farmer sees milk selling in the cities and towns for six to ten cents per quart, and his receipts allow him only about four cents, he is dissatisfied; but how to bridge the gulf between producer and consumer with only one profit seems beyond the average man's ability. Many, however, have attempted it, but nearly as many have failed. R. R. Stevens of Glenrae Dairy Farm, near Bowmanville, is one of the few dairymen in Ontario who is able to put his own products directly into the hands, or rather almost into the mouths, of the consumers. To-day Mr. Stevens owns a fine farm, splendid house and barns, and one of the best herds of twenty cows in the whole Province. He is able to sell the total output of milk from his herd, all the year round, for seven cents per quart. Every pound of grain and roughage he feeds to his cows and six horses is grown on the eighty-acre farm, only the bran and meal concentrates being purchased, says Gordon Furrow in The Toronto Globe.



This is what the average visitor to Glenrae Farm will find to-day, but let us go back a few years. The comfortable living Mr. Stevens is making now is the result of unceasing toil from his early manhood. Only in the last few years has his path begun to run smoothly, and should his attention even now be relaxed the old twists and bumps in his road to prosperity would at once reappear.

"When did you make a start in dairying?" I asked Mr. Stevens when visiting the farm a short time ago. "It was just after I was married," the owner replied. "My father-in-law presented us with a pure-bred Holstein, and practically every cow you see in front of you now is related to her. The animal was a good one, but, contrary to the usual heavy producer, it was hard to induce this animal to let down her milk. The only pure-bred Holstein bull at that time was several miles away, but, despite this inconvenience, we used that breed for this animal and her progeny exclusively. Gradually we built up a herd of from eighteen to twenty cows.

"We raise only about three of the best heifers every year; the others, including the bull calves, are disposed of to our neighbors. Another point in which we are particular is the testing of our herd for tuberculosis. This is done every spring."

A Durable Stack Cover.

A very durable stack cover can be made of boards in sections about four feet wide by six feet long. Place four boards one inch by four feet by six inches side by side and fasten together by braces. Paint joints on upper side and paint bats before covering the joints. Do not run bats way to the top, but run one bat along the top, extending over about two inches on half of them and put no bats on the other half, so that the bat will cover them both. Put bats on right side of each section so that it will cover the edge of next section. Place barn hasps on the bats so that they will fit staples on the companion section. Care should be taken to get these hasps and staples rightly located. These covers will be found to be very convenient to use as stack covers, covers for machinery, chick coops, pig shade, cattle shade, etc. Being light and movable, they can be put to a great number of uses and, being rigid, are not easily blown away, nor will they sag.—Farm Progress.

NEW SILAGE POINTERS.

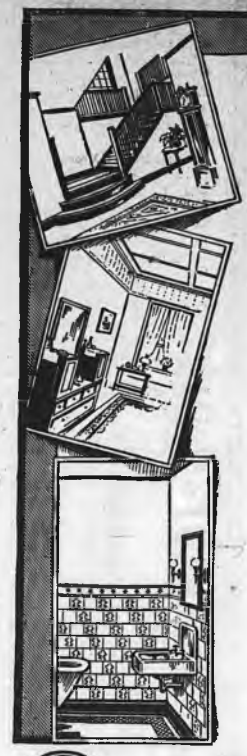
Both of these gases will smother a person, but they gradually disappear if the silo is well ventilated.

In a special research on the subject of silos and silage the Iowa station has found these illuminating facts on subjects supposed to be about exhausted:

The greener the corn is the more acid will develop in the silage. Most of the acid is formed in the first seven days, and at the end of three weeks fermentation is complete.

The gases which form in a silo are chiefly carbon dioxide and nitrogen, the latter forming in the largest quantity.



The kind of material a silo is made from has little effect on the quality of the silage so long as the silo is well made.

The temperature of silage in a wood stave silo, a hollow clay tile silo, and a solid concrete silo, is about the same, other things being equal.

A high degree of fermentation is not necessary for the production of good silage. Too high an acidity is harmful, and good silage has been made where the temperature did not exceed 91 degrees F.

A Good Silo.

The silo should be smooth on the inside and perpendicular from top to bottom. Uneven walls prevent the silage from settling evenly, all air is not excluded, and spoiled silage is certain. A good silo yields greater returns in proportion to cash than any other building on the farm.

Production and Thrift

"CANADA from her abundance can help supply the Empire's needs, and this must be a comforting thought for those upon whom the heavy burden of directing the Empire's affairs has been laid. Can ever no gain the course before the farmers of Canada is as clear as it was last year—they must produce abundantly in order to meet the demands that may be made and I believe this to be especially true in regard to live stock, the world's supply of which must be particularly affected in this vast struggle. Stress and strain may yet be in store for us all before this tragic conflict is over, but not one of us doubts the issue, and Canadians will do their duty in the highest sense of that great word."—HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

"MODERN war is made by resources, by money, by foodstuffs, as well as by men and by munitions. While war is our first business, it is the imperative duty of every man in Canada to produce all that he can, to work doubly hard while our soldiers are in the trenches, in order that the resources of the country may not only be conserved, but increased, for the great struggle that lies before us. 'Work and Save' is a good motto for War-time."—SIR THOMAS WHITE, Minister of Finance.

Chesley

Pte Walter Cole of the Mechanical Transport Corps another of Chesley's sons who belonged to the "Fighting First" returned to his home here on Monday somewhat unexpectedly. Nevertheless hurried preparations were made and a splendid turnout of citizens including the Mayor, Reeve and Councillors, awaited his arrival at the station. Ringing cheers greeted his appearance and a torchlight procession was formed and headed by the town band, escorted the returned hero to his home. No speeches were made it being understood that a formal welcome will be given shortly for which arrangements are being made. Walter joined the 4th. Brigade of the First Canadian Expeditionary Force at Quebec, and was placed hors de combat during the bombardment of a place near Ypres and has been an inmate of many hospitals in consequence. He is the oldest of our townsman Peter Cole's sons of warrior sons, and is a credit to his country.

Chesley's population is steadily growing. Assessor Kidd gives the figures on this year's roll, just completed, as 1971 an increase of seventy in twelve months.

Walkerton

The following residents of this County applied this week for naturalization papers:—Joseph Felsinger, Carrick, Chas. T. Knoepf, Carrick, Simon Scharbach, Cargill, Mary Tegler, Carrick. The following who have been residing in Canada since July 1, 1867 or before have taken the Oath of Allegiance;—Frederica Rosenau, Wm Millhausen, John F. Wilkinson, Peter Schneider of Carrick; Justus Holm, Sophia Siebalin, Christopher Gehlman, Mrs Edmonthe Glantz, of Walkerton.

Sergt. F. C. James, an expert architect and who with his son, Corp. Trieves James, has enlisted with the 160th Bruce Battalion, received an offer this week of $150 a month to return to his old job with a large architectural firm in Winnipeg. Sergt. James declined the tempting offer but stated that if the job were still open after the war was over, and he was still on top of the sod, that he would then consider the offer. Instead of trying to gold-line his trouser pockets the Sergeant is out doing his bit for the flag, which is the best antitheris of that Carrick farm lad who besides keeping certain of his sons home to work the farm, has hired others of them out to neighbouring planters, thus taking advantage of both the labor market and the high food rates to bulk up his bank account, while others go forward to keep the enemy from devastating his fields, ravishing his home and piddling his gold deposits. Verily if there is anything in the sin of ingratitude, some folks for the way they have acted this war, are destined for the warmest corner in that place where a snowball the size of Walkerton would not last ten seconds by the watch.

The Ontario Government has purchased a field ambulance costing $1700 from the proceeds realized by the sale of potatoes grown on the School Childrens War Plots. The Government furnished the seeds and the children raised and sold the potatoes. Of this amount Bruce county children sent through the Agricultural Dept. at Walkerton $165 towards the ambulance or nearly one tenth of the total sum contributed by the forty counties in Ontario. Bruce children headed the Province in this respect, we believe, as did also their elders in the matter of County recruiting.

Live hogs reached the sensational price of $19.50 per cwt, on the Walkerton market on Tuesday, breaking all previous records by a heavy margin. Where the flight of the pig will end few can predict but that it hasn't yet its limit is the belief of all.

Demand British-American Alliance

Mail and Empire

It cannot be said that the prospect of an alliance between the United States and Great Britain, with or without her present Allies, is a foremost topic in the United States, but more has been said in favor of such a move in the past six months than in the previous sixty years. Practical politicians have not yet taken hold of it, but publicists, university professors, authors and other experts are considering it, and the matter is of sufficient interest to command page articles in prominent American newspapers. Dr. Charles Eliot is in favor of an alliance, and has discussed it in the New York Times. In last Sunday's New York Tribune a page was devoted to a discussion of the matter by Dr. Joseph French Johnson, dean of the School of Commerce, New York University, and J. B. W. Gardiner, a military expert and formerly ad officer in the United States army. Both these writers were strongly in favor of an alliance between their country and Great Britain, for both economic and military reasons.

The War for Humanity.

Dean Johnson is an authority upon economics, but he was able to point out strong ethical reasons for the alliance. He said that Germany's submarine campaign was sufficient justification for the United States declaring war upon her. He said that the Allies were really fighting the battle for the United States, since they were trying to uphold the principles upon which the American Republic is founded. If they failed, the United States, as a speculative defender of these principles, would be the next victim of Germany, and "the world would be a pretty hard place to live in if Germany had her way." Discussing Washington's famous advice to the American people that they should not entangle themselves with the alliance in Europe, he pointed out that the world has greatly changed since then. The United States cannot dissociate itself from Europe. It is Europe's neighbor, and is vitally affected in every way by European events. If Washington were alive to-day he would, in the opinion of Dean Johnson, be in favor of a British American alliance.

Should Give Munitions.

His own idea was that the American Government ought to join with the Allies, and help them where they most needed help, namely by contributing munitions, instead of men and ships, which in his opinion were already available in sufficient quantities to win the war. He would be in favor of the United States contributing three or four billion dollars worth of shells to the Allies, which he believed would shorten the war by at least six months. He said:

"The Allies, it seems, are spending between $40,000,000 and $75,000,000 a day. By shortening the war six months we would effect an economic saving to Europe of at least $800,000,000. We would also be saving Europe the $2,000,000,000 or $3,000,000,000 that we spent for shells, so that the total saving would be at least $11,000,000,000 or $12,000,000,000.

"If the war goes on without us for its full period the money that Europe will have to borrow from us for construction will for the most part remain in Europe. Even if it is sent here, when it is gone there will be nothing left with which Europe can pay us bills to us, and therefore it will not buy. In any event, it will not not need to buy as much as formerly, for, with all of Europe without money and with enormous debts, the people will have to adopt a new standard of living in which luxuries will have no place. All life will be much simpler.

A Good Investment.

"If, however, we should enter the war we will save for this country our immense investment of $2,000,000,000 or even $3,000,000,000 and of the $9,000,000,000 that will be saved to Europe much will eventually come here. In other words by saving them this enormous sum we have increased their purchasing power so just that much. If we do not enter the war we are in grave danger of experiencing tariff discriminations on the part of the allies after the war is over that will very seriously affect our prosperity. Take England as an example. She has accumulated an enormous war debt, and, with the interest she will have to pay, it is extremely doubtful if she can continue to remain a free trade country. Some sort of import tax will almost an absolute necessity. What she will probably do is to levy such a tax with preferential provisions for her present allies. Moreover, before the war we were exporting very largely to England, whereas our imports because of our high tariff, were comparatively small. England paid for her goods partly by lending us money for our public and other improvements and partly by transporting our manufactures in English bottoms. After the war neither England nor any of the other nations now at war will have any money to lend. Consequently, not having anything to pay with, the volume of her purchases, or the volume of our exports to her, which means the same thing, will be very materially reduced."

For Monroe Doctrine.

Mr. Gardiner said that while Germany might be absolutely defeated, this would not mean that she would be deprived of her ability to make an attack upon the United States in the near future. Balked of her ambition to secure colonies at the expense of Britain and France and checked in her designs upon Asia Minor, she would naturally turn to South America. In Brazil she has already a powerful colony, which she might well desire to extend in defiance of the Monroe Doctrine. The United States would be absolutely helpless to maintain this doctrine. She has neither the army or navy to do so, and it would take her years to raise them. An alliance with Britain, however, would solve the problem. It would guarantee the Monroe Doctrine, and remove for generations the peril of attacks or invasion from any source.

"Some" Child

A weird story of a baby born at Fort William supposedly dumb, which spoke to prophecy just before it died, is now being told and vouched for by a doctor. The parents it seemed were worried because the child apparently made no sound from the time it was born, though the attending physician had hopes it would later recover. Late. What was the profound surprise of the mother one morning when she dropped and broke a plate to hear a voice behind her say "No. One." There was no one else in the room but the dumb baby. Worried about the matter, she called up the doctor. More to please her than anything else the doctor came and suggested that she break another plate in front of the baby. What was the consternation of both when the baby exclaimed: "No. Two; the great war will end in Oct 1919, and I will die to-night." The child died that night.

Self Poisoning by Food

The food which is taken to nourish the body and keep up vigor and strength becomes a poison to the system when digestion fails. You feel drowsy after meals, lose appetite, suffer from constipation, have pains in the bowels and through the body. Instead of being digested, the food ferments and gives rise to gas or wind on the stomach, which crowds about the heart, causing suffocating feelings and derangements of the heart's action.

Resort to aids to digestion cannot afford more than temporary relief, for the trouble is caused by torpid, sluggish action of the liver and bowels. These organs must be awakened so that they will filter the poisons from the blood and remove from the system the accumulating waste matter.

Here lies the cause of indigestion and dyspepsia, and neglect only leads to chronic and complicated derangements, which destroy all comfort and shorten life.

The ideal treatment for indigestion is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, because they promptly and positively remove the cause of trouble. Acting directly and specifically on the liver, kidneys and bowels, they cleanse the system of all impurities, and their occasional use keeps these filtering and excretory organs regular and active. The blood is purified, pains and aches disappear, and such derangements as indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache and kidney derangements are cured.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

ABRAHAM STILL DOING BUSINESS

Abraham Fair and Square

Not to be Chased out by any Opposition

WHEN we came to Wiarton we announced that we had come to stay. Some people got very busy and urged the council to class us as transient traders. This meant that we must pay a license of one hundred and fifty dollars to be allowed to do business Did these people think that would stop us selling you goods for less than you pay elsewhere? What nonsense! Because we stepped on his corns and touched his pocket, did Mr. Opposition think he could stop us doing business? We advertised a sale for fifteen days but since we have had to pay the license, we have decided to continue sale prices until further notice. We can afford to sell goods at these prices all the time and still get three square meals a day. We're doing business while the other fellow is worrying and we're going to do more. We've got to get that hundred and fifty back, and increased business must get it. We have decided to offer even greater bargains to the public (merchants excluded) to bring you here all the time. We must keep you coming right along, and let the opposition settle while he waits.

LISTEN! We have thousands and thousands of yards of that good Print, still ten cents a yard that you have been paying fifteen cents for up the street, and that White Cotton that you pay a shilling for still stays down at nine cents here. The fifteen cent Towelling will remain at ten and a half cents, till the hundred and fifty is made up. The twenty-five cent Table Oilcloth will remain at nineteen cents. The heavy shilling and fifteen cent Flannelette will not cost you more than ten cents and the good eighteen cent Shirtings will do business at just fourteen and a half cents. Men! you can always get McDonald and "T and B" Tobacco now at three for a quarter, and Old Chum, Senator and all other Tobacco the same way every day. Canned Corn and Peas will be sold all the time at this Transient Trader's Store, three for a quarter and all the good Soaps like Sunlight, Comfort, Sunny Monday, Borax Gold and Castile, will continue to be sold six for twenty-five cents, mix them up anyway you like. Rolled Oats stay at seven pounds for a quarter and Quaker and Tilson's Package Oats at Twenty-three cents. Ten cent Vanilla and Lemon Extracts must not cost you more than seven cents, and Heintz thirty-five cent Pickles must not be more than twenty-five a gallon. The ten cent Corn Starch will go down to eight, and and the thirty-five cent package of good old Tipperary Tea will now sell every day at thirty cents. The forty cent Bulk Tea will now be sold at thirty and the twenty cent Salmon will go down to fifteen cents. All The NEW SPRING SHOES will take a ride on the merry go round, and the pleasure shall be all yours. The Boy's Suits and Men's odd Pants will have a hand in this celebration and each department will work to keep the kettle Boiling at the Transient Trader's Store.

LIEUT.-COL. A. WEIR,
COMMANDING OFFICER

Concerning Col. Weir himself, the Toronto Star says, no two opinions are expressed; he is the right man in the right place. Take him how you will, he is a big man; one born to lead and to command: one who will always temper justice with mercy. For years he was commander of the 32nd Bruce Regiment. In that capacity he popularized himself to a remarkable degree among both officers and men. On the occasion of the visit of the then Duke and Duchess of York to Toronto in 1902, his battalion was one of the finest from outside the city. Shortly after his return on that occasion an enthusiastic admirer wrote of him: "If the Bruce boys ever march to battle they will ask no other leader than Col. Weir His very presence will ensure victory." Now the boys from Bruce are indeed girding themselves for battle—many of them being men who marched under Col. Weir ten to fifteen years ago; and under this leader of their choice they will march to victory or to death.

Letter From Dr. Hough

Canadian Cas'y Assembly Centre
11-12—Westbourne Gardens
Golkestone, Kent
March 27, 1916

Dear Logan;—

Well here is a go though a long time, I had expected as promised to have written before but outside of the first two weeks I have been very busy. As you can see by the heading my quarters are here of Medical Officer to a staff of about 300 men, and besides we are the centre of every man who returns from overseas I judge as to what to do with them either give one convalescent leave with special treatment and then them for return to work or send one to these places for a week and then send them back to Canada unfit for setvice any longer. We also arrange that in case of glass eyes, artificial limbs and certain dental work needed to arrange for this.

We are a very busy place and send out through our offices from 60 to 100 men every day and Sunday is almost as busy as any other day. We also are associated with what is called the Standing Medical Board who are in same block and they deal with every man and arrange as to what should be done, and what pension he should get and all such work. There are 5 doctors in it and it is some responsible job and means much to the Government. I have to do considerable work they assign to me in way of examining and reporting my opinion in these.

I was half sick of things at first as work was so trivial and then expected I have to ride horses, jump hurdles and ditches and without saddle and lastly without bridle, however, such I did not have to do as was to my delight made M. O. here and the first one as it is a new department, at first I was somewhat dubious as to difficulties that might arise but all that is past and I know for it has been said that I have the confidence of my brother officers and especially the commendation of my O. C. or Officer Commanding this department. He more than once volunteerek to ask that an assistant be sent me, but as expected heavy work to last but for a few weeks plugged on and now can see it slacking and some time for pleasure. As all go through my hands and have to examine each individual to see that he carries no disease or vermin to the convalescent homes. I certainly do get some sights in way of wrecks and shell, bullet, shrapnel wounds, but strange to say so far only one case of bayonet wound and that was an accident at trenches and not done by the enemy.

Folkestone where I am is a most beautiful spot, a great summer resort 30,000 population and in summer about 50000, 6 miles from celebrated Dover with its wonderful Dover Castle Queen Elizabeth's favorite home. Have been there and it is a sight to see and at present a military camp so to speak. It is said there are 7 miles of underground passages etc. it is from here that anti-aircraft guns are fired. We so far have escaped air raids why we cannot tell as harm on all sides of us seeing we are in Kent Co and so near France 28 miles Folkestone has two miles of beautiful Boulevard and Asphalt wide walks on edge of English Channel and about 200 ft in the air and railed by iron so as not to fall off.

May say that I had the good and bad fortune. hardly know which, to see at a distance the German raid on Kent Co. and Dover where much damage done. I saw the shells shot by an air craft gun explode in the air and for 20 minutes the noises continued and quite plain, many on the walkway saw it as it was about 2 p.m. also saw high up one of the raiders but we thought at first it was one of ours till we saw the white smoke when shells exploded. Thursday it was reported that several German submarines were off our harbor so Friday there were four of ours and for few days we have had off our shore 150 or more steam boats called Trawlers, which clear away ruins and protect large vessels. However, yesterday I saw it when on my walk from hotel to C C A C crowded with people that only a short time and it would be torpedoed, but such is warfare, and it is strange how little we think of it, yes though the hand of danger be over us how little we mind it. No one seems to have any fears, why. I do not know, but I, myself, feel the same way. Well I must close now by going into personal matters, as for instance one day a month or so ago, Major Fletcher called at my place of living so he and I then took the train for West Sandling camp five miles away to see Capt. Hay and Lt. Robt. Simmie and we certainly had a couple hours visit and chat. I thought this remarkable, Major Fletcher was here for a few weeks taking a special course where officers are sent when vacancies occur and you are lucky enough to get the chance. He, however, is back again to his place at Brainshott.

Last Sunday Chas, Dobson, who arrived last week at East Sandling 3 miles away called at my hotel and saw me and we spent an hour or so together. He looks well and he likes the game. I see every day or every second day Dr. Cliff Marshall, of Owen Sound, and who summers at Falls Island, Oliphant. He is a Capt. in the dental corp and is attached to barracks where Dr, Albert Fisher is medical officer.

Was hailed one day "Hello Hough." and here behold it was Dr. Murray. of Owen sound. who had only recently arrived from Canada. Sorry to say he is in hospital now suspicion diptheria I heard, but he is O. K. now.

Well, last but not least and to cap the climax. Malcolm McNeil at headquarters heard I was at C C A C so he called, but I was out however, that night about 9 I had occasion to go to see a sick officer at Burlington hotel and low and behold there was a sight, Mac McNeil. We talked till the wee hours together and next day together I took him to see Dr. A. J. Fisher

He left for Liverpool where his father would be and then for Canada and Bruce Battalion.

Sir Samuel Hughes is here at present but none too good in health.

Might say Dr. Hay was transferred about ten days ago to a convalescent home in Wokingham, Berkshire. Our movements are uncertain. apt to be changed any old time but I do sincerely hope and pray that I may have a long sojourn at Folkestone

My address to be permanant as all letters follow me as it is the medical centre.

Yours truly,
A. H. Hough

"ROTTEN FROM START TO FINISH." COUN. CRAIG'S OPINION ON ALBEMARLE ROAD SYSTEM

Purple Valley. April 17, 1916

Editor of The Echo :

Sir —Allow me space through your paper to pass a few remarks, for I can not help but make a reply to the item of last week which appeared in your columns and of which the heading was 'Albemarle Roads'. In the first place I would ask the writer of the article what the several plans of which he mentions were and none of which met with the approval of the majority of the council, and also what he calls a majority at the time referred to? The article, so it appears, looks very misleading to any ratepayer of the township, who reads it, but I suppose that is what it was intended for, but as one of the council I feel as I cannot let the matter referred to go without an explanation, and as the ratepayers have been very dissatisfied over the system of last year there are very few of them want it again this year

We do not want a chosen few to go on and do the work and other people pay for it in taxes.

In the council meeting referred to on April 8th I placed a motion before the board for a few changes in the road system, and Mr. Adams was strongly in favor of the same, I will only mention a few of them just now. The first was that the inspector, Mr Bell, be dismissed; and the other, that each and every ratepayer have the privilege of performing his full amount of statute labor. When the motion was read neither the Reeve nor Mr. Couch gave it consideration. but strongly opposed the dismissing of Mr. Bell, and after a good deal of discussion the Reeve suggested Mr. R. Forbes, but Mr. Adams and myself opposed appointing any inspector, so that is how the majority of the Albemarle council adjourned without taking any action.

I might add that the road system as carried out last year was rotten from start to finish, and the state of our roads to-day go to prove it, and as to any improvement in our road system neither the Reeve nor Mr. Couch offered the first hint or suggestion for any change on how to improve or benefit the same at the meeting of last council.

Thanking you for space in your columns,

Yours respectfully,
Charles J. Craig.

At Hymen's Altar

Pinnell—Dobson

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of the brides parents on April 12th when Georgina May, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs J. W. Dobson, was united in marriage to William John Pinnell, only son of Mr and Mrs H. H. Pinnell of Teeswater.

The ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreens and Union Jacks, by the Rev. Mr Henderson of Hanover.

The bride was dressed in silk embroidered voile, with a veil of silk net caught up with orange blossoms and carried a boquet of white carnations. Private George Bennett assisted the groom.

As the bride entered the room leaning on the arm of her father, Miss Dorothea, sister of the bride played the wedding march.

After the signing of the register the guests sat down to a dainty dinner. The numerous presents showed the esteem in which the bride and groom are held. After the wedding Mr and Mrs Pinnell left on the 2.05 train for a short trip to Hanover, London and other points, the bride travelling in a suit of navy blue serge with hat to match.

Death of Malcolm Smith.

After an illness of two months Malcolm Smith passed away at 8 o'clock on Tuesday at his home in Stokes Bay. He was born in Lewis Island, Scotland, 68 years ago, coming to Canada when very young and settling in Goderich. Thirty eight years ago he came to Lindsay Township and had resided here since that time. He was honest and upright and was well respected by all who knew him.

He was an adherent of the Presbyterian church. He died with the comforting assurance that he had his peace made with God. He leaves a widow, four sons and two daughters, Roderick and Daniel with the 160th Bruce Batt., Malcolm and Adam and Misses Flora and Margaret at home. The funeral took place on Thursday to Stokes Bay cemetery.

Tara

The death occurred at his home on Con. 8, Arran, on Tuesday, of William Walker at the age of 70 years. Early in the winter he contracted a severe cold which eventually affected his heart. He was born in Manvers township, county of Durham, Ont., and when 10 years of age moved to Holland Township with his parents. In 1871 he married Margaret Colvin and in 1886 they moved to Arran Tp. settling on lot 28, con. 8, where they have since resided. His wife and two sons, Miller Alfred and William Wilbert both at home, along with two bro[illegible] and Alex. of Inverm[illegible], survive. The funeral was held this afternoon to Tara cemetery.

We regret that it is our duty this week to chronicle the death of a former well-known and popular Tara girl in the person of Mrs. W. R. Peachey (nee Nellie Hilburn). Deceased suffered from lung trouble and died in St. Francis General Hospital, at Smiths Falls, on Thursday, April 6th. She was a daughter of the late W. R. Hilburn, of Tara, and married Mr. W. R. Peachey, who died only six months ago. She was in her 35th years. One brother, Ross, of Prescott, survives. The funeral was held on Saturday last, the remains being laid to rest beside her husband at Arnprior. Mrs. Peachey's many friends here sincerely regret her early demise.

Captain Danard and his detachment here were on a recruiting expedition in this vicinity all last week, and when they visited a farmer's house near Marmion to canvass the boys they were informed that the boys were in the barn. A careful search of the premises was made but nobody could be found until one of the soldiers decided to search the mow and there underneath the straw were the two young men in hiding. It is needless to say that no recruits were got at that place.

OWEN SOUND

The weather conditions on Saturday were favorable for out-door selling and buying, and consequently a good forenoon's business was done at the market. The fact that grain dealings were light had no appreciable effect upon the attendance of those who usually turn out to market to purchase produce, poultry etc. Everything in the way of edible to suit ready purchasers, and much more would have been disposed of had the offerings been equal to the demand.

There was nothing doing in wheat, not a single load coming in. The price was down to ninety cents and the farmers didn't think it worth while to draw it to town for that figure. Other grains were firm at the following prices: Barley, 58 to 60c; oats, 42 to 43c; peas $1 50 to $1.60; buckwheat 65 to 70c. Poultry was practically nil, only a few chickens being offered and selling from 20 to 22c a pound. Eggs went mostly at 20c but a few sales were made at 22c. Butter experienced a slight drop, the ruling price being 30c, though as high as 32c was paid in a few instances.

The people in this part of the country have a special interest in John Wesley Allison, the Yankee promoter, who has been in the limelight at Ottawa in connection with the graft charges in connection with munition work. This Prince of Promoters played his game over at Collingwood where he organized the "Cramp Steel Company" about twelve years ago. He played the Cramp name very strongly and the natural assumption was that the big shipbuilders of Philadelphia were behind the project whereas, the Cramp name was only a poor namesake of the great Cramp family. A large amount of stock was sold and the municipality stuck for a good deal of bonus but the plant was never operated until recently it was taken over by the Wm Kennedy and Sons, Ltd., of Owen Sound. The Kennedys have been fitting out this plant for several months and it is now running on munition work. Allison's Collingwood proposition has always been regarded as simply a bonus-getting scheme but it is now hoped that with practical business men at its head it will be turned to good account.

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

In the Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine

One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring. These prove that the long indoor life of winter has had its effect upon the blood, and that a tonic medicine is needed to put it right. Indeed there are few people who do not need a tonic at this season. Bad blood does not merely show itself in disfiguring eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite and a desire to avoid exertion. You can not cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines—you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams's Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving and re-storing powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired, ailing men, women and children. If you are out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits, and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A commuter told this one on the train. He said it happened in his own family during the recent cold spell; but we strongly suspect him of prevarication. The commuter has no furnace in his home and his Swedish girl complained of feeling cold all night. She was told by her mistress to take an iron to bed with her to warm it. In the morning Mrs. Commuter asked Lena how it worked. "Pooty good," she said, "Ay had it almost warm by morning."

"Waiter, have you forgotten me?"
"No, sir, not yet, sir."

"Wanted—Girl; farmhouse; last lived two years."

"Her face is her fortune."
"But you can't draw on that."
"Why? She paints on it."

160th Bruce Regiment Will be Mobolized in Walkerton

(The Telescope)

Business Men Raise $600 in Five Minutes

Towards Expense of Sanatary Arrangements and Fixing Up Buildings—Council Will Put Up $600 00 and Citizens a Like Amount—Entire Battalion to be Here May 1 to May 20

For three weeks, May 1 to May 20 and possibly a few days longer, the entire 160th Bruce Battalion will be quartered in Walkerton. The various detachments now located at various points will shortly be headed towards the County Town and will receive their first training as a battalion here before leaving for the larger camp at London for their summer training.

This information was conveyed to Lt. Col. Weir and the officers of the battalion here by the D. G. C. Col. Hodgins on the occasion of his visit here last week.

The good news was quite unexpected. Everything that could be done to have the Battalion mobilize in the County, had been done. The deputation which waited on the military authorities at London received no encouragement and until Col. Hodgins' visit here last week, it was thought that there was little hope that the Battalion would be mobolized here at all. It is understood that some other towns in the County wanted to bid but as Walkerton is ready and anxious to do all that can be done to make suitable arrangements here, it is now settled that Walkerton will continue to be headquarters as long as the Batt stays in the County.

At a meeting held at the Armory on Monday afternoon, Major Moffat outlined to the business men of the town the arrangements that the Battalion is making for the mobilization, and what was expected of the town.

Two hundred and eighty men are now billeted in private houses. The remaining thousand or more men will be fed at the skating rink and curling rink.

Sleeping accommodation will be arranged for them somewhat as follows—Station Hotel 100 men. Quarters over Merchants Bank, 100 men. Rooms over S. A. Rifle and Co's 30; Methodist basement, 100; Presbyterian basement 120, Saddlery Hardware, 80; Orange Hall 30 Biscuit Factory, 100. Rooms over Fraser studio 50; over McBurney's 25; Business College 60; School Building at rear of Armouries, 120' Young's Hall 30.

Major Moffat stated that the Fair Grounds would be sufficient for drill grounds for the Battalion while here. The expenditure which the town was asked to contribute towards, was for the procuring of crude lumber for tables and benches at the rinks necessary fixing of buildings, equipment for shower baths, and sanitary arrangements totalling from $1,000 to $1,200.

Everybody present was desirous of heartily co-operating with the officers of the Battalion, and when the Chairman, Judge Klein, suggested that a subscription list be passed around then and there the suggestion was immediately adopted and nearly five hundred dollars was subscribed in the room within a few minutes.

As the Paymaster's roll now runs about $55,000 a month it is seen that it means something to the town in a financial way as well as in other ways, to have the Battalion quartered here.

A effort will be made to have the Batt remain here over the 24th of May, when it is proposed to put on a big celebration in aid of the Batt. Funds. Col Shannon has promised to try and arrange this and it is expected that permission will be readily granted.

The Best Medicine For The Baby

The best medicine for the baby is the one that never fails to cure and which, at the same time, the mother may give with perfect assurance that it is absolutely safe. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They are the only medicine absolutely guaranteed entirely free from injurious drugs and what is more they never fail to free the baby from those minor ills of babyhood and childhood. Once a mother has used them she would use no other medicine. They regulate the stomach and bowels; drive out constipation; expel worms and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Wilson Ready to Break.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 17.—President Wilson is ready to act on the German submarine issue. The American note, which will virtually be an ultimatum, will be despatched just as soon as the finishing touches are put on the document by the Secretary of State. The impression obtains in officials quarters that if Germany rejects the demands made by the United States in this instance a rupture in diplomatic relations will inevitably follow.

Friends of the President who have been more or less in his council predicted Sunday that a diplomatic break between the two Governments would come within two weeks.

TURK CAPITAL RAIDED

Allied Airmen Bomb Constantinople Powder Factory.

After a Flight of Three Hundred Miles Against Adverse Winds, Three British Naval Aeroplanes Drop Shells on Munitions Works —Adrianople is Also Visited and Railway Station Bombed.

LONDON, April 17.—Starting out from a British naval base "somewhere in the Aegean," three British naval aeroplanes flew to Constantinople last Friday, and bombarded a powder factory and aeroplane hangars in the Turkish capital. Despite wind, rain, and thunderstorms, all three returned safely, having achieved the greatest aerial feat of the war, as far as distance is concerned. The flight to Constantinople and back covered a distance of more than 300 miles. At the same time another British seaplane flew to Adrianople, where bombs were dropped on the railway station. This machine, too, returned unharmed.

The Turkish War Office admitted in a statement Sunday night that "villages near Constantinople" were bombarded by two enemy aeroplanes, but made no mention of the attack on the hangars in the capital itself.

Last Friday's raid was the second substantial achievement of the new type of British naval plane since the outbreak of the war. On March 27 last a squadron of five seaplanes was conveyed across the North Sea by warships and bombarded the "horse" of the German planes in the Province of Schleswig, east of the Island of Sylt. Both in point of distance covered and in that of success the visit to Constantinople—the first to be made by British aircraft—and Adrianople overshadows the raid on the Schleswig hangars, for from the latter only two out of the five machines returned, while last Friday none of the planes was harmed.

The official report of the British Admiralty on the Constantinople raid reads:

"On Friday evening three of our naval aeroplanes carried out a raid on Constantinople. Bombs were dropped on the Zeitulik powder factory and aeroplane hangars. Another naval aeroplane visited Adrianople and dropped bombs on the railway station. All returned safely.

"The flight to Constantinople and back measured 300 miles. Although fine weather prevailed at the start, an adverse condition supervened, with wind, rain, and thunderstorms."

The aeroplane raid on Constantinople is the longest flight in the course of the war, the previous record having been held by a French airman, who flew from Nancy to Stuttgart and back, a distance of 240 miles.

Flight Commander J. R. W. Smyth-Pigott, who led the Constantinople raiders, already has received the Distinguished Service Order Medal for an exploit last November, when he attacked the railway bridge of the Orient railway at Kuleli-Burgas, Bulgaria.

This is the second time that the Zeitulik powder mills have been attacked, they having been bombarded by a submarine which visited Constantinople.

The Constantinople version reads: "On Friday night two hostile aeroplanes ascended off the Dardanelles and flew over Constantinople at a considerable height. They dropped several incendiary bombs on two villages nearby, without results."

BIG DRIVE FOR DVINSK.

Hindenberg is Putting Forward Every Effort to Break Line.

LONDON, April 17.—The warfare along the whole northern Russian front continues with the greatest intensity, and military critics here find indications in the regrouping of the German forces and preparations now in progress behind the German lines that Field Marshal von Hindenburg is about to make a maximum effort to take Dvinsk. On Saturday night the Russians took the offensive in the sector comprising the village of Glinovka, occupying the hills to the south. The Germans launched numerous counter-attacks, but all were repulsed. "The battlefield between these hills and the enemy's trenches were covered with German dead," declares the Petrograd official report, which adds:

"During the fighting Wednesday night at Traibouchovize, Austrians armed not only with rifles and bayonets, but with daggers, approached our trenches. They threw away their rifles and raised their arms, crying out that they surrendered. When they reached close quarters with our troops they used their daggers and fierce hand-to-hand fighting ensued."

Often Raise Price of the Captives.

LONDON, April 17.—Discussing the prospects of the release of a prominent Canadian who is held a prisoner by the Germans, Mr. W. L. Griffith, secretary to the High Commissioner, deprecates newspaper publicity being given to such negotiations. There have already been several instances, he asserted, where men might have been liberated, but the Germans, noting the importance attached to these personages, had hardened their hearts and were encouraged to ask higher bids.

British Success South of La Bassee.

LONDON, April 17.—Sir Douglas Haig reports that after the explosion of two mines British troops on Saturday night carried out a small raid against the enemy trenches south of the Bethune-La Bassee road with satisfactory results.

On Saturday night the Germans made several bombing attacks on the British craters at St. Eloi, but they were all repulsed. Five mines blown up by the enemy opposite Hulluch did slight damage.

VILLA REPORTED DEAD.

U. S. Officers Think Statement is Merely a Carranza Ruse.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—News reached Washington Sunday from Mexican Consul Garcia at El Paso that Villa, the Mexican bandit, had died from his wounds, and that his body was being dug up and was being conducted by a special train to Chihuahua.

As the reports are based entirely on information received from Mexican sources, and as details are lacking, Secretary Lansing declined to express an opinion as to whether the information is true. Officers of the War Department are frankly sceptical, expressing the opinion that the Carranza authorities in their anxiety to get the American troops out of Mexico have procured a dead body of some sort to pass off as that of the bandit leader.

"Villa," declared a high officer of the army to-night, "is as alive as he ever was."

Not only has Gen. Pershing, whose headquarters are in the region where Villa's body was supposed to have been discovered, failed to report his death, but not a word on the subject has been received from Consul Marion P. Letcher at Chihuahua. State Department officials indicated that Letcher, who has known Villa for some time, will be instructed to view the remains if they are brought to Chihuahua.

State Department officials admitted Sunday night that if the report proves to be true, there will be no further reason from the standpoint of the Administration to keep the troops in Mexico, and that they would be withdrawn at once. The War Department was awaiting with greater interest to-night the receipt of an official report being forwarded to Washington by General Funston from Gen. Pershing, giving details of the fight at Parral.

Press reports which have preceded the despatch from General Funston purport to disclose alarming features of the report, the most sensational of which is that it was not an unorganized mob of citizens that attacked the American troops, but an organized body of 150 Carranza soldiers from the Parral garrison.

It is also stated in these press despatches that, although the retreating Americans killed a large number of Mexicans, two Americans were killed and six wounded, Major Tompkins, commander of the force, being himself slightly wounded.

PROGRESS ON TIGRIS.

General Lake Reports Steady Advance of Relief Expedition.

LONDON, April 17.—Further progress in the efforts of the British army advancing up the Tigris to the relief of the force besieged at Kut-el-Amara was reported Sunday in the following official statement:

"Lieut.-General Sir Percy Lake reports that on April 14 a heavy gale blew all day. On the 15th gradual and steady progress was made on the right bank, and the enemy's advanced lines were driven in and occupied. The enemy left many dead and a considerable number of prisoners in the captured trenches.

"A heavy rain fell on the night of April 14-15. On the 15th the weather was fine, but hazy."

A Berlin despatch says despatches from Constantinople voice the absolute certainty felt there that the 40,000 British troops under General Charles V. Townshend, bottled up by the Turks since the beginning of the year in Kut-el-Amara, are doomed to surrender. Cut off from the outside world except by occasional aeroplane communication and the nearest relief under General Aylmer, about 23 miles down the river, the main British army in Mesopotamia, according to advices from the Turkish capital, is being gradually starved out.

Enver Pasha, the Turkish War Minister, is expected to continue to centre all his military measures and considerations upon a victory at Kut-el-Amara. He knows the Sultan and his people look to him to be able to say when the decisive hour on the Tigris comes. "This time they did not get away."

ROOF IS BLOWN OFF.

Carbide Falls Into Water and Acetylene Gas is Exploded.

ST. CATHARINES, April 17.—The large shipping building of the Canada Carbide Co. at Merritton was badly wrecked by an explosion which occurred Sunday night, when a quantity of freshly-baked carbide fell from a truck into the water at the bottom of the tunnel. The union of carbide and water caused a large quantity of acetylene gas to generate, which was ignited by the heat from two "pigs" which had just been wheeled from the furnace building on a truck. More than half of the metal roof was blown off, and two Italian laborers who had brought in the carbide "pigs" were severely burned, and one is not expected to recover. It is believed the men had wheeled the truck too fast through the tunnel, causing it to strike one end of the tunnel and break off a portion of one "pig," which fell into the water.

Bishop of Mombasa, Africa, Dead.

LONDON, April 17.—The death is announced of the Right Rev. William George Peel, Bishop of Mombasa, Africa, since 1899. The Bishop of Mombasa was one of the principals in the famous Kikuyu heresy controversy several years ago. He administered communion to non-conformist missionaries.

George Peck Dead.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 17.—George W. Peck, author of the "Peck's Bad Boy" stories, died here Sunday after a short illness. Mr. Peck was seventy-three years of age. He was twice Governor of Wisconsin and at one time Mayor of Milwaukee.

ENEMY TO TRY AGAIN

Another Storm is Brewing For Defenders of Verdun.

French in Furious Assaults Recover Some of Their Positions in the South of Douaumont—Germans Have Been Battering at Hill 304, Which Will Be the Centre of the New Attack.

LONDON, April 17.—The Crown Prince's infantry legions before Verdun are resting, letting the giant "Busy Berthas" and Austrian howitzers pave the path for another storm against the formidable barriers that still separate them from the most powerful fortress of France.

Everything Sunday night indicated that this week will not be one of rest for the Teuton troops. The weather is clearing, both sides have had ample time in the three-days' lull to bring up reserves and new stores of ammunition, and to consolidate their new front and re-grasp the lines.

Saturday witnessed a number of furious assaults by the French to regain their old position around the much-fought-for Dead Man Hill, taken from them during the earlier part of the week. An infantry attack in the south of Douaumont resulted in the capture of portions of some German trenches, the War Office announced Sunday afternoon. Two hundred Germans were made prisoners.

On Sunday the Germans on the left bank of the Meuse violently bombarded French positions in the Avocourt wood, foreshadowing a new attack. On the right bank both artilleries were active in the region of Douaumont and in the Woevre.

For the first time on Saturday the French adopted in their attacks the Crown Prince's method of advancing "in successive waves" which has been pursued by the Germans ever since the first storm against the Verdun approaches.

The Germans at some places, according to Sunday afternoon's report of the French, are bombarding General Petain's second-line defences. This indicates that the Teutons have utilized the last few days in bringing up their heavy guns, and have completed the arduous work of emplacing the batteries, despite the rain.

For the last 48 hours the Teutons' big guns have battered without pause the formidably-fortified Hill 304, strategically the most important point on the west bank of the Meuse. This position is still firmly held by the French, it towers high above miles of surrounding territory. Against this powerful bulwark the next great drive on the part of the Germans is to be launched.

MORE CANADIANS ARRIVE.

TURKISH CAMP TAKEN.

Australians Allow Only Two of Enemy to Escape.

LONDON, April 17.—The following official statement on the campaign in Egypt was issued by the British War Office Sunday night:

"The commander-in-chief in Egypt reports that on April 13 a successful reconnaissance was made by a column of Australian troops at Jifjaffa. The column moved out on the night of April 12-13 and reached Hill No. 1082, three miles south-west of Jifjaffa, by half-past five o'clock in the morning. The enemy's camp was attacked at seven o'clock in the morning and occupied after a brisk fight. The enemys' known casualties were six killed and five wounded. One Austrian lieutenant of engineers and 48 Turks, of whom four were wounded, were made prisoner. Our only casualty was one non-commissioned officer killed. Only two unwounded mounted men of the enemy escaped. Our troops destroyed all water plants.

"The Katia Oasis has been occupied by our troops."

Garrisoned by Teutons.

ROME, April 17. — "Austrian troops, including artillerymen with several batteries of heavy guns, have arrived at Constantinople, which is now exclusively garrisoned by Austrians and Germans, all available Turkish troops being on the way to Anatolia.

"The Austrians and Germans, besides guarding the Sultan and protecting Enver Pasha, the Turkish War Minister, who is extremely unpopular, as he is blamed for the prevailing shortage of foodstuffs, are destined to defend the Turkish capital in case of a revolution and possible attempts to force a separate peace. Such attempts, it is believed, would have to be preceded by the surrender of Constantinople to the Allies."

A Provincial Election will be held in Quebec May 22.

THE Kincardine council turned down a request for a Provincial auditor.

THE casualty list these days is bringing sorrow to many Canadian homes.

BISHOP Williams thinks there are too many people good on Sunday and bad on Monday.

EVERYONE must admire the way Sir Sam Hughes clears his decks and trains his guns for action.

THE average age of the men in the Bruce battalion is 25 and the percentage of farmers is only one third.

HOGS sold at $10.60 last week in Kincardine. The question is now that prices are so rapidly advancing in everything, will they ever come down again?

ANY man in Lions Head who suggests incorporation for that village is a sorehead, and it is not likely two rate-payers there could be got together to consider it seriously.

Hogs can be finished at the present prices of grain at a cost between $5 and $6 per cwt, and it is expected that they will soon sell at $11. It looks like the farmer have fallen on their feet.

THE people of Walkerton have Subscribed most generously towards the mobilizing of the Bruce battalion in that town during May, but the whole scheme is open to criticism. The sooner the battalion gets down to drill the better, and in the meantime the soldiers are more comfortable where they are.

ONE thing to the credit of the West it always has a grievance and can holler. It was first the C P. R. then the Manitoba School Question, then free wheat, and now it is Church Union, and like the baby grasping after Pears Soap, they will not be happy until they get it. Very well there is an East as well as a West, Kippling notwithstanding.

Doctors Agree on Eczema Remedy
Comfirm the Statements About D. D. D. Prescription

Geo. T. Richardson, M. D., "In my opinion, D.D.D. should be applied in all cases of skin disease—an immediate relief to the itch, a calm to excited nerves, soft, soothing yet a powerful agent, a strength to the general system."

Dr. Unna Holmes; "D.D.D. is as near a specific for eczema and the dreaded psoriasis as is quinine for malaria. I constantly prescribe D.D.D. also for scaldheum, tetter, barber's itch, pimples, all forms of itching eruptions, scales, sores."

Dr. Ira T. Gabbert; "I freely admit that D.D.D. reaches most cases of eczema and permanently cures them."

Come to us and we will tell you more about this remarkable remedy. Your money back unless the first bottle relieves you. D.D.D. Soap keeps your skin healthy. Ask about it.

Home for Spring Seeding.

About 40 of the soldiers, training at Wiarton, will leave within a few days for their homes to assist in the spring work. They will be gone one month. While there is nothing yet to warrant the statement it is altogether likely that the same thing will be done during haying and harvesting, and this will take care of the production of the soil.

WHAT CATARRH IS

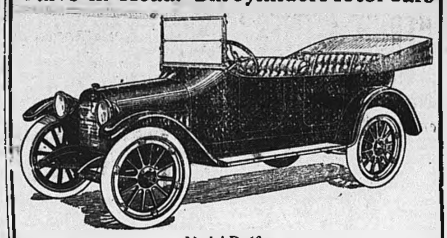
It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.



To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from any harmful drugs. Try it.

Pte. Ed Frazer,

Dear Ed —We, your friends and neighbors have assembled here tonight to congratulate you on the step you have taken. Like so many more of our brave Canadian boys you are doing your bit for King and Country, and we are confident that when the time comes, that you will give a good account of yourself and we believe that you have the courage to face both the war and the hardships of war. We therefore ask you to accept this wrist watch, not for the value of it, but as a slight token of our regard for you. Needless to say, it is our sincere hope for your safe return and that you may spend many happy days with us again

Signed by your friends and neighbors.

SHE RECOMMENDS "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Mrs. Corbett Read the Advertisement and Tried It

Avox, May 14th, 1914.

"I have used 'Fruit-a-tives' for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. I saw 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised with a letter in which some one recommended them very highly, so I tried them. The results were more than satisfactory, and I have no hesitation in recommending 'Fruit-a-tives'." ANNIE A. CORBETT.

CHAPTER I.

The First Step.

I HAD placed the lumber inside the yards, as directed, and was already rehitching the traces when the man crossed the street slowly, switching his light cane carelessly in the air. He was forty or forty-five, heavily built, with a rather pasty white face, a large nose, eyes unusually deep and had a closely clipped mustache, beginning to grey. As I faced him in some surprise he looked me fairly in the eyes.

"You are the lad the train hands put off the Atlantic express at Vernon a week ago," he said. "I came in on the same train. Just caught a glimpse of your face in the light of the brakeman's lantern. How did you get here?"

"Freight, two hours later."

"You're not a bum or you wouldn't be working."

I put one foot on the wheel.

"Wait a minute," and there was more animation in the tone. "I may have something better for you than this lumber wagon. I'm right, ain't I, in guessing you're no regular bum?"

"I've bummed it most of the way from San Francisco. I had to. I was homesick for the east and lost my transportation. I was discharged at the Presidio."

"Oh, I see. The army—foreign service?"

"The Philippines, three years; invalided home."

"You don't look it," his eyes on me. "Never saw a more perfect animal. Fever?"

"No, bolo wound."

He looked at his watch, and I climbed into my seat.

"See here, I haven't time to talk now. If you want an easier job than this come and see me at 9 tonight, and we'll talk it over."

I took the bit of pasteboard he handed up.

"All right, sir, I'll be there on time."

"Come to the side door," he added swiftly, lowering his voice, "the one on the south. Give three raps. By the way, what is your name?"

"Gordon Craig," I answered.

"Ever been known by any other?"

"I enlisted under another. I ran away from home and was not of age."

Out of his sight I looked curiously at the card. It was the advertisement of a clothing house, and on the back was written "P. B. Neale, 108 Chestnut street."

Evidently this man Neale had need of a stranger to help him out in some scheme. Well, if the pay was good and the purpose not criminal I had no objections to the spice of danger. Indeed, that was what I loved in life. I was young, full blooded, strong, willing enough to take desperate chances for sufficient reward.

My father, from whom I had not heard a word in two years, was a prominent manufacturer in a New England village. The early death of my mother had left me to his care when I was but ten years old, and we failed to understand each other, drifting apart, until a final quarrel had sent me adrift. I was in my junior year at Princeton, when the break came. This all occurred four years previous, three of which had been passed in the ranks, yet even now I was stubbornly resolved not to return unsuccessful.

I possessed a fairly decent suit of clothes, now pressed and cleaned after the rough trip from the coast, and that evening I dressed as carefully as possible in the dingy room of my boarding house. It was still daylight, but there was a long walk before me. Chestnut street was across the river, in the more aristocratic section.

It was dark enough when I got there and began seeking the number. I found No. 108. It was slightly back from the street, a large stone mansion, surrounded by a low coping of brick and with no light showing anywhere. I was obliged to mount the front steps before I could assure myself this was the place. I followed the narrow cement walk around the corner of the house. One window on the first floor exhibited a faint glow at the edge of a closely drawn curtain. I rapped on the door three times, my nerves tingling from excitement. There was a moment's delay so that I lifted my hand again, and then the door opened silently.

"Come in," said a man's voice.

I stepped within, seeing nothing of the man, and the door was closed behind me. The sharp click of the latch convinced me it was secured by a spring lock.

"Turn on the light," said the voice at my side sharply. Instantly an electric bulb glowed dazzling overhead in a narrow hallway and I blinked, about half blinded by the sudden change.

Neale, appearing somewhat more slender in evening clothes, smiled at me genially, showing a gold crowned tooth, and led the way to a spacious apartment, evidently a library. The high ceiling and restful wall decorations were emphasized by luxurious furnishings. The only light was under a shaded globe on the central table, leaving the main apartment in shadows, but the windows had their heavy curtains closely drawn. The sole occupant was a man in evening dress, seated in a high backed leather chair. With an indolent wave of one hand he seemingly invited me to take a vacant chair to the right, while Neale remained standing near the door.

This new position gave me a better view of his face, but I could not guess his age. His was one of those old young faces, deeply lined, smooth shaven, the hair clipped short, the flesh ashen grey. He must have stared at me a full minute.

"He will do very well, Neale," he decided, with a glance across at the other. "Possibly a trifle young. Have a cigar or a drink, Craig?"

"I will smoke."

"How old are you?"

"Twenty-four."

"Ever been south?"

"Only as far as St. Louis. I was at Jefferson barracks."

"Neale said you were in the army—full enlistment?"

"Yes. Discharged as corporal."

"You would be glad of a job that paid well and wouldn't mind if there was a bit of excitement connected with it, hey?"

"What is your idea of paying well?"

"Expenses liberally figured," he replied slowly, "and $10,000 for a year's work or less if done right."

I half rose to my feet in surprise.

"Sit down, man. This is no pipe dream, and I mean it. In fact, I am willing to hand you half of the money down. See here, Craig," and he leaned forward, peering into my face, "all you have got to do to earn your money is obey orders strictly and keep your tongue still. Do you get that?"

"The proposition looks good, only I should like to know a little more clearly what I am expected to do."

He slowly lit a fresh cigar, studying the expression of my face in the light as though deciding upon a course of action.

"Very good. We'll come down to facts. It will not take long. In the first place, my name is Vail—Justus C. Vail. I am a lawyer of some reputation in this state, and my entire interest in this affair is that of legal adviser of Mr. Neale. Here is the case as submitted to me: Judge Philo Henley, formerly of the United States circuit court, retired at sixty-four and settled upon a large plantation near Carrollton, Ala. His wife died soon after, and a week or so ago the judge also departed this life, leaving an estate valued in excess of $500,000. Philo Henley and wife had but one child, now a young man of twenty-five years, named Philip. As a boy he was wild and unmanageable, and finally when about twenty years old some prank occurred of so serious a nature that the lad ran away. He came north and was unheard of for some time, living under an assumed name. Later some slight correspondence ensued between father and son, and the boy was granted a regular allowance. Philip remained in the north, led his own life, became dissipated and a rounder and drifted into evil associations. Finally, about six months ago, he married an actress in this city, not of wealthy family, but of respectable antecedents. He married her under his assumed name, and they began housekeeping in a flat on the north side.

"The judge learned of this marriage in some way and began to insist that the son return home with his wife. Circumstances prevented, however, and the visit was deferred. Meanwhile, becoming more eccentric as he grew older, the father discharged all his old servants and lived the life of a recluse. When he died suddenly and almost alone he left a will leaving his property to Philip, providing the young man returned with his wife to live upon the estate within six months; otherwise the entire estate should be divided among certain named charities. Three administrators were named, of whom Neale here was one."

Neale drew a legal looking paper from his pocket.

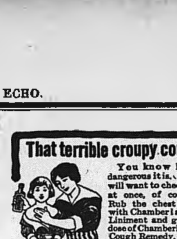
"Here is a copy of the will," he said, "if Craig cares to examine it."

"Not now," I replied. "Let me hear the entire story first."

"The administrators," Vail went on as though uninterrupted and repeating a set speech, "endeavored to locate young Henley, but failed. Then Mr. Neale was sent here to make a personal search. He came to me for aid and legal advice. Finally we found the flat where the young couple had lived. It was deserted, and we learned from neighbors that they had quarreled, and the wife left him. We have been unable to discover her whereabouts. She did not return to or communicate with her own people in the west or with any former friends in this city. She simply disappeared and, we have some reason to believe, committed suicide. The body of a young woman fitting her general description was taken from the river and buried without identification."

"And young Henley?" I asked as he paused.

"Henley," he continued gravely, "was at last located under an assumed name as a prisoner in the Indiana penitentiary at Michigan City, serving a sentence of fourteen years for forgery. He positively refuses to identify himself as Philip Henley, and all our efforts to gain him a pardon have failed."



"But what have I to do with all this?" I questioned, beginning to have a faint glimmering of the truth.

"Wait. Here was a peculiar situation. The administrators are all old personal friends of the testator, anxious to have the estate retained in the family. Some one must impersonate Philip Henley long enough to permit the settlement of the estate."

I rose to my feet indignantly.

"And you thought I would consent—would be a party to this fraud?"

"Now, wait, Craig," as calmly as ever. "This is nothing to be ashamed of nor, so far as I can see as a lawyer, does it involve danger. It will make a man of Henley, reunite him with his wife if she still lives and give him standing in the world. We are merely helping the boy to retain what is rightfully his. Don't throw this chance away hastily. Ten thousand dollars is pretty good pay for a couple of months' work.

Production and Thrift

"TO win the war with the decisiveness which will ensure lasting peace, the Empire will require to put forth its full collective power in men and in money. From this viewpoint it is our true policy to augment our financial strength by multiplying our productive exertions and by exercising rigid economy, which reduces to the minimum all expenditures upon luxuries and non-essentials. Only in this way shall we be able to make good the loss caused by the withdrawal of so many of our workers from industrial activities, repair the wastage of the war, and find the funds for its continuance. It cannot be too frequently or too earnestly impressed upon our people that the heaviest burdens of the conflict still lie before us, and that industry and thrift are, for those who remain at home, supreme patriotic duties upon whose faithful fulfilment our success, and consequently our national safety, may ultimately depend."—SIR THOMAS WHITE, Minister of Finance.

PRODUCE MORE, SAVE MORE.
MAKE LABOUR EFFICIENT.
SAVE MATERIALS FROM WASTE.
SPEND MONEY WISELY.

LET US PRODUCE AND SAVE—

The war is now turning on a contest of all forces and resources—men, munitions, food, money. The call to all is to produce more and more. It may be necessary to work harder. The place of those who enlist must be taken by those at home, men and women, old and young. The more we produce the more we can save. Produce more on the farms and in the gardens. Save more and help to win the war.

LET US NOT WASTE OUR LABOUR—

In this war-time all labour should be directly productive or should be assisting in production. Make it as efficient as possible. If your labour is on something that can be postponed, put it off till after the war and make your labour tell now. Making war is the first business of all Canadians. Efficiency in labour is as important as efficiency in fighting.

LET US NOT WASTE MATERIALS—

Begin at home. The larger portion of salaries and wages is spent on the home—food, fuel, light, clothing. Are any of these things being wasted? $20.00 a year saved from waste in every home in Canada will more than pay the interest on a war debt of $500,000,000.

LET US SPEND OUR MONEY WISELY—

Are you spending your money to the best advantage? What do you think of extravagance in war time? Tens of thousands of Canadians are daily risking their lives for us at home. Is it not our duty to be careful and economical? Canadian dollars are an important part of the war equipment. Make them tell. Have a War Savings Account. Buy a War Bond.

Letter From Rev. C. P. Holmes, B.A. Fukui, Japan

Supported by the Mount Forest Walkerton and Wiarton District Epworth League

Fukui, Dec. 22, 1915

Dear Epworth Leaguers—

The other day my secretary picked up the last issue of the Bulletin which was lying on my desk and said 'Do you ever write to this?" Oh yes, sometimes "Well there are three letters from Japanese Missionaries in this one and none from you". Oh well I do not write to every one, I just write sometimes. Now thanks to this forcible reminder from my Japanese secretary. I am to write to the next issue of the Bulletin. But to be accurate I really was thinking of writing about our Fall's campaign.

We returned from Kanazawa the first week in September to find the heat still unbearably hot here on the west coast, but considering the shortness of the fine weather in the autumn we have to get to work at our aggressive work at once or the snow of winter will be upon us and nothing done. The chief feature of our work this fall was a tent meeting campaign here in the city of Fukui. This city was one of the cities which favored with a visit from Dr. Robert Speer during his recent visit to Japan. In anticipation of his visit for some months previously the Presbyterian and Methodist churches planned some kind of Union effort to make a special Gospel push. As the time drew near, the plan widened until a general tent meeting campaign, embracing the three missionaries and five Japanese churches operating in this city was evolved. A central location was obtained and a large tent was spread and preparations for a six night's meeting launched. There were those who had forbodings and doubts. Would the people come, and if they did, would it be only a noisy crowd with no prospect of doing anything worth while? Why not rent a theatre and have big theatre meetings after the old-fashioned style where the speakers become lecturers about Christianity. This method is very good in new places, but it was demonstratrated during these meetings that this city is beyond that, and the people are ready for the Gospel message direct ly.

Now let us speak about the ordinary day's work during this tent meeting campaign. Our forces were all united, and I am glad to say proved to be really united in spirit as the meeting progressed. The first work was to distribute tracts and announcements of the meetings to every house in the city. Then we are ready for the campaign to begin. Every forenoon our workers, both Japanese and foreigners, go down to the tent and talk to the people who drop in to see what it is all about. We had a bountiful supply of Sunday School pictures which we hung around the walls of the tent and which furnished the subjects for conversation. If the people failed to come in then we would take the pictures out and hang them up on telegraph poles, collect a crowd and talk there to the people. In the afternoon from three o'clock we always had a monster children's meeting; by going to the gates of the Public School we could easily collect a crowd and bring them with us back to the tent, but it soon became so that there was no need of special soliciting in that direction. The children were always on hand in abundance. This served the double purpose of doing direct work with the children and also of keeping them away from the evening meetings, both of which are important. After the children's meeting a prayer meeting for the workers was always held, after which we all proceeded out to preach on the streets for about two hours in advance of the evening service.

The preaching on the streets was done on this wise. First we secured a baggage cart and a man to pull it. On this cart we placed an organ and a stand for holding big printed hymn sheets. This stand also served the purpose of a platform for the speaker. We always sang a hymn while some one immediately mounted the platform and preached to the assembled people. Of course short five-minute sermons but it is remarkable what they could put into five minutes. I have heard Japanese speakers outline the whole plan of salvation in five minutes, I will never complain of lack of earnestness on the part of Japanese preachers whatever else they may lack after going through this campaign. But it was equally remarkable how eagerly the people listened. Not one single case of interruption on the streets in this city It was also remarkable how gladly the Japanese workers took to this line of work not only our preachers, but also the laymen, not being at all ashamed to be seen mingling with this sect before the public. How many thousands heard the Gospel during these six days on the street would be difficult to say. This work on the street was reinforced by an organ a drum, a kettle drum, a cornet and scores of singers. This is only preliminary to a first class brass band which we would like to have for Gospel work of this kind.

Return to the tent at seven o'clock for the evening meeting and find the place full waiting for you, was an inspiration not often seen here, so it is said. We pursued the plan of three speakers a night, and each one speaking not more than half an hour. At least this was the ideal, but too often transgressed, but we did at least keep the addresses down to straight Gospel talk. After the close of the evening meeting another prayer meeting for all Christians and inquirers. These evening meetings were very blessed. Dr. Speer came and addressed an evening meeting, and although it was raining very hard the tent was full. But the climax was reached the last two nights when the Presbyterian brought a special man from Osaka and the Methodist brought Imai San from Tokyo, a converted Buddhist priest. The last meeting was preceded by a monster lantern procession in which all the Sunday School children of the city took part, with Chinese lanterns forming a procession and marching around the whole city singing Christian songs. That night how many people were within sound of the preacher's voice would be difficult to tell. They listened to Imaisan tell the story of his conversion, how he first heard the story from the late Dr. DeForest in a sermon on the street how he worked his way through from point to point, frequently giving up his Bible study, but again returning to the pastor for Bible instruction in response to the prayers of the Christians of the church of which he knew nothing. He hung for months over the old wineskins and the new wine, realizing fully that it meant his severance with Buddism, but still unwilling to do it. He saw ease and comfort sitting on the mats in the temple and going through the mummeries of worship, whereas in the Christian life he saw work and hardship and rejection from friends. But he made the great decision, and what a mighty man he is. His story ought to be told in every community in Japan.

Fifty-seven signed cards to become Bible students, these were divided among the churches, of whom 22 fell to our lot. These people are for the most part reported to be hopeful and in due time will, no doubt, come into the Christian life

Now, these meetings have proved a few things.

1. That people will come successively for a series of nights to one place and the same people will come. The Japanese have persisted in claiming that not more than three nights at the most will people come. They may understand the characteristics of their own people but they do not yet understand the Christian religion when they say so.

2. The Gospel is sufficient to draw the people. No other theme was allowed to show its head and the people said "Why do you close these meetings so soon".

3. It showed us how much energy and money and strength must be spent to make an impression on this west coast. I never saw such hard work in Shidzuoka province the hanging up of a bill was enough to bring a crowd over there but the problem is different here. But the oldest Christians in the place are encouraged; they say the change in the last five or six years is wonderful.

4. The absolute essential of Christian harmony. Missionaries and Japanese worked together as true yoko fellows, and some people say that is a marvellous thing for this city. Everybody is praising the tent meetings and are already looking forward to bigger operation next year.

Yours very sincerely.

C. P Holmes.

Preparedness

Now that all nations are talking preparedness, why not discuss health preparedness. While we have been negligent in protecting our country against the enemy, we have also failed lamentably in fortifying our human bodies against disease germs.

This has been proven in the recruiting offices, where so many men have been turned down by the examining doctors. Weak heart action; diseased lungs; thin, watery blood; defective eyesight, resulting from exhausted nerves. These are among the prevailing derangements which the examining doctors find.

Health has been neglected. The blood has not been kept in healthful condition. The nervous system has got run down, and the subject under inspection is in no condition to fight the enemies of his country or to withstand the attack of disease germs.

Health preparedness means the use of preventive treatment, such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, to enrich the blood, reinvigorate the starved nerve cells and keep the health at high-water mark. In this condition you have the strength, vigor and confidence which is necessary to the success and enjoyment of life. You have the vitality to defy disease germs and thereby escape many ills which find an easy prey in the run-down system.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, by means of its blood-forming and nerve-invigorating influence, cures headaches, nervous indigestion, sleeplessness and irritability, and prevents such serious diseases as nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

A Toronto promoter is endeavoring to secure the cement plant to manufacture potash, magnesia etc He claims that he has the project well under way and if it should be a go the new concern will employ from 75 to 100 men. This sounds good.

Last week Mr J. D. Abraham, who was choir leader in the Anglican church, Durham, received a most complimentary address from that church accompanied with a travelling companion. This came most unexpectedly and was much appreciated.

Navigation has duly opened, and the first boat in was neither a C.P.R nor a N. N. Co liner, it was the tug Mystery which sailed the waters head up and full steam on knowing that no German submarines were watching her. This little craft from Lions Head tied to the dock Tuesday.

Read the advertisements in The Echo every week. They are interesting. A merchant said to The Echo we can give just as good bargains as can be got in Toronto. There is no sound reason for any mail order business, and if the advertisements in The Echo are carefully read there will not be a dollar sent to Toronto this year.

A few years ago an effort was made by certain promoters to secure a railway for the Peninsula and not until last week was the financial statement of this effort published. The cash receipts in favor of the enterprise were $1138.00, and the notes signed but unpaid were $445. The balance of cash on hand is $70.30 which will be handed over to the Canadian Red Cross Society. The promoters blame the European war for the failure of the enterprise

Awarded the D. C. Medal.

The age of heroism has not passed away, and Canadians have the stuff in them that makes heroes. When we have a few slackers at home, that full of yellow that it makes one sick, it is refreshing to read of the deeds of bravery of others. In the despatches Monday night it was stated that Pte. B. D. Schwan, son of Louis Schwan of this town, of the 19th Western Ontario battalion was out on wiring duty on the night of March 8-9, when one man of the party was wounded. Returning to the trenches Schwan secured a stretcher and going out again brought in the wounded man under heavy fire from machine guns. His reward has been the Distinguished Conduct Medal. The Echo congratulates the father upon having such a son.

Presentation at Mar

The Women's Institute gathered at the home of Mrs. Jas. Given on April 13th, where she hospitably entertained the members in honor of Mrs. Armstrong, who was presented with the following address Dear Mrs. Armstrong,

"We, the members of the Women's Institute, wish to show you in some small way our appreciation of your never varying kindness and deep interest in our work and welfare.

Dear friend. although you are soon leaving us to go to a distant home, take with you the thought that you are leaving friends behind you with whom you have linked a golden chain of friendship, a bond which, we hope, will never be severed.

In sickness and death, you and your family were always ready with a kindly hand to help ease the pain or comfort the sorrow-stricken,

Shadows have passed over both your and our lives, but these have only served to forge the chain of friendship tighter.

Our best wishes and prayers go with you to your new home.

We hope that God may spare you and your family to long years of happiness and usefulness, and that when the great call comes, you will be happy to step into the greatest of all happiness, the joy of seeing our Heavenly Father face to face.

Kindly accept then this Bible not for its pecuniary value; although a priceless pearl for those who search it, but as a token of our loving esteem and appreciation.

As you read its pages may pleasant visions of quiet christian talks with old friends at Mar be brought to your mind.

Signed on behalf of the Women's Institute, Mar.

News of the Churches

Methodist Church.

The Passion Week Services were well attend every night of the past week. The addresses by the pastor were most appropriate and inspiring.

Easter Sunday was a special day. The morning there was The Day of Resurrection. Special Easter music and floral decorations were in keeping. Brief but special mention was made to the anniversary of St. Julien

At the Evening Service Mrs. W.W Prudham spoke on the possibilities and success of woman's work for woman. The text was "Go Tell" The address was illustrated from many personal touches from the missionary. It was the Anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary.

Shakespeare Tercentenary

The 300th anniversary of the death of William Shakespeare was fittingly observed by a large gathering in the Methodist church on Monday. The several Young Peoples' Societies of the town on the invitation of the Epworth League came together to do honor to our greatest poet The program with the exception of an instrumental by Miss Atkey and Merrill Prudham, was Shakespearean. Mrs. Foster after a sketch of Shakespear's life and the theatre of his age showed how Shakespeare could be read to profit either for sentiments or for character studies, or for life pictures, illustrating the points made by appropriate quotations. Mr. Angus Sinclair outlined one of the Historical plays, Richard 3rd" This he said was the greatest of the Histories. Miss Sim gave an analysis of the Comedy "As You Like It" with copious quotations Miss Vera Paterson's subject was the sonnets so much neglected.

Rev. W. W Prudham presided and in his remarks on the theory that Bacon wrote the plays read Milton's Epitaph on Shakespeare as evidence that Milton the truth loving honest Puritan, contemporary with Shakespeare for eight years, believed Shakespeare wrote Shakespeare. The audience joined in a contest "A Shakespeare Love Story" for a closing number.

A handy little volume outlining each play of Shakespeare in a most simple and fascinating way is to be found in the Public Library, Shakespeare by John Masefield.

Methodist Church, Lions Head

On Wednesday April 19th the ladies of the church had a supper and concert in the Town Hall. The supper was very dainty and the tables were decorated with exquisite taste. Over one hundred sat down and the general opinion was that it was the best supper ever provided in Lions Head. the chicken was delicious. Like the supper, the programme was of a high order among other things was a debate on, resolved that the pen is mighter than the sword, F. G Moore, Herb Richardson, and S.C. Cooper argued the affirmative and T. J. Bridge, W. B. Mashier and Rev. J. T. Stapleton the negative great interest and excitement prevailed throughout and when Mr. Post, E. Patterson and L. C. Bruin, retired to adjudicate some wondered what the verdict would be Mr. Post held the honour to announce the decision which was 11 to 7 in favour of the negative. The affirmative was at a disadvantage for Mr. Chris Graham fell by the wayside and a substitute had to be obtained the day of the debate which of course, militated them, yet the substitute, by the way, gained four of the seven points

Some of the soldiers were quarantined but they were not forgotten and baskets full were sent to their homes.

It was a happy time.

The Easter services were well attended and great appreciation of the Easter truth was evidenced.

On Monday the 24th there is to be a bee at the Parsonage grounds to level up a new lawn for tennis, etc.

DEATH OF JAMES BURROWS

The death of this gentleman occurred at Russel, Manitoba, in his 77th year. Deceased was well known in Wiarton and vicinity where he had lived for upwards of forty years, and where he and his industrious wife made one of the most beautiful homes in the country. Nine years ago he left his home here to his son James, and with his wife went to Russel, where most of his family are living and where eight years ago Mrs. Burrows died. Since then Mr. Burrows has lived among his family at Russel journeying here several times to visit his friends. Hale and hearty until the 11th of April he was stricken with heart failure and at midnight of the 12th his spirit was called away. On Sunday the 16th his body was interred at Ninisky cemetery beside that of his beloved wife. there to await the resurrection.

His family of nine were all present at the funeral except James, of Wiarton, and Frederick, of Kentucky. In religion Mr. Burrows was a Presbyterian and in politics a Conservative. He was an honest, upright, man, born of Irish parents in Toronto in the year 1839, he was a veteran of the Fenian raid. Of such men was the Dominion built up. God send us sons of the same metal.

Private Wm. Barry, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Barry, of Dunkeld, and who was badly gassed and wounded at the Battle of Langemarck while fighting in the ranks of the 48th Highlanders of Toronto, rrrived off the G. T. R. train at Walkerton on Tuesday night, and after a rousing cheer was driven to the home of his parents where he will remain and recuperate from his injuries. Few warriors returned from the battlefield have had as thrilling experiences or survived as many wounds as Barry. Besides a rifle ball that penetrated and broke several bones in his ankle crippling him so that he will walk lame nearly a year after his mishap, he was badly injured by the bursting of shrapnel shell which wounded him in six places; the bullets penetrating his arm, shoulder and leg. Painful as these injuries were they were not to be compared to the agony produced by the gassing he got. Tossing for weeks on a hospital bed, gasping for breath and with his face swollen and purple by the suffocating torture, he lived to come through the ordeal and bear personal witness to the heinousness of the warfare waged by the foe. Although he has been since undergoing treatment at various hospitals, he is still suffering considerably from the effects of the gas. Private Barry is 21 years of age, weighs 170 pounds and is about 6 feet in height. He joined the 48th Highlanders at the outbreak of the war and went to the front with that famous Toronto regiment which was so badly cut up at Langemarck. An ovation in honor of Private Barry will likely be arranged in Walkerton shortly.

Mr. William Cruickshank, of Pinkerton, an old pioneer of Greenock township died at the hospital in Walkerton on Thursday morning last, as a result of cancer of the lip, for which he had been undergoing treatment for many months. The deceased who was 80 years of age, was a widower, and leaves a daughter who has been residing with him at Pinkerton, and one son, John, on the homestead in Greenock. The funeral which took place to the Douglas Hill cemetery on Saturday afternoon, was largely attended.

Leslie Huether, B. A., only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Huether here, has enlisted as Sergeant-Major in the University of Toronto Overseas Training Company, and is preparing to leave shortly for over the briny with this force. As Leslie was some pumpkins on the football field and should be a hot member in the game of war, the Kaiser's minions will probably discover after his coming a horrible increase in the number of sudden deaths in their force.

Carrick township council has decided to present wrist-watches to the men who are enlisting for overseas service.

Mr. Robt. Irwin, of the firm of Irwin Bros., horsedealers, arrived home from a trip to the west which took him as far as Regina, Moosejaw and Saskatoon. Mr. Irwin says that seeding operations in the portion of country through which he passed are late this year. Owing to the number of recruits that are leaving the country the farmers are despairing of handling a big crop this year and are turning a good deal of their land into summer fallow. In the cities conditions have improved considerably of late owing to recruiting and assembling of large bodies of troops at the various centres. Every little hamlet has its company of men. The recruits are pouring in. At Saskatoon lately, no less than 450 men enlisted in one day.

NOTHING TO EQUAL BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Lawrence M. Brown, Walton, N.S., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and believe there is nothing to equal them for little ones. They instantly banish constipation and teeth troubles and unlike any other medicine I have used they are pleasant to take and do not gripe the baby." The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co, Brockville, Ont.

Tara

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Stewart and family, of Saskatoon, have moved to Tara, Mr. Stewart having taken a position with the F. T. Hill & Co. Mrs. Stewart is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McLeod.

A representative of the Hydro Electric Commission along with Reeve Grant and Councillor Watson canvassed the town yesterday to ascertain how many of the citizens will install the light in their houses and stores. They met with general success and it looks as if nearly every place in town will use hydro.

The severe electric storm which passed over this section on Wednesday night of last week was responsible for the destruction of Mr. Jos. Dudgeon's barn on the 12th of Elderslie near Williscroft. The lightning struck the barn and it was soon in flames. Mr. Dudgeon succeeded in saving all of his stock excepting a cow and one pig. A thrashing machine was also burned.

After an illness of five years from infantile paralysis, Mr. Thos. Freeborn Nicholson, son of the late Richard W. Nicholson, departed this life on Saturday. For the past year deceased had lived with his sister, Mrs. W. F. Munson where he received every attention. He was a patient sufferer and although he was confined to bed almost through out his sickness he bore the affliction cheerfully.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR THE SPRING

Do Not Use Harsh Purgatives—A Tonic Is All You Need

Not exactly sick—but not feeling quite well. That is the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite fickle, sometimes headaches and a feeling of depression. Pimples and eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has left its marks upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives, as so many people do, in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of given strength. Any doctor will tell you this is true. What you need in spring is a tonic that will make new blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine that can do this speedily, safely and surely. Every dose of this medicine makes new blood which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite and makes tired, depressed men, women and children bright active and strong. L.R. Whitman, Harmony Mills, N. S., says:—"As a tonic and strength builder I considered Dr. Williams' Pink Pills wonderful. My whole system was badly run down, and although I faithfully took a tonic given me by my doctor I could note no improvement. Then I began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was soon restored to my old time health. I can most heartily indorse this medicine."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co, Brockville, Ont.

Southampton

During the past week Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Stout have had three letters and a postal card from their son, Lance-Corporal Jas. Stewart, who was wounded by a rifle grenade, and is in the hospital in France. The wound was in the head, and is serious, but he is getting along well, and bright hopes are entertained for his early recovery.

Mr. Brock McAulay has purchased a new steel tug at Sandusky, Ohio, and will have it here as soon as the ice will permit of a passage being made. It is a strong tug over seventy feet long.

Mrs. A. Tolmie is just about the same, as last week. Her son, Major Tolmie, M. P. P. has been here for past week and her daughter, Miss Ella Tolmie arrived home from Vancouver the first of this week.

OWEN SOUND

Mayor Little received word from Mr. W. S. Middlebro, M. P., stating that the dredge "Industry" which has been in winter quarters at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. will leave for Owen Sound as soon as weather conditions permit' to commence work in the harbor here.

Some time ago a survey was made by government engineers, through representations made by the Board of Trade to Mr. Middlebro. It was shown that certain deposit had gathered in the harbor, and that in order to accommodate the largest vessels and to be prepared for the visit of the Association of Automobile Engineers here in June on the N. N. Co.'s steamer Noronic, the channel must be swept. Mr. Middlebro at once set to work, and yesterday sent a message to the effect that the dredge would come here as soon as possible.

The silk hat given by the local Board of Trade for the first skipper to bring a vessel into Owen Sound in the spring goes this year to Capt. Tigelt of the tug Mystery, which is owned by Capt. Clark Sensabaugh. He brought his tug into Owen Sound harbor last night (Wednesday) at 8.05 o'clock and docked at McLauchlan's wharf. Capt. Tigelt also opened navigation in Wiarton having been the first captain to enter that harbor this spring. He wintered his vessel at Lions Head and made the trip to Wiarton before coming to Owen Sound.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. Free from harmful drugs.

GERMANY WILL BACK DOWN.

Delay in Answering Wilson's Ultimatum Points to Accession.

BERLIN, April 24.—Germany's answer to President Wilson's virtual ultimatum will be despatched to Washington at the earliest in the middle, possibly not before the end, of the ensuing week.

Of all the signs and hints and omens with regard to the outcome of the crisis between the two countries this very delay of Germany's answer is the most significant; it points clearly to a backdown on the part of the German Government, and a dignified and gradual, but none the less complete, accession to America's demand that the lives of American citizens must be safeguarded.

What is really coming to pass in Germany at this moment is a feverish preparation for a submission to American demands; not, to be sure, for a complete abandonment of the submarine warfare, but of that which is asked in Mr. Wilson's closing paragraph: a declaration and a putting into effect of an abandonment of its present methods of submarine warfare against passenger and freight-carrying vessels.

THIRTY DIVISIONS USED

Germans Have Hurled 600,000 Men Against Verdun.

As Corps Have Been Depleted They Have Been Filled Up and Rushed Back to the Front—French Surprise Attacks Succeed—Several Lesser German Attacks Were Repulsed by French Friday and Saturday.

PARIS, April 24.—In their attempts to take Verdun the Germans up to Saturday had made use of 30 divisions of troops, amounting roughly to 600,000 men, according to an official statement issued by the French War Office Sunday. The statement indicates that more than this total have been used, since some of the divisions have been reorganized, their depleted ranks filled out, and they have returned to the front several times.

"It is worthy of note," the official statement says, "that the German command seeks to conduct the operations with the smallest number of troops possible, but to maintain them and keep them on this front until they are completely used up. As losses are suffered, it re-forms the units with reinforcements and sends them back to the attack barely reconstituted. It is thus that certain divisions have reappeared on the front as many as three and even four times."

French surprise attacks were carried out successfully Saturday night against German listening posts in the Bois d'Avocourt west of the Meuse. This is the only infantry activity reported in the Verdun region Sunday. The Germans have not renewed their attacks on the Bethincourt brook, Le Mort Homme front, where they were twice repulsed with considerable losses Saturday. The German artillery was active Sunday against Hill 304, the important position on the west bank of the Bethincourt brook, and there also was fitful bombardment of the French positions on the east bank of the Meuse and in the Woevre.

An attempt by the Germans Saturday night to capture a mitrailleuse which was causing them trouble west of Vauquois, in the Argonne, failed.

The ravine between Le Mort Homme, on the east, and Hill 304, on the west, was made the object of two determined German attacks Saturday. This ravine is formed by the Bethincourt Brook, which, rising in the south between the Bois Bourrue and the Forest de Hesse, flows north into the Forges Brook at the village of Bethincourt.

With hill and woods facing them along much of the front west of the Meuse, this ravine forms an open way for a German attempt to force the French lines on this side of the Meuse. But while there are no natural barriers to cross, the ravine is under heavy fire from the French batteries on both Le Mort Homme and Hill 304.

This artillery and mitrailleuse fire stopped both German attacks Sunday before the advancing Germans had approached the French positions. The Germans had sustained considerable losses in both attacks before they gave up their mission and returned to their trenches.

Three important attacks were attempted by the Germans in the Verdun region Friday night. One of these, against Le Mort Homme, won a temporary success, but the Germans were driven out by a counter-attack; the second, north of the Bois des Caurettes, was completely repulsed, and the third on the Vaux sector was checked by the French artillery before the Germans could leave their positions.

The first of the German assaults was a repetition of the effort to regain the positions taken by the French on the slopes of Hill 295, the summit of Le Mort Homme. This assault penetrated the first line of French trenches, but a counter-attack restored to the French all the positions they had previously regained.

The Bois des Caurettes is a small wood between Le Mort Homme and Cumieres. The French lines at this point are situated to the north of the Bois des Caurettes, and between it and Bois de Cumieres. The Germans used liquid fire in their attack on this sector, but were completely repulsed, according to the communique of the French War Office.

The German infantry activity on the east bank of the river was preceded by an intense bombardment of the French lines on a front extending from the Meuse to the Vaux Fort. While the bombardment was covering this rather extensive front, the Germans brought up and concentrated a large force on the narrow front between the pond at the western extremity of Vaux village and the old Fort of Vaux to the south of the village. French guns opened fire immediately on these concentrations in the German trenches, and the Germans suffering heavily under the artillery fire, were unable even to launch their attack.

Mystery Surrounds death of Golts

ATHENS, April 24.—It is reported here that the death of Field Marshal von der Goltz was attended by most mysterious circumstances, and was not due to natural causes.

It is learned that von der Goltz arrived in Constantinople a week ago and at the time was in excellent health. He expected to go to Berlin to confer with the Kaiser. He died on April 18.

Berlin Charges Bribery.

BERLIN, April 24.—"According to reports from Geneva," says the Overseas News Agency, "Great Britain has offered to Spain possession of Tangier if Spain will seize the German ships in Spanish ports and will consent to the closing of the Straits of Gibraltar to all neutral ships except those flying the Spanish flag."

EASTER IN JERUSALEM

At Easter time, when throughout Christendom the suffering, death, burial and resurrection of Christ are so vividly described, the thoughts of many millions are concentrated upon Jerusalem. After all these centuries many doubtless wonder what care is taken of the actual tomb of Christ. And how does it appear?

Although in a land ruled by Mohammedans, the holy sepulcher is never without its guard of Christians night or day. In this task four faiths—the Catholic, Greek, Coptic and Armenian—are represented by monks.

While the Copts, as Christian descendants of the ancient Egyptians are termed, are not so numerous as the others, they have their chapels in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, and their priests live in an adjoining monastery.

By three of these guardian bodies the sacred liturgy is celebrated every day, beginning at midnight. The Greeks officiate first, the Armenians next and the Franciscan Catholics last.

Each has numerous chapels in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, and each concentrates every effort toward preserving intact the rights acquired through centuries of occupation.

Yet over all these rules the Turk. It is he who holds the key to the sacred door, exacting tribute from all who enter except at certain hours of the day. Even the monks are obliged to pay.

Moreover, never a festival is celebrated that Moslem soldiers are not stationed in the vestibule "to preserve order" in the church, as they view it. These guards never fail to make their presence felt.

GREEK PATRIARCH ENTERING CHURCH OF THE HOLY SEPULCHER.

In spite of the humiliation heaped upon them, however, the Christian guardians remain at their post of duty, never ceasing their vigilance, that the tomb of the Lord may be preserved.

The most impressive Christian procession in Jerusalem is seen when the Greek patriarch in all the splendor of the insignia of his church enters the holy sepulcher on Easter Sunday. As the procession arrives at the entrance to the sepulcher the bells stop ringing, a profound silence overtakes the multitude of pilgrims, and then the patriarch says his first prayer, the Turkish soldiers present arms, and a few minutes later the procession enters the church.

AN EASTER LILY.

A baby girl with new thought bright
Stands tiptoeing, in grave delight,
To reach the stately lily's height,
Sweet lily, passing fair.

With upturned face she laughs in glee:
"May I your Easter lily be—Your Easter lily? Come, pick me."
Child lily, passing fair!

Soft flower from heaven's field of blue,
The dream of love's cup hold but you—
Thy life hath proven heaven true,
Pure lily, passing fair.

For thou hast taught me, baby mine,
Through parent love the love divine,
Though but a little fragment mine,
My lily, passing fair.

Child flower, may God's great wis dom move
Through all thy life till, ripe with love,
He plucks thee for his home above,
God's lily, passing fair.

—Ellis Kenyon.

A WORD ABOUT ENSILAGE.

All kinds of ensilage will be utilized in feeding operations this year. There will be thousands of cases where corn was put in the silo before the grain had reached the milk stage and some instances even where the crop was put in before it had eared. Some disappointment will be experienced unless sensible, able dry feed in the form of fodder or hay is used in conjunction with this succulent ensilage. Under no circumstances should young cattle or even fattening cattle be fed this green, watery ensilage alone. Then there are those who have put corn in the silo anywhere from a week to two weeks after it was frosted. Unless abundance of water was used at the time of filling a supply of moldy ensilage will be available. This is a matter that must be watched most carefully, because mold is dangerous and not infrequently animals are poisoned as the result of eating it. If our experiment stations could compile a bulletin next spring giving the results of feeding the various kinds of ensilage that will be used this winter it would make exceedingly interesting reading.—Iowa Homestead.

PRUNE CULTURE.

British Columbia is Developing It in a Remarkable Way.

British Columbia is already famous as a producer of apples, plums, and peaches, but that is not all. According to a resident of that part of the Dominion, prune-growing promises to be very successful for the man of only average means, prune-growing in southern British Columbia, according to our authority, proves very profitable. A ten-acre farm, cleared and ready for planting, may be purchased for about $200 per acre. What has already been done and some of the possibilities of this new industry are given in the correspondent's letter:

"None of the prunes grown in British Columbia come so far east as Ontario, but they are sold extensively in the Prairie Provinces, and it is the experience of the wholesalers and jobbers of the middle west that they command a better price and a quicker sale than any of the prunes handled by them from either Europe or the United States. This being the case, it is of interest to make inquiries as to the extent to which the prune-growing industry, which is now only in its infancy, can be further developed in the district in which it has already taken such firm hold.

On Sunnyside Fruit Farm, three miles west of Grand Forks, there is a prune orchard of nine acres, which contains exactly eleven hundred trees. From these eleven hundred trees there were picked this year 152½ tons of prunes, of which 147 tons, equivalent to 14,738 boxes, were distributed throughout the middle west from Medicine Hat to Winnipeg. These figures were obtained directly from those who have control of the prune orchard, and full reliance can be placed upon them.

The figures have been given for nine acres, and there are about twenty thousand acres suitable for prune-growing within the district immediately surrounding Grand Forks. It can easily be seen, therefore, that a very great extension of the prune-growing industry can take place in that part of British Columbia.

The success of the prune-growing industry in that district is due partly to the fertility of the soil, partly to the convenience with which an abundance of water can be placed on the land, and partly to the climate, which a rugged westerner a few years ago described as "the finest God ever made." At Sunnyside Farm they have an abundance of water, obtained from Fourth of July Creek, at a point about 350 feet above the prune orchard. Prunes will grow at Grand Forks without irrigation, but the returns per acre are much smaller when artificial watering is not employed. It is possible, however, to place an abundance of water on the entire twenty thousand acres available for prune-growing. It is, in fact, quite feasible to distribute the water of a whole river throughout the valley.

The North Fork of the Kettle River is about a hundred miles long, and it is fed during the summer by the melted snow from the mountains, the period of the highest water coming in June. If a dam were constructed in this river a few miles above the town of Grand Forks, the water from it could be distributed by means of gravity over the whole valley.

The third factor in the requirements for success in prune-growing is the climate, and it should be remembered that the climate of the interior of British Columbia is totally different from that of the coast, which is known by the people of the interior as "the rainy country."

Tar Paper Kills Sorrel.

Thorough fallow cultivation will kill sorrel as well as tar paper, though it may prove more expensive. Usually sorrel occurs in isolated spots measuring from three to ten feet across. If these spots are numerous cultivation will prove the more satisfactory. When the sorrel heads cut mow the patch, cover with tar paper, and weight it down. This will prevent the plants from getting to the sunlight, and consequently they will be smothered. One season is sufficient to do the work. The economic principle depends on the cost of the covering compared to the cost of digging the spots or in plowing and disking. If the tar paper can be bought for $1.20 per roll of 500 square feet the cost of covering is slight compared to the cost of digging at $3 per day.

Editorial

A farm paper says that there are bright days ahead for the sheep raiser. One would think that they are here already.

MOST of municipalities are making the poll tax $5.00 this year. This change was made to get more out of the young men who refuse to enlist.

THE bi-lingual agitation in Quebec to change the Educational affairs of Ontario will likely be very troublesome to the politicians. This bi-lingual trouble is something like John Brown's soul—it goes marching on.

IT is asserted that a number of young men in the country have not enlisted because they expect the wages to be high on account of the scarcity of labor. They must be a bunch of patriots. It is a pity that the government cannot control the price of labor under these conditions

FROM reliable statistics it appears that the purchasing power of $1 ten years ago is equal to that of $1.75 at the present time. We are all aware that values have been soaring but few have realized that they have gone up so high. It follows that there are many people not so well off to-day as they were ten years ago, although they may be getting higher wages.

FOR upwards of ten years we have been collecting taxes, but have spent very little upon improving the town. Every council has had the same story, and it has been a true one, we have only a few hundred dollars for this purpose. The time has come when we have to spend on the corporation. There are street improvements, sidewalks, hydrants, and many other things which demand attention, and which cannot be put off forever.

TWO weeks ago we called attention to the great success in recruiting at Lions Head. There are now 74 men in training there, and since the village was made a recruiting point 97 men have offered their services. It must be remembered that Lions Head got into the game somewhat late, but they have made up for lost time, and have beaten every other spot in Bruce when their field is taken into account.

WITHIN a fortnight the various units of the Bruce battalion will leave the different villages and towns where recruiting has gone on and go to Walkerton. There is yet time for some to enlist. Just as a fanning mill separates the wheat from the chaff so has enlisting done Men of heroic spirit have offered, parents who realize that their sons should go as well as others have put no obstacle in the way and the result on the whole has been splendid This end of the county has answered the call loyally and with a ready response. However there have been cases where young men have refused to enlist and the disgrace will stick to them as long as they live. There is yet time to do the manly and heroic deed.

Confirm the Statements About D. D. D. Prescription

Geo. T. Richardson, M. D., "In my opinion, D.D.D. should be applied in all cases of skin disease—an immediate relief to the itch, a calm to excited nerves, soft, soothing yet a powerful agent, a stimulus to the general system."

Dr. Unna Holmes; "D.D.D. is an unsurpassed specific for eczema and the dreaded psoriasis as is quinine for malaria. I constantly prescribe D.D.D. also for scaly rheum, tetter, barber's itch, pimples, all forms of itching eruption, scales, sores."

Dr. Ira T. Gabbert; "I freely admit that D.D.D. reaches most cases of eczema and permanently cures them."

Mail Order Scheme.

Any "home merchant" who isn't awake, and fails to tell the people about his wares, should read this startling statement made by the manager of a big Toronto mail order house recently! "We have a bureau whose duty is to read the country newspapers. There is not a paper of any consequence in our territory we do not get. The bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the merchants do not advertise in the local paper, or where advertisers do not change their advertisements regularly, we immediately flood that section with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants use their local paper.

Presented with wrist watch

The Orange Lodge, Hope Bay presented Private Slack, with the following address accompanied with a wrist watch, the occasion took place in the lodge room.

Hope Bay Mar. 16, 1916

To Bro. Private Slack,

Dear Sir and Bro.—On learning of you offering yourself to do duty for His Majesty, the king, we your brother Orangeman felt a desire in some way to compliment you on taking such a noble stand, we felt it the duty of every young man physically fit to go forward, to duty and help defend principles which our Orangemen order has always advocated, namely individual liberty and religious adherence to sacred obligations. The present war is the outcome of wrong teaching where in the Germans have been taught that might is wright and that militarism should dominate in the world. Thus innocent people are to pay, as war, not knowing that ever their own manhood and liberty are being distroyed. We therefore congratulate you and all British subjects who go forward manfully to uphold the glorious principles of our Empire, and we shall pray to come to an honorable peace and prosperity that peace which passeth all understanding. Kindly accept this watch as a token of esteem and regard and we look for your safe return to enjoy the blessings of peace.

Signed on behalf of the Lodge,
Fred Weaver W.M.
Geo. Thompson R.S.

NEW INVENTION

Mr. W. J. Bates, of Oxenden, has just been granted letters patent for a novel invention for automatically mixing various grain, cereals, and such like. The machine is very simple consisting of a series of cups which work on pivots round the periphery of a disc. These cups are controlled by latches, or locks, and the machine will mix any desired proportion of different grades of granular material automatically in a most efficient and reliable way The proportion can be varied as the machine is in motion by simply pressing a button on the outside casing.

Mr. Bates has received favorable inquiries from several of the largest mill builders in the United States and is in negotiations with regard to the manufacture. and sales rights in the different states.

Gordon Craig

I sank back into my chair undecided, yet caught by the glitter of the promise. Why not? Surely, it would do no harm, and, if the administrators were satisfied, what cause had I to object?

"But—but can that be done?" I asked hesitatingly.

"Easily," Vail assured. "Young Henley has been away five years; even before that he was absent at school so much as to be practically unknown except to the older servants. These have all been discharged and scattered. The wife is entirely unknown there. Any one, bearing over so slight a resemblance, would pass muster. All you need do is read the father's letters over, post yourself on a few details and take possession. We will attend to all legal matters."

"Then you consider that I resemble Henley?"

"No," coolly, "not in any remarkable manner, but sufficient for our purpose—age, size, general appearance answer very well; nose, eyes and hair are alike and general contour of the face is similar. There is not likely to be any close scrutiny. There is young Henley's photograph."

I Took These and Read Them Over Carefully.

He picked it up from among the papers and handed it over to me. There was a resemblance, recognizable now that my attention had been called to it, certain features being remarkably similar.

I do not know how others might have looked upon such a proposition as this, but it never occurred to me at the time to doubt the honesty of Vail's statement, nor could I perceive any great wrong in the action so calmly proposed. Vail, watching the expression of my face in the light, seemed to divine my thoughts.

"Evidently you are recovering your good sense," he remarked easily. "You will act, I take it?"

"Yes," the word was out almost before I was aware of speaking.

"Sensible decision, my man," his face lighting up. "Now, there is no need of our meeting again or being seen together. Neale, hand Craig your copy of articles of administration and of the will."

I took these and read them over carefully, yet without fully comprehending the legal phraseology. They were apparently genuine, and I gathered from them that the facts were exactly as stated. Peter B. Neale of Birmingham was named one of the administrators.

"Here is a small packet of letters from Judge Henley to his son," Vail said in a businesslike way, "which you had better read and so familiarize yourself with local names and conditions. I have also drawn up and had typed a brief sketch of young Henley's life, which will aid you in playing the part. You will need a new outfit of clothes, I presume? If you will sign this paper I will hand you a liberal advance."

I read it over slowly, but it appeared innocent enough. Of course they would require some guarantee that my work would be performed. Yet certain questions arose to my mind.

"As soon as the property is legally in my possession I am to deed it over to you?"

"Certainly. I represent the administrators and the rightful heir."

"That will involve forgery on my part."

"Technically, yes, but under legal advice, my dear boy, and agreement of the officials interested in proper settlement of the estate. There is no danger whatever."

I was not assured as to this, and yet the man's easy manner and smooth speech served to ease my conscience.

"And the $10,000?" I asked.

"A thousand will be handed you tonight. The remainder may be retained at the final settlement, together with the compensation of the woman. You make your own terms with her. So you see you cannot lose. Sign here."

"I had forgotten the woman. Is she necessary?"

"It will be better to have one, as they know down there young Henley was lately married. Any good looker with an easy conscience will do. You could coach her on the train."

"But I don't know a young woman in town." I admitted soberly, "except my landlady's daughter, and she's the limit."

Vail and Neale both laughed.

"You're slow, Craig," the former said good humoredly. "Get on your new clothes and look around. There's plenty would jump at the chance."

"That's altogether out of my line." I averred. "I'd rather go alone."

"Well, we'll not war over that. You can leave your wife north if you wish. I tell you what you do. Think it over and call me up by phone about 3 o'clock tomorrow. Here's the number. If you decide on taking a woman along I know one who will answer and will have her at the train."

"I am to leave, then, tomorrow night?"

"Yes, over the Eastern Illinois at 8:10. Sign here."

I was not hypnotized or unduly controlled. My mind seemed clear, but I yielded without a word and wrote my name at the bottom of the sheet. Vail blotted it carefully, folded the paper and placed it in a drawer of the table. Then he handed me two bills.

"There is $1,000 there, Craig, and I will send you a typewritten memoranda of instructions covering all points in the game. Where can I be sure of finding you at 3 o'clock tomorrow?"

"At 407 Green street."

"All right; as soon as you read those instructions call me up by phone and let me know what you have done regarding a woman and ask any questions you may desire. That will be all now. Neale, you might show Craig the way out."

He put out his arm and we shook hands, although he did not arise from the chair. Neale stepped into the hall and I followed him. The entry way was in darkness and the man went to the side door without switching on the light.

"By the way, it will be as well for you to go out cautiously and not be seen. We want to play safe, you know," said he.

The door opened and closed, leaving me outside.

CHAPTER II.
The Woman.

IT was then that the power of thought returned to me. However glibly those two conspirators might gild over the affair it nevertheless was a criminal matter to which I had blindly committed myself. However, I had no thought of withdrawal from the contract, for, while I saw the danger involved and realized the illegality, yet I failed utterly to perceive any real evil. I did not doubt the truth of all that had been told me and was willing to assume the risk. The $10,000 would be "easy money."

Not a glimmer of light appeared from within the house I had just left, and I drew my hat down over my eyes and stared about, listening. The hour could not be far from midnight, the night dark, the air heavy with mist.

The light fell slantingly across the stone steps in front and revealed a narrow opening through the brick coping beyond. I crept cautiously forward until I crouched behind the brick coping. There was not a disturbing sound, and I straightened up, essaying the first step forth into the full gleam of the light. Like some confronting ghost, scarcely more real than a phantom of imagination, I came face to face with a woman.

She had turned swiftly into the narrow gateway leading through the brick coping, hurrying silently as if pursued, her foot barely planted upon the step when we met. I stopped, speechless, rigid, my outstretched hand gripping the rail, but the woman drew hastily back, her lips parted in a sudden sob of surprise, one hand flung out as if in self protection. It was instantaneous. Yet before either could move otherwise or utter a word of explanation a heavy footfall crunched along the walk, and a burly police officer, his star gleaming ominously in the dull light, rounded the corner a dozen feet away.

Production and Thrift

"GAIN or no gain the cause before the farmers of Canada is as clear as it was last year—they must produce abundantly in order to meet the demands that may be made, and I believe this to be especially true in regard to live stock, the world's supply of which must be particularly affected in this vast struggle."—HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

THE FOLLOWING STATEMENTS ARE BASED ON REPORTS CONTAINED IN "THE AGRICULTURAL WAR BOOK, 1916," PUBLISHED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, OTTAWA, ONT.

LIVE STOCK—The herds and flocks of Europe have been greatly reduced. When the war is over there will be a great demand for breeding stock. Canadian farmers should keep this in mind.

MEATS—In 1915 Great Britain imported 664,608 tons of beef, mutton and lamb, of which 364,245 tons came from without the Empire. Out of 433,420 tons of beef only 104,937 tons came from within the Empire.

The demands of the Allies for frozen beef, canned beef, bacon and hams will increase rather than diminish. Orders are coming to Canada. The decreasing tonnage space available will give Canada an advantage if we have the supplies.

DAIRYING—Home consumption of milk, butter and cheese has increased of late years. The war demands for cheese have been unlimited. The Canadian cheese exports from Montreal in 1915 were nearly $6,500,000 over 1914. Prices at Montreal—Cheese: January 1915, 15¼ to 17 cents; January 1916, 18¼ to 18½ cents. Butter: January 1915, 24 to 28¾ cents; January 1916, 32 to 33 cents.

EGGS—Canada produced $30,000,000 worth of eggs in 1915 and helped out Great Britain in the shortage. Shippers as well as producers have a duty and an opportunity in holding a place in that market.

WRITE TO THE DOMINION DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND TO YOUR PROVINCIAL DEPARTMENT FOR BULLETINS ON THESE SUBJECTS

Tens of thousands of Canada's food producers have enlisted and gone to the front. It is only fair to them that their home work shall be kept up as far as possible. The Empire needs all the food that we can produce in 1916.

Girls Needed For Office Work.

So many men employed in office are answering the call for recruits that within the next few months there will be great demand for young women to take the places of clerks leaving for military service. In order that girls may be quickly trained for office work the Northern Business College, Owen Sound, will remain open throughout the summer. A special course of study has been arranged, commencing April 24th, but student may enter at later dates. Book-keeping, stenography and all branches of office work will be taken up, so that those taking a course will be fully qualified to take a place in an office. Quite a number have decided to enter the course of studies, but there should be a very large class as the need for assistance in business places will be very great. The courses will be under the personal supervision of the principal, C. A. Fleming. Those interested should write him for particulars.

Presbytery Accepts Resignation of Mr. Sinclair

A special meeting of the Owen Sound Presbytery was held in the board room of Knox Presbyterian Church last Tuesday afternoon at which the resignation of Mr. Sinclair, of Keady was accepted. It is likely that the Rev. Mr. Sinclair will occupy the pulpit of St. Paul's Church in Owen Sound North for a while.

Mr. Wm. Croth, who has completed his special course of three years (English only) at Knox College Toronto, was also licensed by the Presbytery to preach as a probationer with a view to a call. Mr. Croth is an Owen Sounder and a member of Knox Presbyterian church. For the last three years he has been studying a special theological course in Toronto and during the summer has been engaged in mission work in the north and west. His home is at 630, 5th Avenue East. The consideration of these two items of business was all that occurred at this special meeting.

"CANADA'S GREATEST SEED HOUSE"

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE IN CANADA

W. J. Holmes is improving a little.

Mr. Elgin Holmes was down to Wiarton on Wednesday.

Mr. James Brough was up to McVicar's on Sunday.

On Monday morning about nine o'clock the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Brough was destroyed by fire. The fire started under the eve of the roof on the opposite side to which the wind was blowing, and so had been burning some time before Mrs. Brough noticed it, she then managed to save a few things but being alone, could not do much, and the house being so far from the road no one noticed it until the fire had gained considerable headway. We are sorry for Mr. and Mrs. Brough's loss. The building belonged to the C. M. Bowman Co., Southampton.

ADAMSVILLE

Lots of rain and lots of mud and the farmers are kept back with their seeding.

The first motor car of the season passed through here on Good Friday.

MAN IS AS OLD AS HIS ARTERIES

THE failure of the arteries is one of the tragedies of modern life. Men in the very prime of life, and in the midst of business activities, are suddenly cut off. In many cases the blow comes before they realize their condition.

And what is the cause? Most usually overeating and drinking, combined with too little bodily exercise. The blood becomes overloaded with poisons. The kidneys break down in an effort to filter the blood, degeneration of the arteries takes place, an artery in the brain bursts, a clot is formed and paralysis results. Or it may be an artery in the heart that gives way and causes heart failure.

And how is this condition to be avoided? By moderation in eating and drinking, and by keeping the liver, kidneys and bowels regular and active. If you do not get sufficient exercise to accomplish this, it is necessary to use such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It is only by the action of these organs that the blood can be purified and the poisons removed from the system. In using you are not making any experiment, for they have no equal as a means of awakening the liver, kidneys and bowels to healthful activity. They prevent such serious troubles as hardening of the arteries, and thereby promote comfort and health and prolong life.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

The importance of arresting every tramp on sight is proven by recent events near Hepworth. Not long ago a tramp slept in a barn there and Constable McKenzie arrested him and he was sent down for 30 days. It appears, however, that before this he had committed a most serious offence for which he was taken from the goal and got his preliminary hearing at Hepworth a few days ago. The man was a bad one. He had been associated with a Napanee murder seven years ago, and had been sent to Kingston. He had been taken from the penitentiary and placed on the jail farm at Guelph and escaped March 19th. His right name was George Smith and he had other names as Jack Kelly, George Henry, Day etc. It is pretty safe to arrest a tramp and it is not safe to allow them to go through the country.

At Hymen's Altar

PRITCHARD—HUNTER

A very pretty home wedding was solemnized on Monday April 24th, at the home of Mr and Mrs Russel Hunter, Taylor St., when their second daughter Mina B. was united in marriage to Mr Vernard E. Pritchard of Chatham. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. W. Prudham under an arch of evergreens and flags. The bride looked very pretty in a richly embroidered voile dress and tulle veil arranged with fillies of the valley and carried a beautiful boquet of cream bridal roses. The bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father accompanied by the strains of a wedding march played by the bride's sister Mildred. After the ceremony the guests numbering about forty repaired to the dining room where a sumptuous dinner was partaken of.

The young couple were the recipients of many useful gifts, showing the high esteem in which they are held. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and fob and to the organist a pearl and sapphire ring. The young couple left on the 2.05 train amid showers of rice and confetti for a short trip to London, Stratford and Bothwell before taking up their residence in Chatham, the bride travelling in a navy blue serge suit.

The Foresters always had the reputation of giving jolly dances and this was no exception. It was held in the town hall on Monday night a splendid representation of both sexes were present, and to the strains of "Till the Boys Come Home" and chording the hours sped as if on wings Between every round dance number on the program was a square dance and then everyone was kept busy. Among the pretty dresses of the ladies, the military suits were very much in evidence. The proceeds are to go to the Red Cross girls; they supplied the lunch. Quite a number from Hepworth came up for the dance.

Military Events of the Past Week

Farewell To The Soldiers.

Although the date of the soldiers leaving Wiarton for mobolizing in Walkerton had not been set yet a farewell service was held in the town hall Sunday night. Just as on all other patriotic occasions the hall was packed. Mayor Baines presided. The Bruce battalion band was present and furnished a number of most excellent sacred selections. The Rev Mr McEwan offered prayer, Mr J. J. Asten read the Scriptures and the Rev. Mr Prudham the hymns, while the address of the evening was delivered by the Rev. J. E.Thompson He based his remarks upon the passage in Revelations "Thou hast a name' and stated that those leaving us has had the name of Briton and it meant much. In ancient days it meant everything for a man to be able to say that he was a Roman subject, and it means much to be able to say that a man is a Briton. It cost blood and money beyond computation for the liberty we enjoy. The greatest thing in Germany is his organization and the greatest thing in Britam is her soul. They had too, the name of a Canadian and it meant much now. Two years ago the Canadians had answered the call and their brave deeds at Ypres has sent a thrill through our hearts, their deeds make the work of others harder.

They had, too, the name of Christians and they must be loyal to Christ. Mr Thompson concluded a very able address by telling the soldiers that everyone owed them a debt of gantitude and he hoped that in the order of Providence that they would safely return to Canada.

The Soldiers Leave To-morrow

The soldiers, who have been training at Wiarton, Lions Head, Cape Croker and Tobermory leave to-morrow by special train for Walkerton. A number are still on various farms assisting with the seeding, but fully 100 will take passage from here. The train will pick up the soldiers at Hepworth, Tara, Chesley, and when it gets to the county town there will be a number that will tax the accommodation of Walkerton very severely It is expected that the whole battalion will go into camp at London about June 1st.

Earl Johns Welcomed Home.

On Saturday evening the Bruce battalion band, and one half of the people of the town, more or less, were at the depot to give a welcome to Earl Johns, who had just returned from the front having returned home to join the Bruce 160th battalion. He got a rousing reception, which he thoroughly appreciated. He had been in the trenches five months and while he was not in any noted defensive or offensive action yet there is trench warfare every day. He found the trenches very comfortable and the provisions excellent. He likes the life there and will welcome the return. He has the optimistic feeling that in time the Germans will be driven out of their trenches.

The Bruce Battalion Band.

The formation of this band was a happy thought, and the music given by the band during their stay in Wiarton was of the highest class It was excellent and everyone was delighted that we had the band for a week. Band Master Wright has certainly his men well trained. Music has a wonderful charm and an inspiring effect. When the Titanic went down the band played "Nearer My God To Thee" and the Bruce band may yet cheer our boys on the field of battle

The Sox Shower 510 Pairs Donated

The first thing a soldier needs is sox, the second thing is sox, and he needs sox all the time. Yarn has gone up so, great has been the demand for it until it is now at a figure never before known, and difficult to get at any price. But in spite of all this the Women's Patriotic League of Wiarton have been knitting all winter, and the Recording Angel knows the good work which many a lady has done under the most difficult conditions. When it was intimated that the soldiers would be leaving here about May 1st it was decided to give them a sox shower and the scheme was taken up with a whole heart by those who had already done their bit over and over again. The event took place in the town hall Saturday afternoon.

The Mayor, Mr Baines, as chairman, made a very good address to the boys of the 160th. He said "in dangers hour I know that the best heroes in the fight will be the men from the Bruce Peninsula and of the 160th Battalion. On each side of the platform were sox, sox and more sox. Mrs. A. M Tyson and Mrs A. Siemon passed the sox to the hands of the boys. Mrs Ebert as President of the League said a few words to the men just to wish them good luck. In turn several of the ladies of the League spoke telling of their sincere wish for the safe return of all and wishing them God Speed on their journey. Captain Clarke rose and for the men of the 160th thanked the ladies for all their past kindness and for the socks they were now receiving. The band played several pieces. To each soldier was given two pair of sox and each of the boys in the band received one pair. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The Band Concerts

The battalion band were very generous with their splendid music while in town, and not only one, but two band concerts were given, one on Thursday and one on Saturday evening. On Thursday evening, a band concert being a novelty in Wiarton. the hall was crowded. On Saturday night there was a good attendance also, The music was exquisite, national, descriptive. and classical, being played. Bandmaster Wright should be proud of his band. On Thursday evening a quartette was given by Messrs. Hamilton, Lawrence, Miller and Gilbert. Master Gordon McKenzie, of Hepworth, dressed in khaki, gave a patriotic recitation. Miss Jennie Lawrence sang two patriotic selections, Four of the members of the band gave a quartette. On both evenings the audience was delighted with the selections one of the band boys gave on the mouth organ. On Saturday evening the band gave the whole programme, their music. of course, being the centre of attraction.

The Battalion Band provided the music for the dance on Friday night and it was excellent. The hall was crowded with dancers, the floors were in perfect condition, and everything was in unison with a good time. It was a military ball, but civilian clothed men attended, also. Quite a number of Hepworth young people came up and enjoyed the dance until the wee sma' hours of the morning over, seventy five dollars was made, this going to the Battalion fund. The Red Cross girls served refreshments.

Take Notice TRUANCY

All children between eight and fourteen fourteen years of age must attend school for the full term during which the school in the section or municipality in which they reside is open each year, unless prevented by sickness or anything else that would prove a satisfactory excuse to the teacher in whose charge they are,

If the parent, guardian or other person having the legal charge or control of any child, shall neglect to cause such child to attend some school after being notified by truant officer, he or she shall be subject to a fine of not less than five dollars and not more than twenty dollars.

No child under the age of fourteen years, unless he has passed the required Entrance Examination shall be employed by and person and no person will detain a child so that he or she shall become late for school and any person employing any child contrary to those provisions, shall be liable to a penalty of twenty dollars for each offence.

Fred Widmeyer, Chairman — J. W. Dobson, Truant Officer

The Town Council

Mr. William Duke asked the council for a cement sidewalk on the east of Gould street from Frank St. to George St. He contended that it is a necessity. The matter was referred to a committee.

There were a number of applications for the job of working on the streets, but Thomas Cordick will probably serve the town in this official capacity. The wages asked were from $45 to $60 per month.

Judging from the Chief's report Wiarton is fast becoming the most model town in Ontario. Some months his reports leave very little more to be desired, this past month, however, there has been a slight reversion to type and the statistics are. arrests 1, summons served 3 Last month he posted placards for measles on 30 houses.

The Reeve brought up the matter of the Transient Traders license and contended that Mr. J. D Abraham was not fair in his advertising to the town. A large number of people have the impression that the town has soaked him $150 which is not the case. If he shall continue here in business he will get one half the amount, $75, back in 9 months and the other half back in 18 months, and all he will be out will be the interest, In this particular case Mr. Abraham was offered the whole amount back if he was here in business next January. The Reeve thought Mr. Abraham should be fair to the town and not give a false impression. Coun. Kempt maintained that the impression obtained for a clergyman had pounced upon him for the way they were using this man

It appears that the Ontario Government will give 40 per cent of the cost of street improvement, so it is probable that next fall an application will be made for a sufficient sum of money to supplement what the town or property owners will do for considerable improvements to the streets.

The Albemarle Road System

Colpoys Bay. Ont.,
May 2, 1916

Dear Mr. Editor,—

Kindly allow me space for the following letter. I notice in a recent issue of your paper an article written by Mr. Chas. Craig expressing very pronounced views on things in Albemarle, especially does he object to our road system. Although, Mr. Editor, I much dislike newspaper discussions, yet considering the importance of the subject, the great development of public interest now manifest in road construction, and for the benefit of those wishing to be correctly informed, I accept the task.

The Albemarle council of 1915 fully recognizing the many weaknesses in our road expenditures, decided to inaugurate a new system based on business principles, such as would be required in the management of any successful private concern. After securing much useful information from the Good Roads Association. the Department of Highways, who have trained men working out the best and most economical methods of constructing and maintaining the public highways, the result was with this information and after the most deliberate and careful consideration, we formulated a system which has since received the hearty endorsation of the Minister of Highways and the Colonization Road Inspector, Mr. R. C, Hipwell and others who testify as follows :

Mr. Hipwell in reporting on our roads of 1915 says, I must congratulate Albemarle on being the first township in my jurisdiction to adopt the good roads maintenance system. I think you have accomplished more on your roads this season by the timely and judicious use of the grader under the supervision of a competent man, than has been done in five years under the old system of statute labor.

Again Mr. Hipwell says under date of March 11, 1916. In my report to the Department last fall, I explained the system you adopted and the good results therefrom, and the Superintendent of Colonization Roads called on me in December, and we had a long chat about your plan, he heartily endorsing it and hoped that all the townships would take up your system,

He further writes on March 17, The Department of Public Works and Highways have been pleased to fully endorse the by law and road system adopted by your township in 1915, it being directly on the lines approved by the Government and Superintendent of Colonization Roads. The Department is therefore desirous, that this system should be continued and worked out in the same manner, thereby retaining the approval and support of the department. On these conditions I have been pleased to recommend a special grant on that part of the west stage road near Pike Bay, but the Department will not grant further assistance to be expended under any old and discarded system.

Mr. Chas. Gilbert, mail carrier, under date of December 30, 1915, who was a close observer of the condition of the roads, says that the increased improvement on Albemarle roads during the last year has been very noticeable and with the work being done early in the season gave a much longer period of good roads than formerly The grader did good work and I would be very sorry to see a return to the old system. Mr. Geo Hummel, who operates a stage line from Lions Head to Wiarton, also Mr. J. J. Hunt, who operates a stage line on the west shore road and who are close observers of road conditions under date of Dec. 1915 both fully endorse the system, stating that increased improvement is very marked. Much of the work being done early in the season, we have a longer period of good roads than is usually the case. The grader did good work by giving proper form to the road and I hope you will continue on the same system, as it is much ahead of the old plan of doing roadwork.

Dr. Hanning, of Lions' Head, whose profession frequently calls him to travel the roads in the surrounding township writes (entirely unsolicited) on Dec. 9th 1915. I may say that I have travelled the roads both east and west sides between Wiarton and Lions Head off and on for nearly ten years and regularly during the past three years, and during the past summer have many times had occasion to praise the business and workmanlike manner in which the roads were prepared in your township. They were the best I ever saw them and the way your roads carried up this fall in spite of most extraordinary rainfall of this year, is certainly the most convincing evidence of the soundness of the road making policy adopted by you. Progress, however has ever been hampered, but I trust your progressive policy will soon be generally recognized and a standing example for surrounding town ships.

Mr. W. B. Moore. of Lions Head, also writes in the same strain endorsing the road system and many other gentlemen have signified their approval,

It is quite evident to every thoughtful mind, that no system could be adopted that would embody the op nion of every ratepayer on Road Construction, yet I believe a council that could inaugurate and bring into practical operation a system that has received the most convincing approval of the highest authorities in road construction will eventually receive the support of all fair minded and thoughtful ratepayers. And, moreover, by this system which Mr. Hipwell says, more was accomplished in 1915 than five years previous was done at less than half the cost or at the reduced expenditure of $2674 38 less than the road expenditures of 1914.

Furthermore, under the old system the councillors were practically the road inspectors in their respective divisions, whereas our new system holds that the principle of an individual councillor passing judgment on work performed by the electors from whom he holds his position by popular vote is wrong and that the public interest is more effectually safe guarded by the transferring of inspection to the road superintendent, subject to the approval of the whole council.

The by-law in many other ways provides for the safety and protection of the public interests. Of course, this system of protection is not popular with certain individuals, who are deprived of distributing special favors without check or question, but now have to meet the approval of the whole council.

Mr. Craig says the system now has few supporters. The last municipal election was practically run on the road question, when by lack of effort and over confidence, Mr. J. C. Lemcke was defeated by only two votes otherwise, all the same members who inaugurated the system would have been returned. With this fact it is somewhat difficult to reconcile Mr. Craig's statement that the system has few supporters.

Also Mr. Craig's thoughtless and injudicious remark, that the system is "rotten' from start to finish" will require to be supported by further evidence before being accepted by intelligent electors.

Much more could be said in support of our road system, but I have already trespassed on your time and space

C. E. WHICHER,
Reeve of Albemarle.

The Transient Traders By-Law

May 1916

Editor of The Echo

Sir, My attention has been called to an advertisment in which is a reference to the transient traders license. A new by-law was passed this spring placing a tax on transient traders at $150.00. If the trader stays 9 months one half is refunded if he stays 18 months he gets the balance, all he loses if he stays is $6.75 interest on the first payment and $3.38 on the last, all he loses is $10.13.

New Strength In The Spring

Nature Needs Aid in Making New Health-Giving Blood.

In the spring the system needs a tonic To be healthy you must have new blood, just as the trees must have new sap to renew their vitality. Nature demands it, and without this new blood you will feel weak and languid. You may have twinges of rheumatism or the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia. Often there are disfiguring pimples or eruptions on the skin. In other cases there is merely a feeling of tiredness and a variable appetite. Any of these are signs that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has lessened your vitality. What you need in spring is a tonic medicine to put you right, and in all the world of medicine there is no tonic can equal Dr. William's Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood—your greatest need in spring. This new blood drives out the seeds of disease and makes easily tired men, women and children bright, active and strong. Mrs. Eugene Cadarette, Amherstburg, Ont., says, "I suffered for a long time from dizziness, pain in the back and sick headache, and nothing I took did me any good until I began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These cured me after taking six boxes and I now feel better than ever I did in my life. I had fallen off in weight to 92 pounds, and after taking the Pills I had increased to 140 pounds."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or can be had by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Tara

It would appear as though this neighborhood is infested with a gang of thieves. Several complaints have been lodged of whips, rugs and other articles being stolen out of buggies in the different sheds in Tara. Another theft took place on Sunday night when two young pigs were stolen from their pen belonging to Mr. Jas. Coleman, of the 17th Con Arran. If these thieves are caught the magistrates should not hesitate in giving the guilty parties a term in prison.

A meeting of lacrosse enthusiasts was held last night when it was decided to enter a team in the O. A. L. A. juvenile series. The following officers were elected President Geo Philpott, 1st Vice President Sydney Toop; 2nd Vice President James Collins, Secretary Roy Wilson; Treasurer, Donald Colwell; Managers, C. R. Vanduzen and R. I. Shannon; Committee of Management, Chisholm Grant, Bruce Armstrong, Louis McAsh, Jas. McCallum, Earl Putman, Jean Park and Adrian Black.

Mr. J. B. Rigg has accepted a position as leader of the band at Smiths Falls and will leave Tara with his family in a few weeks. Mr. Rigg will dispose of his business here. He has been a resident of Tara for the past twenty-six years and his many friends will be sorry to hear of his leaving.

OWEN SOUND

The rain on Saturday had the effect of keeping a number of farmers from coming to town, and consequently the market was not marked by the usual week-end activity in selling and buying. There was practically nothing doing in grain, while dealings in produce were confined almost exclusively to butter and eggs. Butter sold at 38c a pound and eggs at 32c a dozen, though a few sales of each were made at 29c and 22c respectively. A few dressed chickens were bought at 29c a lb. There was only one load of potatoes on the market, and they exchanged hands at $1.65 a bushel. It is likely that the grain market will be quiet until seeding is over. Fresh meat was also conspicuous by its absence, very little being done along this line being done once mild weather sets in.

Mr Fred Thornley, the owner of Grif fiths Island, has decided to enlist with the Forester's Battalion, which has been formed to assist in supplying timber requirements for the Allies, by taking down and sawing timber in France and England to supply the necessary material for trenches and other uses. Mr. Thornley left on Saturday for Quebec where he will join the battalion which will sail at a early date.

The drafting of fifty men from the 147th Battalion into the 5th Overseas Pioneer Battalion renders additional recruiting necessary in order to bring the 147th up to war strength. 200 men are needed and it should not be a difficult matter to secure this number if the young men of this county who are eligible for military service will only stop and consider the duty they owe to their King and country at the present time.

After the other business of the Ontario Legislature had been wound up and the House was about to prorogue, Mr. C. S. Cameron, M. P. P. was instrumental in obtaining the following grants for good roads in the county:

|---|---|
| Keppel | $1,000 |
| Sydenham | 1,000 |
| Derby | 500 |
| Sarawak | 375 |

These grants were obtained from the Provincial Government under the Colonization Roads Act on condition that each township expend an equal amount or more, and by-laws have been passed by the Municipal councils accordingly. Overseers of road improvement will be appointed at once and such appointments must have the approval of the Ontario Government.

In 1911 Keppel got $2,000 of a government grant for good roads and spent an equal amount of its own money. In 1915 the township got $1,000 and expended $2,000 or double the amount of the Government grant. This system of road making proved so satisfactory that the other municipalities have decided to take it up. The grants will be greatly appreciated by the municipalities and also by the public in general as indicating better roads for the County of Grey.

Capt. Rev. H. S. Mallowney received notification this week from Lieut. Col. G. F. McFarland, commanding officer, that his appointment to the position of Chaplain of the 147th battalion has been approved (provisionally). The appointment dates from March 31st. This definitely attaches Capt. Mallowney to the headquarters staff. Until the battalion receives its mobilization camp he will continue to minister to the congregation of the Baptist Church.

Walkerton

The Walkerton hotel keepers are entering into an agreement with the military headquarters here not to sell any stronger drinks over the local bars than lager beer, from 5 to 8 p.m. (which are the hours that soldiers may purchase booze) during the mobilization of the Battalion in Walkerton. As the soldiers foregather here on Monday next, the ordinance will go into force on that day, and neither civilians nor recruits will be able to exchange their cash for anything stronger than lager during the wet hours mentioned above. During the remainder of the selling day, when only civilians can purchase the moisture, the usual variety of booze will be sold over the licensed mahogany as heretofore. This limiting of the beer will, it is hoped, promote sobriety in the ranks and prevent any serious outbreaks or disturbances during the mobilization of the troops in town. The action of the militia authorities and hotelmen in taking this precautionary measure is most commendable and promises to go far towards making the historic gathering here something that the citizens and Battalion will both have reason to look back upon with the kindliest of feelings and the fondest recollections.

Mr. Arthur Lee, formerly of Walkerton, who has been in poor health at his home in Tara for the past few weeks, was taken by his brother, Mr. Richard Lee, of Walkerton, on Tuesday of last week to the General Hospital in Toronto where he is now undergoing treatment for internal hemorrhages caused by a bad fall on the sidewalk in Tara about a month ago.

At the annual meeting of the Walkerton Bowling Club held in the Town Hall on Friday evening last the following officers were elected for the ensuing year namely: President O. E. Klein, Vice President—R. M. Player, Secretary Treasurer—C. S. Stephan. The fixing of the date for the next bowling tournament here drew forth considerable discussion, many of the members thinking that Labor Day, on which the tournaments have been held in the past, was too late in the season, and the weather too cold and uncertain to ensure the fullest measure of success. A date in July or August was thought preferable by these, and as a result of some marked difference in opinion the question was left over to be decided at the next meeting on Friday night.

Pte. Wm. Barry, of the 48th Highlanders, who returned last week from battling at the front, was presented on Monday by the Dunkeld school section, in which he resides, with over $80 in gold, together with a complimentary address, which set forth the pride the section felt in their soldier hero and the valor exhibited by the Canadian forces at the Battle of Langemarck, where he was so severely wounded. The address was read by Mr. Thos. Chisholm and the presentation made by Miss Bernice Garland.

KINCARDINE paid $11,10 for hogs last week.

War is comming home to Owen Sound in the casualty list.

PROBABILITIES: June—Dry. July—Drier. August—Driest September—Driestest. Guelph Mercury.

Capt. Graham is recruiting officer for the 227th battalion with head quartors at Little Current.

AN effort is being made by North Bruce Liberals to induce Mr. Jas. Malcolm to go into politics. Mr Malcolm is said to be the most popular man in the town of Kincardine. Ripley Express.

THE Assessor in Kincardine reports a population of 2306, a total assessment of $999,320, 31 births, for the past year and 33 deaths. Apparently there are only 78 dogs in that town.

THE Walkerton barbers recently raised the price of hair cuts to 20 cents the eating price in other towns for many years, but business got so slack, and having a ruling for the appearance of the gentlemen of the town, they have dropped to 15 cents.

ON Sunday morning as we saw the soldiers march to church, headed by the band, the thought struck us that here is the hope of Canada, men that would have built up the Dominion, but we are offering them for the worlds freedom.

Wiarton, Lions Head and scores of other places will be pretty quiet now that the soldiers have left their recruiting points for mobilization but we will have to adjust ourselves to these enforced conditions.

Good Bye To The Boys

Soldiers of C company, who have been training at Wiarton, Cape Croker and Lions Head leave for Walkerton to morrow, where the whole battalion will mobilize before proceeding to camp in London. During the winter the recruiting has gone quickly on, and now the time for drilling in earnest will soon begin. During the winter the boys have had a good time and no one begrudges them all the fun they have enjoyed. Everyone wants them to remember this winter as one of the happiest in their lives. Hard work will soon begin and then overseas and then the war on our behalf.

Good bye, we are old and cannot go to the front, you are young and we honor you because you have done your duty, wherever you may go in whatever battle you may be engaged we will not forget you and our prayers is that you may have strength to strike a hard blow for the worlds freedom. and that you may return to Canada where you will be honored by those for whom you were willing to give your lives. There will be no better battalion at the front that the Bruce 160th and may your part in the greatest world's struggle be heroic—Au revoir.

ZION, AMABEL

Mr. John Walker is quit ill at present, and is under the Drs. care.

A few of the boys from this vicinity attended the social held at the parsonage Hepworth, Thursday evening.

MAR

The continued wet weather has badly interrupted the seeding operations.

Anton Jansen's smiling face was seen in Mar Sunday.

Mr A. Balls and sister attended divine service here Sunday.

Mr H. Hardman has rented his farm and gone sailing. The lure of the waters drew away, smooth sailing Herbert.

The Misses L. and A. Given and Miss H. White returned to their duties after a pleasant holiday at their respective homes here.

Miss Dinniwell our efficient teacher is again on duty.

Our soldier boys came marching home Sunday night, let us see to it they have a good time the next twenty days

The Rev. T. Brady of Toronto very acceptably occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church the last two Sundays and it is understood will take charge of this field for the summer months.

The Farmers Club had a rousing meeting last Tuesday when Messrs W. Warder and N. Landon of Spry sought to enlighten their fellow brethern on the inner workings of Club Government.

There passed away April 25th another of the pioneers of Bruce Peninsula in the person of Alexander White. Born near Colenham Badwickshire Scotland in the year 1837, when a mere lad he emigrated to Canada with his brothers and sisters and settled near Bowanville. After a time he and his brother Matthew came to Bruce Peninsula. Nearly sixty years ago, a year after the late John Dance and E. Cross here they started to make homes for themselves, four other brothers joined them and the place was known for many years as the "White Settlement" In the year 1868 the deceased married Annie McBride of Flesherton who predeceased him nine years ago. To them nine children were born, five of whom survive Mrs L. McMillan, Mrs C. Holler of Kindersly, Sask, Henry, Oliver and Matthew all of Mar. Two brothers also survive Matthew of this place and Edward White of Rivers, Manitoba. He was a lifelong member and worker of the Presbyterian church and in politics a Liberal Besides his family circle he will leave many a staunch friend with whom the loving memory of his large heart and sterling worth will long remain.

Gordon Craig

"Here, now, an' what are ye oop too, me fine buck?" he questioned roughly, swinging me about into the light. "Give an account o' yerself mighty quick 'er I'll run ye in."

The girl, still staring blankly at me, must have perceived how I instinctively shrank back, my lips moving in an impotent effort at speech. Some sudden impulse changed her fright into sympathy. She started forward just a step.

"Nothing in the least wrong, officer," her voice trembling slightly, yet sounding clearly distinct. "He—he was merely accompanying me home from a dance."

"What dance?"

"Over—over there on Forty-third street."

"An' do yer live here?" the gruff tone still vibrant with suspicion. "Yer if ye do yer're sure a new girl," and he peered at her shadowed face in the dim light. She drew in her breath sharply.

"No," her voice steadying, now she realized she must carry out the deception; "my place is three blocks yet, around the next corner."

"That's a pretty thin story, miss. Then what was the two ov yer doin' in here?"

"I had my foot on the step tying my shoe," she explained simply. "You don't arrest people for that, do you?"

It was plain enough the officer was puzzled, yet he reluctantly released his grip on my arm.

"It's half O' believe yer swingin' me roight now," he announced doubtfully, "but Ol'll give yer ther benefit o' the doubt. Don't let me run nersuse yer along this beat agin ternight. Go on, now!"

I felt her hand touch my sleeve timidly and caught a swift glimpse of her eyes. We must carry out the deception now and go away together. Without venturing to speak or glance around we walked forward into the enveloping mist. Her fingers, for appearances' sake, barely touched the rough cloth of my sleeve. All this had occurred so swiftly, so suddenly, that I was yet bewildered, unable to decide on a course of action. The girl, I noticed, was breathing heavily from excitement, her eyes cast down upon the wet pavement. Once, beneath the glow of the lamp at the first corner, I ventured to glance slyly aside at her in curiosity, mentally photographing the clear outline of her features, the strands of light brown hair straggling rebelliously from beneath the wide brim of the hat. There was more than a mere hint of character about that resolute mouth, the white contour of cheek.

At the second street intersection she turned east, advancing toward where passing trolley cars promised some life and activity, even at that late hour. Impulsively she stopped and faced me, her hands clasped.

"I—I—please—I will say good night now," she said, endeavoring to speak firmly, yet with no uplifting of the eyes.

Hesitatingly I stood still, feeling strangely embarrassed by this sudden dismissal.

"Do—do you mean you wish me to leave you alone on the street at this hour?" I questioned uneasily. "At least permit me to see you home safely. I will not hurt you or speak a word."

There was a tone of earnestness in my voice, but she only shook her head decisively, lips pressed close together.

"I—I am not afraid of—of you," she stammered at last doubtfully. "It is not that, but—but really I cannot permit you to accompany me farther."

"Only to the place where you said you lived," I urged eagerly. "I promise not even to take note of the number and will never bother you any more."

Her fine eyes hardened, then sank slowly before mine.

"That—that was a lie also," she acknowledged, half defiantly. "I—I do not live about here."

I stared at her in sudden doubt, yet remained loyal to my first impression.

"All the greater reason, then, for not leaving you here alone."

She laughed, a faint tinge of bitterness in the sound.

"Surely you cannot imagine I would feel any safer in company with a burglar?" she asked sharply.

My face flushed. I could not explain. It would require too long, and she would in all probability refuse to believe the story. Besides, what difference could it make? She had as much to explain as I; no more reason to suspect me than I had her. Let us meet, then, on common ground.

"If I grant your hasty guess to be partially correct," I returned finally, my voice deepening with earnestness, "and confess I was avoiding observation—what then? Can you not also believe me a man capable of treating you honorably?"

"Yes," she confessed reluctantly enough. "I—I believe I can."

"Then yield me the benefit of such charity of judgment," I went on. "At least give me an opportunity to exhibit my gratitude."

She remained silent, motionless.

"Why not? Is it because you have no confidence in me?" I insisted.

She put out one hand, grasping the iron rail of a fence, and I thought I could see her form tremble.

"Oh, no! It—it is not that exactly," she explained brokenly. "I believe I—I might trust you, but—but of course I do not know. I think you—you mean well. Your words sound honest, and your—your face inspires confidence. Only I have found so much deceit, so much cruelty and heartlessness in the world I have become afraid of every one. But I—I simply cannot let you go with me. Oh, please don't urge it!"

"I—I have no place to go!" she sobbed.

I leaned forward, my face full of sympathy, my voice low and earnest.

"You saved me from arrest, and I'll not leave you alone here in the street at this hour of the night."

She looked at me, her eyes wide open, shining like stars, her face picturing perplexity not unmixed with fear.

"I—I have no place to go!" she sobbed.

I drew in my breath sharply, my lips set in a straight line. Already had I half suspicioned this truth, and yet there was that about the girl—her manner, her words, even her dress—which would not permit me to class her among the homeless.

"My God, girl! And—and I actually believe you are hungry!"

Her eyes uplifted to my face dumb with agony, her hand grasp upon the rail tightening. Then she pitifully endeavored to smile.

"I—I am afraid I am, just a little."

I straightened up, with shoulders flung back. It was my time to act.

"Then that settles it. You are coming with me. There is a respectable all night place over there on Desmet street. I ate there once a week ago. We'll go together."

She drew back, clinging helplessly to the rail, her eyes on my face.

"Oh, you must not. I"—

My hand touched her arm.

"Yes, but I shall," I insisted almost sternly.

Feeling my determination she made no further resistance, and I half supported her as we moved slowly forward through the mist, her face turned away, her arm trembling beneath the firm clasp of my fingers. As we advanced I became conscious that my own position was an awkward one. I had no money of my own with me—not a cent other than those two $100 bills handed me by Vail. The uselessness of attempting to pass one of these was apparent. It would be better to plead lack of cash and put up some security if the man in charge refused credit. At whatever cost the girl must have food.

The all night restaurant through the glass front revealed a couch covered and a number of cloth draped tables awaiting occupants. A few of these were in use, a single waiter attending to the guests. A woman was scrubbing the floor under the cigar stand, while a round faced, rather genial looking young fellow stood leaning negligently against the cashier's desk. Rather doubtfully I glanced uneasily up and down the deserted street and then into the still averted face of my chance companion. I had no desire she should comprehend my dilemma.

"Would you mind waiting out here on the step a moment?" I questioned awkwardly, attempting to explain, "only until I make sure who are inside. There are some fellows I am not friendly with, and I am not hunting a roughhouse with a girl to look after. You won't care for just a minute, will you?"

"No," wearily; "I won't mind."

"You'll promise not to go away?"

She shook her head, her eyes staring dully in to the mist.

"No; I won't go away. Where could I go?"

Scarcely satisfied, yet feeling obliged to take the chance, I stepped within and advanced across the room toward the man at the cashier's desk. He

CANADA'S CALL FOR SERVICE AT HOME

Produce More and Save More — The Empire needs food. If you are not in the fighting line you may be in the producing line. Labour is limited—all the more reason to do more than ever before. Grow food for the men who are fighting for you. The Allies need all the food that you can produce. Every little helps. You are responsible for your own work. If you cannot produce as much as you would like, produce all you can. Work with the right spirit. Put fighting energy into your effort and produce now when it counts. The more you produce the more you can save. Producing and saving are war-service.

Make Your Labour Efficient — In war-time do not waste time and energy on unimportant and unprofitable work. Economize labour. Put off unproductive work till after the war, and, if possible, help in producing something needed now. Let us not waste labour. Canada needs it all. If possible help to feed the Allies. Make your backyard a productive garden. Cultivate it with a will. Make your labour count for as much as possible.

Do Not Waste Materials — There should be no waste in war-time. Canada could pay the annual interest on her war expenditure out of what we waste on our farms, in our factories, in our homes. Every pound of food saved from waste is as good as a pound of increased production. The way for a nation to save is for every individual to save. France is strong to-day because of thrift in time of peace. The men and women of Great Britain are not only "doing" but are learning to "do without."

Spend Your Money Wisely — Practise economy in the home by eliminating luxuries. Wasting our dollars here weakens our strength at the Front. Your savings will help Canada to finance the war. Save your money for the next Dominion War issue. There can be no better investment.

France Changes War Ministers

Like General Petain, the French commander in the Verdun battle, General Roques, the new Minister of War, has been suddenly lifted from the recesses of absolute anonymity at the front, to the very front part of the stage where the limelight plays. Though General Roques has been the commander of an army, just as General Petain, his name had not been mentioned in the general news columns of the French papers until the day he was made Minister of War. No illustrated paper had carried his picture. There had been no "write-ups" of his career. His promotions inside the army after the war started had passed completely unnoticed, as far as the general public went. The Minister of War is, therefore, practically an unknown man, says the Paris correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle unknown as far as politics goes. Why he was picked to succeed General Gallieni is not yet clear, except that he is a close personal friend of General Joffre, which was not exactly true of his predecessor. Nominally, the Minister of War is the superior of the Commander-in-Chief, but as things stand now, the Commander-in-Chief of the army insists on having a pretty free hand, and gets it.

Not Mentioned Till Appointed.

Though the resignation of General Gallieni was not announced officially until his successor was already chosen, there had been some discussion about various candidates. One report had it that Premier Briand would take the Ministry of War portfolio, instead of that of Foreign Affairs. Others said that there was some talk of having General Joffre himself named as Minister of War, but that the radical wing of the Chamber objected. A third rumor was to the effect that General Lyautey, the French Governor-General of Morocco, would be chosen, and this version got some color from the fact that General Lyautey, who had been making a visit to Paris, was suddenly detained longer than had been expected. Another candidate was found in Senator Charles Humbert, a former captain in the artillery, who is now the editor of the Journal, one of the big Paris dailies. No one mentioned General Roques until the day he was selected.

Stolid French Leaders.

Not yet 58 years old, the new Minister of War is a comparatively young man. It is noticeable that while all the men in high command at the beginning of the war were over 60, all of the men who have come to the front recently are under that age. General Roques was was born December 28, 1858, at Marseilles in the Herault Department, which is on the Mediterranean coast of France. A great number of the prominent French Generals were born in the south, including General Joffre himself. They have strains of the Basque race in their blood, rather than the Gascon, or Provencal, and are calm, solid men. Like General Joffre, General Roques has had the training of an engineer. In 1873, he entered the Ecole Polytechnique, where the French army engineers are educated and two years later he was graduated at the head of his class. General Joffre had gone through the same course a few years before, his studies being interrupted by the war with Prussia. Young Roques first spent some years with a French regiment in the south, and then spent five years in Algeria, which the French armies were then reconquering, and organizing. In 1882 he was made a captain, and three years later went to Tonkin in the French Indo-China, where he took part in the expedition of Admiral Courbet. General Joffre, then a major, was at that time head of the engineering division of the same expedition.

Service in Africa

In 1888 he returned to Paris and stayed there until four years later, when he took part in a French expedition to Africa, the object of which was to capture Abomey, the capital of Dahomey, on the Slave Coast. On December 25th 1892, he was hit by a bullet in the stomach, but as it struck the buckle of his belt he was but slightly wounded. While on the trip he was made a major, and on his return the following Spring, he was attached to a regiment at Versailles. In 1897 he went to Madagascar to build railroads, and there he found General Joffre, who was building forts, and General Gallieni, who was Governor of the island. In 1901 he was made a colonel, but was kept in Madagascar until 1906, when he was called to Paris to succeed General Joffre as director of the Engineering Division in the Ministry of War. On March 25, 1906, he was made a general.

In the Present War.

While attached to the Ministry of War he was the first director of aeronautics in the French war service, and from 1910 to 1912 he gave his time exclusively to this branch of the army. He may be said to be the creator of the French military aviation. In 1912 he was transferred to the command of a division at Paris, and on August 8, 1913, he was given command of an army corps, with headquarters at Limoges. There he was when the war broke out. Since January 6, 1916 or a little over a year, he has been in command of the First Army in the eastern battle-front. It was he who directed the bloody attacks on Eparges last spring while other armies were attacking Arras. His object in reducing the angle in the line at St. Mihiel was not accomplished but he beat back the German line so as to give more "breathing space" to Verdun, a space much needed during the recent battle. Though he failed in reducing the whole angle, which in turn would have enable the French to seriously bombard Metz, he did not earn the displeasure of General Joffre on that account. The two men have been intimate friends for years.

"This typewriting gets on my nerves." "Now I'm well and enjoy my work."

Neurasthenia or Exhaustion of the Nervous System.

It is quite possible for the nervous system to be considerably exhausted before you realize the seriousness of your condition. You do not feel up to the mark, are easily tired out, worry over little things, and get cross and irritable, but do not consider yourself sick.

For this reason we shall give an outline of the symptoms so that you may be warned in time and use preventive treatment at a time when it will do the most good.

1. General discomfort—excitement and depression alternating.
2. Headache and sometimes dizziness, and deafness.
3. Disturbed, restless, unrefreshing sleep, interrupted by dreams.
4. Weakness of memory, particularly of recent events.
5. Blurring sight, noises and ringing in the ears.
6. Disturbance of sensibility or feeling, as in hands, or, with women, in the breasts.
7. Coldness of parts of body or flushing and sweats.
8. Lack of tone, easily fatigued, dyspepsia.
9. Fear to be alone, or in a crowd, fear of things falling, fear of travelling, etc.

These symptoms indicate that the nerves are being starved for lack of rich, red blood. Certain elements are lacking which can best be supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This cure is easily available and awaits alone your action in applying it. There is no question of the merits of this food cure. Enquiry among your friends will prove to you that many thousands of women, and men, too, are being restored to health and vigor by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Presentation and Address.

At North Keppel settlement on the evening of Friday the 21st of April a very pleasant time was spent at the home of Mr Geo T. Graham where over one hundred neighbors met to present Ptes. Robert Stott, Jas Stott, Fred Carder, Geo. Cameron and Edwin Thompson with beautiful rings, the evening was spent in music, and dancing, at 12 o'clock a dainty lunch was served. The following is the address to the boys.

Dear Friends—

On the eve of your departure we desire to express to you in this small way our appreciation of the sacrifice you have made in putting on the khaki and leaving home and friends to fight for King and Country. While it is not possible for all of us to follow your example we wish you to know that your action in doing this is appreciated by your friends, and your homecoming and safe return will be anxiously awaited by all of us at the conclusion of a victorious struggle. Those who have gone before have upheld the good name of Keppel and when you are called upon to take your place in the line we know that you will not allow that record to be tarnished.

We ask you to accept these rings as a small token of our good will and in wearing them to remember that your progress will be watched with interest by your many Keppel friends who will endeavor in a fuller way to express their appreciation of your patriotism at the time of your return.

Signed
Mr R. McLachin
Mr J. Owen
Mr G. Graham

Mr. J. Grierson, representing Messrs. McMahon, Granger & Co., of London, paid us a call last week.

Mr. J. O'Brien, representing McPherson, Glasgow, & Co of Hamilton, was here on bnsiness last week.

Born—On May 4th, 1916. to Mr. and Mrs. Clark Bridge, a daughter.

Mr. Christ Getcke, representing the McCormick Mfg. Co., was here last week on business.

The representative of the Galt Metal and Siding Co., was here last week and secured orders for several buildings from the intending builders here.

Mr. Glendillon spent Monday in Wiarton on business

Messrs. K. B. and Allan McLay passed through here on Saturday on their way home from Ripley, where they attended the funeral of their mother.

Death again visited our community and took from us on Thursday May 4th, 1916, Neta Mildred the only and beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Tyndall, aged 15 years 6 months and 27 days. after a lingering illness though it came suddenly and unexpectedly at the last The service was conducted at the residence on Sunday May 7th at 1 30 o'clock, after which the cortege proceeded to Eastnor cemetery where interment took place. The late girl's casket was covered with wreaths and flowers. Much sympathy is extended to the sorrowing parents, brothers and relatives in this sad hour of bereavement.

A quiet wedding took place in town with Rev. Fletcher, of the Presbyterian church officiating at 10.30 a. m. on Monday, when Christina, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm C. McDonald, of Lindsay, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Murdock, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McIvor. of Stokes Bay. The bridal couple were attended by Miss Lang and Mr. Chas McDonald, brother of the bride. The bride was dressed in a gown of white satin. Shortly after the ceremony the young couple left for the bride's home where a sumptuous dinner was served. They then left for St. Catharines where Mr. McIver is employed The correspondent and readers all join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. McIver all success in their journey through life.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, of Tara, attended the funeral of the latter's neice, and also visited her brothers Messrs. Walter and Fred Warder.

Mr. Richard Ceasar, accompanied by his sister, visited friends here last week.

Mr. Arthur representing Lemon Bros., Owen. was here on busines on Monday and Tuesday.

Corporals Butchart and Warren. who have been attending military school in London, spent a few days at their homes here before going to Walkerton.

We understand that Pte. H. Oswald. who went to London to attend military school has been rejected and will return home shortly.

Our village was the scene of many changes last week as Mr. John McIver has moved to the cottage recently purchased and fitted up by Mr. Gardener, Mr George McLean moving into the unoccupied house while Roderick McKay occupied this and Mr. Fred Warder into the house recently vacated by Roderick, Mr. Leslie Martindale moved his family to the light house at the Basin, while John Livingstoce moves there and Herbert Strong into the vacated house by J. Livingston while Mr. McArthur occupied the house vacated by H. Strong, soon as one made the start all moved.

Mr. Geo. McLean has been erecting a barber shop on the site recently destroyed by fire

Miss Ida Tackaberry is erecting a millinery shop on the foundation beside the town hall but will be occupied by Ernest until his store is completed.

Some of the farmers have been busy getting the ground in shape for sowing. Mr. Walter Warder has all beaten as he has finished seeding.

Frank Bryan Skips Out

Frank Bryan, who has been running a hotel at Stokes Bay, skipped out last week and left for parts unknown. He was getting tired of the job, but his departure was somewhat hurried. Inspector Reany was in town last week on his way to Stokes Bay, having been notified that there was some work there that needed his attention. He met Bryan in Wiarton and arranged to see him later in the day, but Bryan did not keep the appointment. He evidently thought that the Grank Trunk would serve him a better turn than a conversation with the license inspector. A few days ago some girls, who have been familiar with the house, told the constable where he could secure some liquor and it is reported that Lindsay Myles found two jugs of whiskey in the bush. Frank did not wait for further developments or to put in a defence. These fines of $300, or so many months in gool, scare people far more than the measles, and yet Bryan was apparently in no immediate danger. The liquor was not found on his premises. However it is known that he was not struck on his job. The simple truth is that it is no doubt impossible to run a hotel at Stokes Bay without selling liquor and it is just as impossible to run it by selling liquor for the people will not tolerate selling liquor without license any longer.

After the Cement Plant

It is just possible that the Crown Portland Cement plant will be sold and instead of cement there will be manufactured magnesia, hydrate of lime, potash etc A number of engineers were in town last Thursday investigating the proposition. and it is understood that they will make a favorable report. It is known that an option has been obtained on the plant, and probably a company is now being formed. One of the engineers expects to return to town very soon.

Lawn Bowlers Organize

At the annual meeting of the Wiarton Lawn Bowlers Association held last Friday evening the following officers were appointed

Hon President—A. E. Jackson
President—D. J Hunter
Vice President—R. J. Miller
Secretary—T. C. Allan

Made Supreme Sacrifice

"From somewhere in Belgium" came the sad news this past week to Mrs. Charles Gray, Oxenden, that on April 26th her husband was wounded in action and on Monday she learned that he had died on April 29th, thus making the supreme sacrifice for his King and Country. The late Private Charles Gray came to Oxenden in April 1913 and on March 18th, 1914 was married to Miss Annie Walpole. When war was declared he was anxious to enlist, but it was not until last August that he became attached to the Queen's Own Rifles. Toronto, This gallant soldier was very favorably known in Oxenden and there is universal r gret that he is dead, but all are proud that his name is on the honor roll. He was only 21 years of age.

Miss Wright, of Flesherton, came last week to take her sister's school at Ferndale.

We understand that the tug Mystery intends making two trips to Owen Sound weekly this summer.

The dentist made his usual monthly visits here on Monday and Tuesday

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. McLay and D. McIvor of Lindsay, passed through here on Monday evening to their homes after attending the funeral of their mother in Ripley last week.

Worthy of Attention

Walkerton, May 8th, 1916

Dear Sir:

After the 160th Bruce Overseas Battalion has left the County of Bruce, there will be little or nothing for the Bruce County War Auxiliary to do, and I would respectfully suggest that before the battalion leaves for training at London, "and when fully mobilized" that a meeting of the prominent men of the County of Bruce be held in Walkerton for the purpose of organizing a Bruce County Patriotic League.

If there is one thing in which we as a county have fallen short it is perhaps in an organization to help our county. Now, we can do this and also assist our country as well. For instance the league could very properly take up the following:

1. Arrange for employment of soldiers who return
2. Encourage admiration of disabled war heroes of Bruce.
3. To induce retired farmers to return to the land.
4. To assist in future recruiting when necessary.
5. Assist and encourage Immigration to the county.
6. To instill patriotism in the rising generation.
7. To boost the County of Bruce in general.

Now, I am sending this circular to 150 men in the county, and if fifty of them reply in five days favorably, I will invite all the people in Bruce to assemble for the purpose of taking progressive steps to put Bruce in the front ranks as a county organized for the benefit of all classes in agriculture. industry. education and patriotism. Will you help in this very worthy work? Will you give a day of your time to this proposition? Then notify me by return of mail that you will attend

Let us as men who have remained "beside the stuff" while our strong sons are fighting for us, seek to make the home county strong in co-operation and help for all classes.

Yours sincerely,
A. B. KLEIN,
President Bruce War Auxiliary.

Southampton

Last Friday evening the ladies of Southampton gave a banquet in the town hall to the local contingent of the 160th (Bruce) Battalion. The tables were set in the dining room of the hall, and a dainty sight they presented being decorated with flags and flowers, besides being laden with an abundance of good things to eat. The ladies certainly provided to reach the hearts of the soldier boys if they could be reached through their stomach. There were about one hundred soldiers seated at the tables, and about a dozen invited guests were grouped at a table at the end of the hall. A score of young ladies acted as waitresses, and many of the older ladies who had provided the provender sat near and watched the gastronomic feats. Nobody seemed to fear indigestion, and soon it was the chairs which were creaking instead of the tables. A few outside soldiers were guests, one noticed being Sergt.-Major Nairn, of Walkerton.

The death occurred last Saturday night at the Park hotel of Mr. T. Johnston, brother of Mrs. Wm. Knowles. Deceased was about fifty years of age and a bachelor, was a victim of cancer. He had been brought from Toronto hospital a couple of weeks ago by Mrs Knowles. The funeral took place at Tara cemetery on Tuesday. The deceased's father, Mr. Johnston came here from Vancouver and was here for the funeral.

Mr. Roy McVittie is home from the Manitoulin Island for a couple of weeks. It is some fifteen months since he went there to batch and this is his first visit home since.

Walkerton

The breaking of their horse's bit, as they drove off to church on Sunday morning resulted in a serious accident to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dussman, a recently married couple of Culross Tp. The former sustained two fractures of his leg, one a compound fracture and a bad dislocation of his ankle. He also suffered some internal injury, but not serious it is hoped. His wife has no bones broken but is still confined to her bed through shock and the bad shaking up which she received.

The Bruce Battalion is now 1025 strong, or nearly 200 over strength. The surplus of 250 men for a base company will soon be reached. The Grey Battalion, which started recruiting about four months before Bruce, is still away short of strength, and murmurings about conscription are heard from that quarter.

At a joint meeting of the Red Cross and Patriotic Societies held in the town hall on Friday evening last, it was decided to institute a two days' canvass in Walkerton on May the 18th and 19th, and to strive to raise the sum of $12,000 for Red Cross and Patriotic purposes.

The sum is based on $4 per head of the town's population, which according to Organizer, A. M. Miller, of Toronto, who was present and addressed the meeting, is the average sum per head raised by most places putting on such canvasses in Ontario. Committees are being chosen, and six to ten captains will be appointed who will organise teams and make a house to house canvass. A big public meeting will be held here on May 17th, when a prominent official from the Speaker's Patriotic League will be present and address the gathering.

Chesley

Joseph McNeel, manager of the Bank of Hamilton and treasurer of the local Patriotic Fund and War Auxiliary received a telegram on Thursday April 27th announcing that his son, Joseph Harold McNeel, had been killed in action at St. Eloi in France on April 16th. Harold left Chesley with the first contingent in August 1914 and in October of the same year was transferred to the Bermudas where he remained till August 1915 when his regiment left for England and in November 1915 crossed over to France and had been at the front till he fell in action. Mr and Mrs McNeel received a personal letter from Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, as follows: "Will you accept my sincere sympathy and condolence in the decease of that worthy citizen and heroic soldier, your son, Pte. Joseph Harold McNeel. While one cannot too deeply mourn the loss of such a brave comrade above is consolation in knowing that he did his duty fearlessly and well and gave his life for the cause of liberty and the upbuilding of the Empire. I again extend to you my heartfelt sympathy."

Messrs C. J. Mickle, Wm. Krug, M. A. Halliday, Mayor Halliday and Wm. McDonald were in Walkerton last week interviewing Col. Weir in regard to getting the bugle band to Chesley for Pte. Harold McNeel's funeral and the whole Bruce Battalion for the King's birthday, June 3. Col. Weir said there was nothing too good for Chesley if had done so well in recruiting and donations for patriotic purposes, and if the minister of militia gives his permission the battalion will be here. The matter is all settled subject to approval from Ottawa. The whole battalion will march from Walkerton to Chesley. It will be the biggest day in the history of this town as probably ten thousand visitors will be in Chesley that day.

Hard Working Women

Will Find New Strength Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

It is useless to tell a hard working woman to take life easily and not to worry. Every woman at the head of a house; every girl in offices, shops and factories is subjected to more or less worry. Those cannot be avoided. But it is the duty of every woman and every girl to save her strength as much as possible, and to build up her system to meet unusual demands. Her future health depends upon it. To guard against a break-down in health the blood must be kept rich, red and pure. To keep the blood in this condition nothing can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They strengthen the nerves, restore the appetite, bring the glow of health to pallid cheeks, and renewed energy to listless people. Women cannot always rest when they should, but they can keep up their strength and keep away diseases by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. A. Rhodes, Hamilton, Ont., says: "A few years ago on coming to Canada, working long hours, and close confinement began to tell upon me. I was completely run down, finally could do no work. I was pale, suffered from headaches, did not rest well, and felt altogether very miserable. The doctor said the trouble was anaemia, and after doctoring for some weeks without getting any relief, I decided to drop the doctor and take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Very soon I began to notice a change for the better, and by the time I had used a half dozen boxes of the Pill's I was again enjoying the best of health. I have never had any return of the sickness and never felt better in my life than I do now. I I give my experience, therefore, that it may be used for the benefit of others."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

Showing a Roof Covered with Brantford Slates in Solid Color.

There is Safety Under This Roof

Have you ever had a fine job of decorating spoiled by a leaking roof? If you have, you certainly are in a position to appreciate the value of a roof that is positively water-proof. Some of the troubles common to wooden shingles to-day are that they are apt to split, warp or show rot as well as leak, soon after they are put on. Years ago they were good, but the quality has since gradually depreciated as the available supply of suitable timber became exhausted.

Brantford Slates have none of the faults of wooden shingles. They cannot rust. They do not allow rain to be driven under them as do metal roofs. They do not require rigid supporting as do the common tile or slate roofs. On the other hand Brantford Slates afford the utmost protection with little weight. They are made on a long-fibred felt "base" which is thoroughly saturated under pressure with asphaltum or mineral pitch. Crushed quarried slate particles are then deeply embedded in the surface of this "base", making it water-tight and fireproof.

Brantford Roofing

Brantford Slates are made in the natural slate colors of green, red, black and grey. The colors never fade and the slates do not require painting nor repairing. These slates are pliable and fit readily around gables and into the angles of any roof. They form a continuous roof without seams or joints. Sparks do not affect Brantford Slates. When you have these slates "on" you are done with repairs. Remember they don't require painting, or staining and may be obtained to harmonize with almost any exterior color design, and the price is not beyond your reach. We would be pleased to send you samples and our Roofing Booklet.

Showing a Roof Covered with Brantford Slates in Solid Color.

There is Safety Under This Roof

Have you ever had a fine job of decorating spoiled by a leaking roof? If you have, you certainly are in a position to appreciate the value of a roof that is positively water-proof. Some of the troubles common to wooden shingles to-day are that they are apt to split, warp or blow off as well as leak, soon after they are put on. Years ago they were good, but the quality has since gradually depreciated as the available supply of suitable timber became exhausted.

Brantford Slates have none of the faults of wooden shingles. They cannot rust. They do not allow rain to be driven under them as do metal roofs. They do not require rigid supporting as do the common tile or slate roofs. On the other hand Brantford Slates afford the utmost protection with little weight. They are made on a long-fibred felt "base" which is thoroughly saturated under pressure with asphaltum or mineral pitch. Crushed quarried slate particles are then deeply embedded in the surface of this "base", making it water-tight and fireproof.

Brantford Roofing

Brantford Slates are made in the natural slate colors of green, red, black and grey. The colors never fade and the slates do not require painting nor repairing. These slates are pliable and fit readily around gables and into the angles of any roof. They form a continuous roof without seams or joints. Sparks do not penetrate Slates. When you have these slates "on" you are done with [illegible]. Remember they don't require painting or staining and may be relied to harmonize with almost any exterior color design, and the price is not beyond your reach. We would be pleased to send you samples and our Roofing Booklet.

German Appeals For Peace a Sign of the End?

Crown Prince Manages to Take a Few Trenches.

Lord Robert Cecil Dealing with Teuton Expressions of Peaceful Desires, Says Entente Allies Cannot Stop Until Aim is Achieved—Pope Sends an Appeal for Peace to President Wilson.

Attacks of Thursday and Friday Covered by a Bombardment With Gas Shells Result in Teutonic Division Occupying Part of the North Slopes of the Hill—Heavy Shelling Preceded the Operations.

LONDON, May 8.—Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade, and Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in a statement given to the Associated Press, deals with the charges against Great Britain and Germany's avowed desire for peace as contained in the German reply to the note of the United States on submarine warfare.

After recalling alleged inhumane practices by Germany, through employment of submarines, Zeppelins, poisoned gas, and high-explosive shells, Lord Robert, on the issue of peace says:

"Of the German peace overtures, if such they are to be called, I will say little. It was only in last December that their Chancellor declared that we believed it to be in our interests to attribute falsely to them peace proposals. Yet the German Government now says that twice within the last few months Germany has announced before the world her readiness to make peace. Which is the truth?

"It may be that the Germans want peace. If so, it is because they fear defeat. It may be only that they want to appear peaceful.

"For us it matters not. Our attitude, at any rate, is unchanged. We drew the sword unwillingly. We shall sheathe it gladly, but we should be untrue to our trust, we should be betraying civilization, if we abandoned our task until we have re-established in Europe the supremacy of law, the sanctity of treaties, and the right of all nations, great and small, to live their lives, to fulfil their destinies, free from the intolerable menace of Prussian militarism."

The statement is a defence of the British blockade on the sea. In reference to the German claim of the British intention to starve millions of women and children, "who by their sufferings will force the victorious armies of the central powers into ignominious capitulation," Lord Robert quotes remarks of the German Chancellor last month in the Reichstag, in which the declaration was made that Germany had sufficient food for all with a surplus, and which concluded: "We have not run short of anything in the past, nor shall we run short of anything in the future."

Statements by Prince Bismarck and Count Caprivi, dealing with the rights of belligerents to cut off the food supplies of any enemy, are also contained in the communication as a defence of the British stand.

Pope Seeks Peace.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—A new appeal for peace from Pope Benedict to President Wilson was delivered at the White House Saturday by the Papal Delegate, Monsignor Giovanni Bonzano. The Pope urged the President to maintain his neutrality and to do his utmost by mediation to bring peace to Europe. Coming only 24 hours after the German note, in which similar hints appear, officials decided that the message was based on appeals from the Central Empires.

The President did not see Monsignor Bonzano, and it is unlikely that he will heed either the appeal of the Pope or the obscure hints of the German Government. He notified the belligerents early in the war that he was ready to act as mediator on the request of any one of them, but he has refused to interfere of his own initiative or on suggestions from outside sources.

The President read with careful attention Sunday the portion of the note touching on peace. Unusual significance was attached to that part of the note because it was taken to indicate officially that recent speeches of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg before the Reichstag were intended as notices to the world that Germany was ready for peace on certain terms.

The note says: "The German Government, conscious of Germany's strength, twice within the last few months announced before the world its readiness to make peace on a basis safeguarding Germany's vital interests, thus indicating it is not Germany's fault if peace is still withheld from the nations of Europe."

It was thought Sunday the German note might possibly draw forth something from the Allies. The papal plea could well pave the way to such a course.

TWELVE MEN SAVED.

Survivors of Zeppelin Crew Captured at Salonica.

LONDON, May 8.—A British official statement issued Sunday afternoon says:

"A further report has been received from Vice-Admiral DeRobeck concerning the Zeppelin brought down at Salonica. It is now stated that survivors of the crew have been found and that four officers and eight men have been made prisoners."

"A more detailed report has been received of the destruction of the Zeppelin L7," says an official statement given out here Sunday. "It now appears that, though severely damaged by H.M. ships Galatea and Phaeton, her destruction was completed by a British submarine commanded by Lieut. Commander F. Feilman, which rescued seven of the Zeppelin's crew and has returned with them.

"She was attacked and slightly injured by a German cruiser on her return voyage."

PARIS, May 8.—A determined effort is being made by the Crown Prince's army to take Hill 304, the important height on the west bank of the Meuse, south-east of Haucourt and between the Bois d'Avecourt and Le Mort Homme. As a result of the attacks made Thursday and Friday at this point, covered by a bombardment with gas shells, the Germans succeeded in occupying a part of the French trenches on the north slopes of the hill. In order to do this the Germans brought up a fresh division from another part of the front.

The preliminary bombardment against this sector began several days ago and continued all day Friday and Friday night, attaining a violence before the infantry attack described in the War Office communique as "unprecedented."

The German attack on Hill 304 was continued Saturday and Sunday, the attacking forces making another gain Sunday to the east of the hill.

The assault which gained this latest success for Crown Prince's troops on this side of the Meuse was made after an extremely heavy bombardment which had continued unceasingly for two days. The front attacked extended from Hill 304 to Le Mort Homme, with the Valley of the Bethincourt Brook in the middle of the line.

At first all the German attacks were repulsed, but after these had been repeated time after time the attacking forces won a foothold in the French positions on the eastern slopes of the hill as they sloped down toward the Bethincourt Brook. It already has been remarked by military observers that this brook is obviously one of the weak points, tactically, of the French defensive line. This obvious weakness in the topographical situation, it is presumed, has been balanced in the defence plans by the use of the batteries on Le Mort Homme and Hill 304, and by whatever mobile force was regarded as necessary for the holding of the valley itself.

BIG CAMP ABANDONED.

Turks Are Fleeing Before Russian Advance in Asia Minor.

LONDON, May 8.—The Russians continue to advance in the direction of Bagdad. After dislodging the Turks from their positions in the neighborhood of the village of Serinkelrind, the Russians bayoneted the defenders and occupied the position. Sunday's Petrograd official says: "In the direction of Bagdad since our occupation of the organized points of the Serinalkerind position the Turks, having sustained heavy losses, retired hastily, abandoning a great many tents and other material. It has now been established that by the occupation of Trebizond we captured eight mounted coast guns, fourteen six-inch guns, one field gun, a thousand rifles, fifty-three caissons, and other important booty.

"In the direction of Erzingan we repulsed a Turkish offensive supported by artillery."

RUSSIAN TRANSPORT SUNK?

Berlin Claims to Have Destroyed One in Mediterranean.

BERLIN, May 8.—The sinking of an allied transport in the Mediterranean late in April, with the loss of nearly all the 600 Russian troops who were on board, is reported in advices from Corfu, says the Overseas News Agency Sunday. The transport was sunk by striking a mine about the same time the British battleship Russell met a similar fate, the advices state.

The news agency statement regarding the reported sinking is as follows:

"According to reliable reports from Corfu, in addition to the battleship Russell, a transport steamer with 600 Russians on board struck a mine and sank. Only a few were rescued. The bodies recovered were buried by the British at Malta."

This story needs confirmation from other sources before it can be given credence.

Jealousy Causes Three Deaths.

PONZANO, Italy, May 7.—Captain Bettolo, a member of a leading Rome family, in a fit of jealousy Sunday slew his wife and committed suicide.

Captain Bettolo returned from the front and sought the Abbe Giacomo Serra, of whom he was jealous. Arriving at the parish house of the Abbe, Captain Bettolo fired through the window, one of his bullets killing the Abbe Nicolo Richetta. Abbe Serra was not hit. Afterward the captain returned to his home and killed his wife and then committed suicide. He was a nephew of the late Admiral Bettolo, once Minister of Marine.

Brazilian Steamer Torpedoed.

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, May 8.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs has received a telegram from the Brazilian Minister in London announcing that the crew of the Brazilian steamship Rio Branco sunk last week, presumably off the English coast, confirm announcements that the vessel was torpedoed by a German submarine.

A despatch from Rio Janeiro on May 4 stated that official telegrams received there announced that the Rio Branco had been sent to the bottom by a torpedo.

COMMERCE RAIDER OUT.

Fabre Liner Reports Being Chased by German Craft.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The arrival here Sunday of the steamship Venezia, of the Fabre Line, with the news that she had been chased and fired upon by a German commerce destroyer caused considerable uneasiness in shipping circles.

The Venezia was formerly a passenger steamship plying between Marseilles and New York, but since the war she has been converted into a freight vessel, and runs between Bordeaux and New York.

While the commander of the Venezia, Captain Boniface, refuses to discuss the pursuit of his ship by the commerce destroyer, one of the crew volunteered the information that the enemy appeared suddenly while they were off the Azores and about three days out from Bordeaux. He says the strange vessel loomed up without any flag showing, and bore down on the Venezia.

The raiding craft kept up with the apparent intention of getting closer to the Venezia, but the absence of her flag made Captain Boniface suspicious, and he made preparations for a sudden dash. The approaching steamship signaled to the Venezia to slow down, but Captain Boniface made out several guns on her deck and was convinced she was a German commerce destroyer and signaled for full speed.

As the Venezia started to bear away a shot passed over her. This was followed by another, which dropped close to the Venezia. Before a third shot was fired the Venezia had increased the distance between her and the commerce destroyer, so that the efforts to overhaul her proved unsuccessful.

For several hours the commerce destroyer pursued the Venezia, but the French steamship had the superior speed and managed to leave the pursuer far behind, not sighting nor hearing from her on the remainder of the voyage.

It was learned that the raider was evidently a merchantman which had been converted into an auxiliary cruiser.

NEW MILITARY CAMP.

Twenty Thousand Acres Purchased at Pine Plain, Near Barrie.

TORONTO, May 8.—Ontario is to have a new military camp that will far surpass Valcartier in every respect as an ideal place for the training of troops for overseas service. It will supersede Niagara and other camps in the western part of the Province. The new camp will be at Pine Plain, in Simcoe County, some ten miles from Barrie, where the Government has acquired a site of 20,000 acres, approximately 28 square miles. Construction work is to be started immediately and rushed with all possible speed. Everything must be completed and ready for the reception of 25,000 troops by June 1 next. This was the definite announcement made by General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, Sunday night on his return to the city after making an inspection of the property.

It is about equi-distant from Barrie and Allliston, west and south from the village of Angus. The soil is of a sandy nature, and was formerly heavily timbered with pine. It has good natural drainage and two rivers, the Dam and Pine, and Bear Creek, run through it. It is approached by the Grand Trunk Railway, Collingwood branch, and the company will construct additional tracks and sidings into the camp. There are a number of farms on the site, but it is not anticipated there will be any difficulty in getting the owners to vacate immediately. The new camp may also be reached by the C. P. R., which is not far from its western boundary, but, according to the present arrangements, the Grand Trunk will be the only company having direct access to it.

TWO AEROPLANES LOST.

Naval Air Craft Are Missing, Says British Government.

LONDON, May 8.—The German Admiralty reports: "British submarine E-31 was sunk west of Horn Reefs (on the Danish coast) by artillery fire of a German ship on May 5."

This is untrue, the British Admiralty reports, the E-31 having returned safely to its base. The claim of the German Admiralty that one British aeroplane was destroyed and another captured by torpedo boats off the Flanders coast is admitted by the British.

The Germans admit that the Zeppelin L-7, which has been reported by the British as destroyed in the North Sea, failed to return from a reconnoitring trip.

The British communication says: "With reference to the official German report published Sunday, it is a fact two naval aeroplanes are missing. The body of Flight Sub-Lieut. H. R. Sinclair has been picked up at sea and Observer Sub-Lieut. C. J. Mullens is missing. A lifebelt has been picked up in the vicinity.

"Regarding the aeroplane reported captured by the Germans, the names of the officers concerned are Flight Sub-Lieut. Arthur T. N. Cowley and Sub-Lieut. Ronald Mingo.

"The German claim that British submarine E-31 was sunk by gunfire is untrue, the vessel having returned safely to her base."

Sick Arrive From Kut-el-Amara.

LONDON, May 8.—The War Office issued the following statement Sunday night:

"General Sir Percy Lake, commander-in-chief of the British forces in Mesopotamia, reports that the second and third parties, composed of 453 sick and wounded, from Kut-el-Amara reached the British headquarters of the Tigris corps Thursday and Friday.

LISTOWEL'S population is 2355 a drop of 62 since last year.

THE population of Durham is 1596, a decrease of 106 during the past year.

MORE than 500 soldiers of the Bruce Battalion are assisting in seeding operations.

IT is now hinted by some writers that the great offensive of the allies will be next Spring.

ON account of the unfavorable weather the soldiers will probably be allowed a longer furlough on the farms.

THE public in Britain have been asked to abstain from meat every Thursday and alcohol every Monday in the interest of economy.

SOME of the chartered banks claim that fifty per cent of their clerks have enlisted and that their places are being satisfactorily filled with girls.

WITH the war debt that we will incur, and two transcontinental lines of railway practically bankrupt and which may have to be taken over it is quite evident that Canada has burdens we did not dream of a few years ago.

COL. WEIR must be more careful. In answer to a deputation from Chesley who asked for the Bruce Battalion on the King's birthday, he said yes—nothing, he said, is too good for Chesley. The Chesley people take remarks like these seriously.

SINCE the war began there has not been a great deal of economy shown, money has been plentiful, but if the war continues throughout 1917 it is evident that the prices of many commodities will be much higher and the sooner the Canadian people return to frugal ways of living the better.

AN automobile owner informed The Echo of an apparent injustice to owners of cars in this district, and all other districts with a similar climate. Every car owner must pay $10 to the government for a license and while in Toronto the cars can run practically twelve months in the year, yet they can only be operated six months in this northern country. Why then should the owner of a car in Wiarton pay the same price for a license as a car owner in Toronto? This is one of the many unfair things in this world.

THE local nimrods, who have developed an appetite for partridge, will feel pained at the announcement that the legislature proposes to prohibit the shooting of partridge until October 15, 1918, giving the birds two years' deliverance from the inroads of the gunner. The open season for hare is to be extended.

THE age, occupation, and religious denomination to which every Private of the 160th Bruce Battalion belongs was given in the the special edition of the Walkerton Telescope. Private Henderson Cole went to the trouble of enumerating the members and adherents of the different churches who responded to the call and this is the result: Presbyterians 454, Methodists 345, Anglicans 203, Roman Catholics 92, Baptists 72, no church preference 14 Evangelicals 8, Latter Day Saints 7, Salvation Army 7, Lutherans 3, Mennonites 3, Congregationalists 2, Protestant 1, Dutch Reform 1, United Brethren 1.

Wiarton Not Known

THE recent issue, the battalion number, of The Walkerton Telescope, was rather remarkable for what it did not contain. Wiarton has had the idea that it is in Bruce County, that it was busy recruiting all winter, yet no mention is made of this burg at all. Possibly the reason is due to the basic fact that Walkerton instead of regarding itself as one of the towns in Bruce County always considers Bruce County to be in Walkerton. At all events it is surpassingly strange that the town that lead in recruiting should have been unnoticed. When the work of the formation of the Bruce Battalion was undertaken the quota that the the Peninsula from Hepworth to Tobermory was asked to raise was 250 men. This was considered quite a contract, but the number was reached, and the number, who enlisted between these points, was 350, by all odds the best recruiting in the County. This work, and these splendid results, were entirely due to the patriotic spirit of the people here. And notwithstanding the fact Walkerton and the contiguous townships had been put in the shade, and made to look like a punched nickel, we did not ask for the mobilization of the Battalion at this point. Our idea was that the boys should be drilling as soon as possible. And there is probably not a village nor town in Bruce County, outside of Walkerton that thinks very much of the mobilization going on there now. The country is being put to a lot of expense for nothing, and the money instead of going into Walkerton's pocket, should have been spent at the recruiting points until the battalion went to London.

Letter from Cpl. Bennett and Pte. Pollard to Red Cross Girls

Somewhere in Belgium
To Red Cross Girls

Your parcels of tobacco to hand on 17 April, many thanks for such an unexpected and welcome surprise. One of our greatest troubles out here is to get chewing tobacco so it was an exceptional treat when yours arrived safely.

We are in the best of health and spirits and ready for anything The winter was pretty hard, much different to the winters in Canada, at times the weather was just awful I think this must be the muddiest place there is during the winter months. Our Battalion kept in pretty good condition though, and we had very few cases of sickness. We are back from the trenches for a short rest and are billeted in very comfortable quarters with a town not very far away. It is quite a treat to be away from the firing line and to see some buildings that are complete. It makes one think to see the fine buildings that have been battered into a heap resembling more of a brick yard than anything else. The country from where we are now looks so nice and fresh that one would hardly think there was a war on except when there's a roar that lets you know that the guns are working overtime and can see the burst of shells. We were in a bombardment a short time ago and it is almost indescribable, it is awful and yet grand to see, there are big guns, field guns, small guns, machine guns, "75"s trench mortors and everything that is calculated to be of use. and at a signal they all out loose together the effect got from the whole is such that a thunder storm is almost like a church parade compared to it. We had quite a few casualities the last time we were in the firing line, among them was Sgt Emmerton of Kincardine, who was wounded in the face with shrapnel, I hear his wound is pretty serious, the remainder of the Bruce boys are all well as far as we know. We get quite a lot of the Wiarton news here as Mrs. Durst sends the Echo each week and Mrs. Daw and Mrs Bennett write to us frequently. It is nearing bedtime so will close wishing you all success we remain

Yours sincerely
William Bennett

MOTHER'S DAY ON SUNDAY, MAY 14th

Mother's Day is celebrated on the second Sunday in May, chiefly in the United States, but also to some extent in Canada, and the observance has spread to Australia. A white carnation, used as the emblem of the day, was selected because "its whiteness stands for purity, its for beauty its fragrance for love, its wide field of growth for charity." It is urged that everybody on Mother's Day show by some tribute his (or her) love and respect for his mother, if living by, a letter, if absent from home, by a visit or gift; if dead, by some kind deed to another. The celebration owes its existence to the effort of Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia. Her mother died in 1905 and the daughter resolved that on the anniversary she would observe the day in her memory. It occurred to her that others might feel the same appeal, and she wrote to editors, clergymen and men in public affairs and received pledges of assistance.

glanced up curiously as I approached and spoke low so as not to attract the attention of others. To my good luck he was an ex-army man and willing to trust me for two meals. When I returned to the girl she was waiting motionless, her back to the window, and when I spoke followed me in without a word. I led the way to the secluded table behind the screen, seated her and took the chair opposite. Without questioning her wishes I ordered for both, the girl sitting in silence, her face bent low over the menu card, a red flush on either cheek.

"What will you have to drink?" I asked as the waiter turned aside. "I'd rather like a cocktail to drive the wet out of my system. Shall I make it two?"

She glanced up quickly from under shading lashes, her eyes, big and brown, meeting my own.

"I prefer coffee. That will be quite sufficient."

I ordered coffee, too, and we sat there waiting without further speech, she nervously fingering the card, her eyes veiled by lowered lashes. I glanced cautiously across at her, conscious of my cheap clothing and vaguely wondering why my usual offhand address had so suddenly failed. I felt embarrassed, unable to break the silence by any sensible utterance. My eyes rested upon her hands, white, slender, ringless. They were hands of refinement, and my gaze, fascinated by the swiftly recurring memory of other days, arose slowly to a contemplation of her face. It was a womanly face, strong, true, filled with character, not so apt, perhaps, to be considered pretty as lovable—a face to awaken confidence and trust; a low, broad forehead, shadowed still by the wide brimmed hat, and the glossy brown hair; the skin clear, the cheeks rounded and slightly flushed by excitement; the lips full and finely arched; the chin firm and smooth. She suddenly glanced up questioningly.

"You—you do not at all understand my position, do you?" she asked timidly. "I mean why I should be homeless, on the street, alone at—at such an hour?"

"No," I responded, surprised into frankness. "I do not understand, but shall we not permit the whole matter to rest and pretend at being friends for the moment? You have already acknowledged being both homeless and hungry. What more do I know to be of assistance? The cause of such a condition is no business of mine, unless you choose to tell me voluntarily."

She continued to gaze at me, her eyes misty, yet full of wonderment. My language was not that of the slums, nor were my manners. To her I must have seemed as strange a character as she appeared to me. We were both advancing blindly through the dark.

"You are also," she affirmed finally, as if half regretting the words. "You are just as penniless as I."

"Why should you say that?"

"Because I know." And by now her eyes were blinded by the tears clinging to her lashes. "You—you humiliated yourself to serve me. You had no money. I watched through the window, and—and I almost ran away, only my promise held me."

I laughed uneasily, yet relieved almost at once, leaning across the table, all earlier embarrassment vanished.

"Well, even so that it would not be my fault, or position," I said swiftly. "Poverty is extremely unpleasant, but not a crime. Do not let that unfortunate condition of my exchequer spoil your appetite, my girl. I can assure you that is among the least of my troubles. Good luck or bad, I am not the sort to desert a woman in distress."

"You are a man of some education?"

"Two years at the university."

"And now?"

I smiled grimly, determined to admit the worst.

"Little better than a tramp. I suppose, although I have held a job lately—driving for a lumber yard across the river." Then I told her of my former life and my army career.

A moment she sat in silence, her eyes lowered to the table.

CHAPTER III.
Her Story.

"I HAVE had experience also," she said. "I used to believe this world was just a beautiful playground. I never dreamed what it really means to be hungry and homeless, to be alone among strangers. I had read of such things, but they never seemed real or possible. But I know it all now; all the utter loneliness of a great city. Why it is easier to fall than to stand, and, oh, I was so desperate tonight! I—I actually believe I had come to the very end of the struggle. Whatever happens—whatever possibly can happen to me hereafter—I shall never again be the same thoughtless creature, never again become uncharitable to others in misery. Why were you at that house and so afraid of the police?"

"Well, that is a long story," I replied hesitatingly. "I had been talking with some men inside who had offered me work and good pay. There was a reason why I did not wish to be seen coming out at that hour."

"You—not anything criminal?"

"No; I've confessed to being a good for nothing, but I'm clear of crime."

She drew a long breath of relief.

"I do not quite believe," she said firmly. "You—you do not look like that."

I laughed in spite of my efforts.

"I am delighted to have you say so. No more do I feel like that now. Yet so the record reads, and you must accept me just as I am or not at all. I have nothing else to offer."

"Perhaps I have no more."

"I have asked no explanation of you."

"True, yet you cannot be devoid of curiosity. You meet me after midnight, wandering alone in the streets; you see me boldly, shamelessly, interfering to prevent the arrest of a strange man; you hear me deliberately falsify again and again. What could you think of such a woman?"

"You ask my individual judgment or that of the world?"

"Yours, of course. I know the other already."

I extended my hand across the table and placed it over her own. A swift flush sprang to her cheeks, but she made no effort to draw away. The action was so natural.

"I have no desire to pry into your secret," I said. "I am content to remain grateful, to count this a red letter day, because somehow, out of the mystery of the dark, we have thus been brought together. An old professor used to say all life hinges on little things, and I believe our chance meeting is going to change both our lives and for the better."

"You mean you accept me upon trust?"

"Certainly; even as you must accept me. I have no letters of recommendation."

She was again looking directly toward me, her brown eyes earnest and fearless.

"I—I am afraid you will not understand. You can scarcely appreciate how strictly I have been brought up or what such an unconventional meeting as this means to me. I ought to be ashamed of myself."

"But are you?"

"Really I—I do not seem to be. It almost frightens me to realize I am not. I do not understand myself at all. Why should I talk thus frankly with you? Why feel confidence in you? It is not in accordance with the rules of my old life nor of my nature. Such actions would shock those who know me. They ought to shock me. Am I in a dream from which I am going to awaken presently? Is that the explanation?"

I shook my head.

"No. You have only been thrown against the real world. You find it not to be what you supposed. It is no cause for shame or regret. Womanhood lies deeper than any pretense at gentility. Men seldom fail to recognize this fact. Their lives of struggle compel them to, but a woman finds it hard to understand."

"To understand what?"

"How any man meeting her as I have you—in the street at night, under conditions society would frown at—can still feel for her a profound respect and pay her the deference which a gentleman must always extend to one he deems worthy."

For a long moment she did not speak, but withdrew her hand from beneath mine, resting her chin in its palm.

"What is your name?" she asked finally.

"Gordon Craig."

The lashes drooped quickly, securely shadowing the brown depths, the flush deepening on her cheeks. In the momentary hush that followed the waiter came shuffling forward with our order.

I had never supposed I lacked audacity, yet I found it strangely difficult to again pick up our conversation. This woman puzzled me—was becoming an enigma. Her eyes again glanced up and met mine.

"It is a terrible experience being penniless and alone," she said with a shudder. "I can never condemn some forms of evil as I once did, for now I have felt temptation myself. I—I have even learned to doubt my own strength of character. I—I am glad I met you. I think you have saved me from myself."

"You asked me my name," I broke in eagerly. "Would you mind telling me who you are?"

"I?" the clear cheeks reddening. "Why, I am only a fool."

"Then there is, at least, one tie between us. But if we are to remain friends I must know how to address you."

Her red lips parted doubtfully, her brow wrinkling.

"Yes, and we cannot afford to be conventional, can we? I am Viola Bernard, and I must tell my story to some one. I can fight fate alone no longer. Perhaps I may not confess everything, for I do not know you well enough for that, but enough at least so you will no longer suspect that I—I am a bad woman."

"I could never really believe that."

"Oh, yes, you could. I have read in your face that my character puzzles you. You invited me to drink a cocktail to try me. Don't protest, for really I do not wonder at it or blame you in the least. How could you think otherwise? There is a home I could return to, and a mother, but they are more than a thousand miles from here. But I cannot go, even if I possessed the means, because of my pride—my false pride possibly. I have chosen my course and must abide by it to the end."

She drew a long breath, speaking very slowly.

"It is a hard story to tell, for the wound is still fresh and hurts. I was upon the stage—not long, but with sufficient success so that I had become leading woman with one of the best stock companies. It was against my mother's wish I entered the profession, and she has never become reconciled to it, although our relationship remained pleasant. A few months ago while playing in Omaha I met Fred Bernard. I knew little of him, but he appeared gentlemanly and well to do and was presented to me by one in whom I had confidence. He was pleasant and apparently in love with me. I liked him, was flattered by his attentions and discouraged in my ambition. When he asked me to marry him conditions were such that I accepted, even consented under his urging to an immediate ceremony. We came to this city, were quietly married here and occupied a flat on the north side. My husband did no work, but received remittances from home and apparently had plenty of means. He told me little about himself or his condition, but promised to take me to his people in a little while. He said his father was wealthy, but eccentric; that he had told him of our marriage, but there had been a quarrel between them, and he could not take me there without an invitation. I was never shown the letters, but they bore southern postmarks."

She paused, hesitating, her eyes full of pain.

"I—I was afraid to question, for—for he proved so different after our marriage. He was a drunkard, abusive and quarrelsome. I had never before been in intimate contact with any one like that, and I was afraid of him. Whatever of love I might have felt died within me under abuse. He struck me the second day, and from that moment I dreaded his homecoming. For weeks I scarcely saw him sober, and his treatment of me was brutal."

Tears were in her eyes, but she held them back, forcing herself to go on.

"Then he was gone two days and nights, leaving me alone. He reappeared the third evening in the worst condition I had ever seen him. He acted like a veritable savage, cursing and striking at me and finally drove me from the house, flourishing a revolver in my face and locking the door behind me. I—I sat there on the steps an hour and endeavored to go back, but there was no response. I walked the streets and then—having a little money with me—found a place to lodge. The next day I went back, but the flat was locked still, and neighbors said my husband had left with a traveling bag. I—I was actually thrown out upon the streets to starve."

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. At any drug store.

Her voice lowered so that I was compelled to lean closer to catch the rapidly spoken words.

"At first I—I was not altogether sorry. I thought it would be easy to find work. I was not afraid of that, but—but it was not easy. Oh, how hard I tried! I faced open insult, cowardly insinuation, brutal coarseness. If I had been skilled in any business line my reception might have been different; if I possessed recommendations or could have frankly confessed the truth perhaps I might have been given a chance. I endeavored so hard to discover some opening; I even sought domestic service and was examined as though I was a horse on sale. I walked the streets; I refused to despair or permit myself to believe failure possible. I went home at night, tired out, to a little rented room in Forty-ninth street, prayed as I used to when a child, cried myself to sleep, only—to wake up the next morning determined to continue. I was not weak then; I was as strong as any girl could be. I—I fought it out to the very last"—her head suddenly drooping—"but—but the end came just the same. Perhaps I should never have hung on so long; perhaps it would have been better to have sent word to my mother and asked help to go home. But—but I kept hoping to succeed until it was too late. I spent all the little money I had and pawned my rings. I had married against my mother's wish. I could not turn to her for help. Oh, I was tempted; I think you must know what I mean! You realize what temptation is—how it weakens and conquers the soul?"

I closed my hand firmly over hers.

"Yes, I know."

Her sensitive face brightened, her eyes clearing of mist.

"It is a comfort to speak with a gentleman again. I—I had almost begun to believe there were none left in the world. You give me courage to go on, to acknowledge everything. Mr. Craig, I was a soul tottering on the brink when I met you out yonder—a desperate, disheartened girl, tempted to the point of surrender."

My fingers closed yet more tightly over the small hand, but her face remained rigid, the lines deep about the mouth.

"The landlady had turned me out," speaking now bitterly and swiftly, "retaining my few belongings. I had nothing left—nothing. For a week I had listened to no kind word, met with no kind act. I was upon the street alone at night, purposeless, homeless, wandering aimlessly from place to place, weakened by hunger, stupefied by despair.

Better Roads in Bruce

SIR,—As thousands of auto owners are now applying for license for the next six months the thought of "Where Bruce County is drifting in regard to her leading roads" looms up so strongly in my mind that I have written this little article. Many letters have lately appeared in various papers of this province, some of which criticized the auto tax, some the increase for 1916, while others made serious complaints because the government does not return the money thus collected to the municipalities whose auto owners have contributed to that fund.

Under certain conditions there should be no objection to a fair auto tax. I object to the increase for 1916. But the suggestion that "the government should return this money to the municipalities composing this county" would be unfair to those counties which have taxed themselves two-thirds the cost of constructing their leading roads, and this some of them have been doing for a long time. The government is not to blame in this matter. In 1902 it took a certain initiative in promoting leading roads and irrespective of politics I believe, they will stick to this Good Roads Act, through its improved amendments.

The fault of this money not coming back lies with each successive county council. I have been told that I am to a certain extent guilty of this negligence since I had the honor of being a member of that body for a few years. In answer to that let me refer your readers to a report I submitted to the county council in 1910, which is incorporated in the minutes of that session, and which advised the council to take up the Good Roads scheme.

Of course, I am well aware many county councillors are usually very cautious in taking up a new thing in voting even a small amount of money, though it were the best move possible, unless they were sure of its approval by their supporters. Caution is a good thing and is always necessary but it is often carried too far.

Among other things in that report was that the government had already voted $1,000,000 towards one-third the cost of constructing leading roads in the province also the prediction that very much more would be voted when required and that it would yet be contributing toward the maintenance.

There was an agitation to have the government assume one-half the cost of constructing the road. All these suggestions have been incorporated in the act. Let us not be afraid of this thing because a few counties have made a mess of it by building a good road at every man's door for his vote. They built a lot of miles to do this, with little money and did not do permanent work. As the act originally did not require the government to contribute towards maintenance there was nothing done by the government and the county did nothing, hence the failure. Has not experience taught us this spring, that where a road is well crowned; well drained with proper slopes to good ditches and covered with lots of good gravel, there was no sign of rut, whereas, if there were no crown, no ditches, little gravel it would be a mire like too many of our roads were this spring. Bad roads cost more money than good roads.

However the building of our leading roads under the Good Roads Scheme is bound to come for necessity demands it and circumstances will force it. I am not suggesting that the people pay out a lot of money just because other counties are doing it. It is because the principle is the best we have, if properly carried out. I submit it is the only way we can handle our leading roads and save the auto tax from going into other counties to build good roads for other people.

I have heard it suggested that the county council should not take the matter up for four or five years at least as we have a big war tax to pay. About that time we will be in the thickest of our war tax. But we can pay it. It is the easy part of the war. Just think of what Fort Elgin has contributed to the war. From 1916 to '20 inclusive the auto owners of this county will have paid anywhere from $60,000 to $70,000 or more into the provincial treasury to be paid out as one-half the governments share of one half the cost of constructing and maintaining leading roads in other counties. Are we going to stand for that? Surely not.

When the Good Roads Act was passed the government did not have much or any idea of an auto tax. The intention was to pay one-third of the cost of the leading roads out of the general funds of the province, which it had a perfect right to do. I would suppose that the government gets more money from the auto tax just now than it pays out towards good roads, and what will be the condition of things a few years hence. That being the case the government should assume a larger percentage than one-half the cost. If not it will be paying nothing out of the general funds of the treasury. You will notice that our auto owners would be paying the government's share of the one-half the cost of the road and also his share of the other half which would be the county's proportion.

What kick should come from the man with the horse and buggy? The light auto is no harder on the road than the single driver which cuts the centre right out of the road, whereas in the case of the auto the gravel in the centre will spread out slowly to the wheel tracks. It is altogether probable that the light auto is the one the masses are going to buy, for during the last year ending a few months ago there were 22,070 autos sold in Canada, of this number 17,500 were Fords most of which were 22½ h.p. This would leave 4 570 cars to the credit of all other makes. Farmers seldom go one way in anything unless it be a good thing and if a successful tried out competitor appears on the scene they will divide up.

As far as other than leading roads are concerned I believe the time is not far hence when there will be a large amount of money to come back these municipalities as their share of this tax but the time is not yet. Put the money on the leading roads first. It cannot be said statute labor is not a fair success in this section. Of course a few road beats have too far to haul their gravel and they should be getting help from the council but some o hes beats would not have a good road under the best possible conditions. Agitation and agitation alone would make the statute labor system a general success. But remember statute labor cannot keep up a leading road

It is not expected that this letter will meet the approval of all the people I have no objection to friendly criticism if it does nothing else than draw out other people's opinions on the matter it will have served a good purpose. Dear only knows there is need for some more enthusiasm on the good roads question.

In conclusion let me re-iterate that I am not asking you to pay out a lot of money Rather I am asking you to get back every cent we are paying out in auto tax and as much more as we can get from the general funds of the province even if we do pay out a little more money to get it. Money is not everything.

Everything is good in its place. The bile, which, under certain conditions, causes so much distress, is of the greatest value as an antiseptic and cathartic when it is properly handled by the liver.

The chief function of the liver seems to be the filtering of bile from the blood, where it acts as a poison, and pouring it into the intestines, where it hastens the course of the food mass through the alimentary canal, and by its antiseptic influence prevents fermentation of the food.

When you suffer from biliousness and indigestion and have a coated tongue, bitter taste in the mouth, headaches and loss of appetite, you will do well to look to the condition of the liver. Other symptoms are wind on the stomach, which causes belching, and the formation of gas, which gives rise to dizziness and pains about the heart.

Because the liver has failed, the food in the alimentary canal is fermenting instead of being digested, looseness and constipation of the bowels alternate, the whole digestive system is thrown out of order and the blood is poisoned.

By immediately awakening the action of the liver and bowels, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills affords relief for this condition most promptly. On this account they are generally recognized as the most effective cure for biliousness, liver complaint, indigestion, constipation, and the pains and aches which arise from poisons in the blood. The benefits are lasting because this medicine removes the cause of trouble.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE

The annual meeting of the Epworth League was held on Monday evening last. The various departments brought in good reports. Missions show an increase. The Junior League is in a flourishing condition. Before electing officers Rev. Mr. Prudham addressed the gathering on 'The Standard of Efficiency." By use of a thermometer he showed the degree of efficiency in the local league. The following officers were elected.

"Lowe Brothers Hard Drying Floor Paint is just the thing for our old floors—

"It is easy to apply—we can do it ourselves—and so inexpensive. It wears well, too, and makes the floors much easier to keep clean, thus making them more sanitary for the children to play upon. There is quite a variety of attractive colors to choose from."

Lowe Brothers Hard Drying Floor Paint is made especially for use on floors where more expensive finishes are not desired. It dries hard enough in twelve hours to walk upon. Get a color card at our store.

The Town Council

The recent ruling of the Post Office Department loomed large Monday evening and the Town Council is petitioning the department to reverse the same. The townships on the Peninsula are moving in the matter and a whole grist of petitions will go to Ottawa It is felt that an long established way of doing business is being injured. The petition after calling the attention to the fact that parcels under 11 pound can no longer be carried by express or sent with the mail driver, but must go parcel post says "this will be an inconvenience and loss to the residents of the Peninsula, and to the merchants and citizens of this town. Practically all the merchants here trade with the Peninsula, and the goods are sent by the mail carrier. The contributions of the Post Office Department to the maintenance of the service are only incidental and the contractor will drop $500 per year by this ruling. The petition maintains that it is a grave injustice to a sparsely settled district. Mr. J. E. Sutherby stated the grievance and the above petition is the outcome.

The scavenger, who is leaving town, sent in his resignation and a successor will be secured.

If Coun Plante has his way there will not be many specimens of the canine breed roaming the streets unless their necks are adorned with a tag. He does not propose to tie their tails together as Sampson did with the foxes, but he will simply put them out of business. Some of the dog owners objected to his destructive stand. They thought it hardship enough to pay the tax without punishing the dog by placing a collar around its neck. Finally after a long discussion it was decided that the neck of the dog must be adorned with the tag from May 15 to June 15.

The Council talked crushed stone for some time. They want 500 yards for the town, and Albemarle wants the crusher so any man who crushes stone for the town will get 87 1-2 cents per yd and 12 1-2 cents per yd will be charged for the use of the crusher if it goes to Albemarle.

Walkerton

The mobilization of the Bruce Battalion which has been going on for the past week has resulted in some 800 soldiers being quartered here. A large number are still out on the farms, but as seeding advances these will be gradually finding their way into town and before another week closes the present force will be greatly augmented here. A more orderly lot of men have never assembled in town, and Walkerton, which began to fear a repetition of the disturbances in some other places, is being agreeably surprised at the sobriety and gentlemanly conduct of the soldiers, and will look back at the visit of the gallant Bruce boys as the happiest event and the most glorious epoch in the history of the town.

Chester Clendening, a former Walkerton boy, now with a Pioneer Battalion in France, is to be decorated for conspicuous bravery. This news was received here on Monday in a letter from Ed. Erdman to his mother. Ed. says that a Canadian Engineer and four Pioneers, of which Chester Clendening was one, pulled off a daring night stunt in front of the German trenches for which all five are to be decorated. Chester is a son of Mr. W. S. Clendening, formerly Public School Inspector here, but now of Delburne, Alta.

Rev. Thos. Wilson enjoyed a visit this week from his brother, Rev. Wm. Wilson, of Saskatoon, and together they visited their brother Rev. J. R. Wilson, of Rothsay, on Monday. Of five brothers in the Wilson family four are in the ministry. The two not mentioned are Rev. Alex. Wilson, of Mandaumin, and Capt. Eric Wilson, who is Paymaster of a Hamilton Batt.

At a meeting of the Town Council on Monday night the poll tax in Walkerton was increased from $1.00 to $5.00. This is the first direct hit that the Town Council has made at the bachelors who are not otherwise taxed, and have failed to put on the khaki. With marriage licenses jumping from $2 to $5 on Monday next, bachelors who try to dodge the new municipal rate by embarking on the matrimonial sea will run against the high license snag. Single blessedness has indeed grown to be a joke for the men here, when the rates are boosted on those who stay in the game and the costs increased on those who try to get out.

Walkerton is preparing for one of the biggest crowds in its history on May 24th, when a big Field Day and Monster Military Demonstration will be held here. As the hotels will be unable to feed the crowds the I. O. D. E. and other ladies organizations are making arrangements to cope with the difficulty and provided the necessary accommodation in this respect.

Eric Ramsay, son of Mr and Mrs. M. J. Ramsay, was the victim of a nasty accident while playing baseball on Saturday afternoon. He was catching behind the bat and a backward swing by the batsman caught him on one side of the nose. The force of the blow smashed the cartilage almost to a pulp although the bridge of the nose was not fractured. For a time it was feared that his eyesight might be affected. On Sunday Eric was operated on at the County Hospital and the injured organ is now making good progress towards recovery.

Chesley

Rev W. E. Phillips will be on Bruce Peninsula all this week acting as the bishop's commissioner for reassessing the assessment of the parish.

A pioneer settler of Bentwick Township passed to his reward on April 28th in the person of Mr John Gillies who would have been 91 years had he lived till May 7th. Deceased was born in Roxboroughshire, Scotland and came to America at the age of 20 years. He spent about a year in the state of Connecticut, a couple of years at Brantford, Ontario, and settled at Lot 2 Concession 13, Bentinck in 1858. He was a man of great vitality and had seen considerable hard work before his bush farm became cleared and improved. In religion he was a staunch Presbyterian and in politics a liberal. The only living relatives of this grand old pioneer father are a sister in Scotland, a son Alex R. a miller in Grand Rapids, Mich another son and daughter, Robert and Barbara on the old homestead.

Tara

The following figures have been supplied to The Leader by assessor Monkman, taken from the Tara assessment roll for 1916. Value of land, $38,620; value of buildings $153,915; business $15,002'60. Total assessment $207,537.60; exemptions $19,150; population 590. number of males between 21 and 60, 113; births 6; deaths 2.

Division Court was held on Tuesday before His Honor Judge Greig. The case which seemed to create the most interest was that of "The Skipness telephone Co." vs Messrs. Aiken Baker and Colleridge members of the Allenford Telephone Co. It would appear from the evidence produced that The Skipness Telephone Co. was the parent company and that through dissatisfaction the Allenford members of the Skipness Co. broke away and formed a new company, calling it the Allenford Telephone Co., and consequently Mr. J. K. Davidson was instructed by the Skipness Telephone Co. to sever the line of the defendants. The President and Secretary of the Skipness line, Messrs. J. K. Davidson and Henry Aiken gave evidence that the dissatisfied members did not get permission from the parent company to break away and form a new company. but that without sanction they did so, and formed a new line calling it the Allenford line. The plaintiffs sued Mr. A. Aiken, Mr. Geo. Baker and Mr. Wm. Colleridge for amount of assessment which had been paid to the new line and which the plaintiffs claimed should have been paid to the Skipness Telephone Co. the parent company.

Thin-Blooded People

Often Become Seriously Ill Before They Realize It

Some people have a tendency to become thin-blooded just as others have an inherited tendency to rheumatism or nervous disorders. The condition in which the blood becomes so thin that the whole body suffers comes on so gradually that anyone with a natural disposition in that direction should watch the symptoms carefully. Bloodlessness can be corected more easily in the earlier stage than later. It begins with a tired feeling that rest does not overcome, the complexion becomes pale, slight exertion produce breathlessness and headaches and backaches frequently follow. In the treatment of trouble due to thin blood no other medicine has had such a great success as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They go right to the root of the trouble, make rich, red blood, thus restoring the weakened system to health and strength. Mr. R. F. Ashford, Peterboro, Ont., says: "Four years ago my condition become so serious that it seemed to me I possessed every pain and ache and every morbid feeling possible. For months I had been overworked, and bereavement added the last straw necessary to break down my constitution. I had a severe ever-present headache and pains in the back of my eyes, and at the same time I was seldom free from severe neuralgia pains. I was rarely hungry, and when I was it seemed to create a morbidness which made my other ills harder to bear. Of course I consulted a doctor, and he told me a rest and change of air, just the thing I was unable in the circumstance to take. I had a particular bad spell on the day my daughter returned from college, and she insisted that I should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was decidedly skeptical, but she got some and to please her I took them. The result—After the first box I was compelled to admit that I really did feel better. After the second box I undrudgingly admitted that they were doing me good, and after the sixth box I felt free from every ache and pain and in gratitude I began to praise the Pills to others. I am feeling as fit as I did twenty years ago and I owe it to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

Reply to Reeve Whicher

Purple Valley, May 9th, 1916.
Editor of The Echo.

Sir,—Kindly allow me space for a reply to the letter of a recent issue signed by Reeve Whicher and headlined "The Albemarle Road System", but which should have been "The Mud Road Construction Co. So I will just follow up his letter in which he says I express very pronounced views on things in Albemarle over the road system.

TIME TO SAY SOMETHING

I must say it is time every ratepayer in the township expressed his views on the road system. which has been forced upon the ratepayers during the past year and the same state of things is going to exist this year, in opposition to the majority of the ratepayers Mr. Whicher states in his letter that he dislikes newspaper discussions, yet he fills up nearly two columns of reading matter of the same information as the public got last year all from different sources, and with one exception from non-residents of the township. I would ask the Reeve, who has the most interest in the township affairs? The people who are doing the work and improvements or the non residents?

FORCED ON THE TOWNSHIP

The letter goes on to say. The Albemarle Council of 1915 recognized the many weaknesses of road expenditure decided to inaugurate a new system, yes but the council of 1915 was divided in the form of your by-law and you forced it on the township and on the majority of ratepayers. In the first place did not the grading and piling up mud and sods on some of the good roads that we previously had cost the township $800.00 or over. Who got the money? And I just ask what state was our roads in last fall, or the first week of the previous month this year. The Reeve also states Mr. Hipwell in reporting congratulated Albemarle on being the first township to adopt good road system, but Mr. Hipwell inspected our roads in the dry weather at their very best. If he had driven over them last fall or this spring he soon would have lost his opinion.

THE SYSTEM ITSELF

Now as regards this system, you say more was accomplished in 1915 than in five years previous at a reduced expenditure of $2674.38. This we deny and I ask you to prove it for we got the government grant and supplement, and Co. grant and left the township $1500.00 behind where it was only $500. behind the last year that Ex-Reeve Givens held office, besides worse roads to-day than either two or five years ago. You also stated that the public interest is much more safeguarded by transferring of inspection to road superintendant subject to the approval of the whole council but I can tell the ratepayers that their interests are not taken into consideration whatever in no one clause of the by-law. In the last year's expenditure there was not a single item of road expenses placed before the council for approval, there was also a new bridge built near the mill, and which was extended 8 or 10 feet more than was needed without the consent of the council, and cost the township about $100. Who supplied the material and derived the benefit of it? I suppose this is what you mean by the by-law providing for safety and protection of public interests, and that the system is not popular with certain individuals, but it seems to suit fine in some cases, and without consent of the council. And who are the individuals to-day who are distributing favors without check or question.

THE LAST ELECTION

Again in regard to last municipal election, which you say was run on the road question and owing to lack of effort and over confidence, Mr. Lemcke was defeated. Why? Because you stated that he was one of the party who helped you to inaugurate the road system, and and was not the most strenuous efforts used to disqualify both myself and Mr. Adams, did not the last nomination prove it when we were requested to sign papers, which was the last method to be resorted to disqualify both of us. did not you, yourself in your canvass for votes always request parties not to forget your friends, Mr. Couch and Mr. Lemcke. Why did you want a council of your own choice? And lastly did not your own vote drop from 96 of a majority to 58 in the last election? Why? Because the ratepayers are not in favor of the way you worked the road system last year, but which you could have worked out to the satisfaction of all if you wished to have done so. I am just as interested in good roads as any one, but at the present time I do not think it advisable to sink the township just for the benefit of piling mud on our roads and thus providing for the safety of public interests. Thanking you for space in your paper.

Yours truly
Chas J Craig.

Yesterday and To-day

Wooden shingles of twenty or thirty years ago were of splendid quality, and answered the purpose very well. There was nothing better at that time. In fact no other roofing material was on the market. Yet who would think of putting on shingles to-day? When the deterioration of wooden shingles became noticeable, efforts were made to invent a roofing that would not only be an economical and permanent substitute for wooden shingles, but one that would outlast them in service.

Brantford Roofing was the result. It has "made good." The secret of its success is this: First, the base is of pure, long-fibred felt which is thoroughly saturated with asphalt or mineral pitch. The asphalt and crystal roll roofings are then thickly coated with crushed rock particles, which adhere tightly to that base, and the whole forms a permanent fireproof, water-tight roof.

Brantford Asphalt and Rubber Roofing are made in three different weights. Crystal is made in heavy weight only, and in red or green natural colors. All three grades are pliable and well suited to either flat or steep roofs.

Brantford Roofing

comes in rolls with protected ends. The layers do not stick together and the roofing is easily laid. It requires no painting or tarring when put on. It does not crack with the cold nor melt with the summer's heat. It does not curl, split, rust or blow off. It gives permanent weather and fire protection at a reasonably low initial cost.

May we send you our roofing book and samples? They will show you the real value of these roofing materials.

Editorial

THERE are 1647 people who call the burg of Southampton home.

TORONTO'S tax rate in 1925 may be 35 mills, well we have ten years the start of them.

UNDER draining has been of great value to farmers this Spring. Those who have been fortunate enough to have gone to this expense have been justified for their outlay.

THERE are not many retired farmers in this district; but the few there are better hike back to the land. That is the spot where they can serve their King and Country.

AT the Listowel Dairymen's Exchange a bid of 18 5-8 cents per pound for cheese was refused. This is equivalent to an offer of 45cents per pound for butter. Cheese has been a far better proposition than butter these past two years.

WE need not be surprised that the Post Office Department is insisting upon all small parcels being sent by mail. The rural mail service is costing Canada a pile of money, and it must come from some source.

IT is reported that in many places that the vendors are putting the 5 per cent beer in local option beer bottles and selling it quite readily, the Provincial authorities should be constantly on the look out for frauds of this character.

HOGS got as high as $11. and then hogs began to tumble, because the general public would not buy pork at that price. If the same general public had stopped eating beef before it got so high there would have been just as salutary an effect.

AND why shouldn't a Liberal M. P. be independent in Parliament and vote as he pleases. Why talk about Dr. Clark, of Red Deer, because he disagreed with his party. The curse of Canadian politics lies in the fact that we are all tied hand and foot to party until we are gagged and unable to save our souls.

Officers For A Battalion.

A few days ago it was asserted in the House of Commons, Ottawa that there were 2000 qualified officers in Canada without commissions. This number is probably far below the mark. At the beginning of the war one who qualified was fairly sure of a commission, a few months ago one who qualified had a chance, now one cannot qualify unless he has the promise of a commission. This is wisdom, it has been late in coming, but better late than never. However there are probably not a few instances of young men having been offered commissions, recommended for the same, and after qualifying were unable to obtain them. This is not far short of a criminal injustice as these young men were put to a considerable expense and then only to meet with disappointment. But the whole system of appointing officers is open to criticism. The best place in a democratic country to look for them is among the ranks Here is where you will find the men qualified for the job. These can be sent to school and then a battalion will have officers able to take care of the men on the field of battle.

Why should any young stripling of a man be appointed, simply because he has a pull?

If the Colonel of a battalion was left to himself he no doubt would make the very best possible selections but the truth is he gets very little chance to do as he wishes. In the formation of the County battalion every part of the County should be as well represented as possible on the staff of officers. If the officers are chosen largely from one town then there will be friction, and it would be difficult work to raise another County battalion. The Bruce battalion is not overburdened with officers from Wiarton.

The Daily Record, Niagara Falls, says that Ewart McEwan is making many friends in that city, Ewart, who was manager of the Bell Telephone Guelph, before he went to Niagara, had a prosperous time in that city. The Echo is glad to learn that wherever he goes he is the right man in the right place.

Presentation to Pte. H. McElrea

A number of friends gathered at the home of S. McElrea on the evening of May the tenth and presented Pte. H. McElrea with a wrist watch. Mr. E. Thompson presented the watch while Mr. T. McKechnie read the following address.

To Pte Herb McElrea

Dear Herb—

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here tonight to show our appreciation of the noble step you have taken by enlisting in the service of your King and Country to help uphold freedom justice and liberty.

Britishers the wide world over regret the course of events that have thrust the savages of cruel war upon them, and we know that to break the scourge of Prussian Militarism, such courage as you have shown is necessary. From all parts of the world Britishers have rallied as you have done to the support of the flag which is the symbol of truth, liberty and justice.

Your first and perhaps hardest battle will be to part from home and loved ones. It is a hard battle to fight but we trust it will but steel your heart in the discharge of your duties in days to come.

We realize the great sacrifice you are making; you are leaving loved ones, a host of friends, comforts and happiness behind you and going to take on the stern duties of a soldier, that we who remain here may enjoy the liberties to be had under the grand old flag which you are going to defend. You have in the past always been on the "firing line" in everything that has taken place in our midst and we assure you that our united prayers, thoughts and well-wishes will follow you in the future, and now the time of parting draws nigh we ask you to accept this wrist-watch, not for its intrinsic value, but as a very small token of our regard for you, and which we hope, will remind you of your friends in Hope Bay, who are ever praying that God will put his all-protecting arms around you and bring you home to us safe and victorious to share with your father, brothers and sisters the undying honour of those who have offered their lives for their country.

Signed on behalf of your Hope Bay friends.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

An unusual event took place on Monday evening at the Methodist Church, Park Head, when a large number of friends gathered in honour of the soldiers who have enlisted from Park Head and also to present them with appropriate gifts before leaving for mobilizing. A pleasing entertainment was given by the following talent. Mrs. Wm. Cameron, Mrs. J. E. Campbell, Mr. E. J. Downs, of Hepworth, and Miss Hazel Miller, of Park Head.

Splendid addresses were given by Rev. Wallace Johnston, of Shallow Lake, and Mr. J. E. Campbell, of Hepworth, and were much appreciated.

At the appointed time Miss Bernice Pringle and Miss Lola Spencer presented the following soldiers with beautiful wrist watches Pte. Harvey Whitmer, Pte. Gerald Spencer, Pte. Robt. Calhoun, Pte. Bert Samuels, and Pte John Pridmore, all of the 147th battalion at Owen Sound, also Pte. Wesley Amey, Pte. James Draper, Pte. Walter Caswell, and Pte. H. Walker, of the 160th battalion, Walkerton, owing to illness Pte. Charles Rourke was unable to be present. But his gift will be forwarded to him.

On receiving the presents Pte. Walker made a neat reply on behalf of the soldiers and thanked the friends for their gifts and good wishes.

Next in order was a good lunch supplied by the ladies which all enjoyed. Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Shallow Lake acted as chairman.

The following address was handed to each soldier when presentation was made.

Dear friends and soldiers,—We your many friends and associates, have met together here this evening in honor of the very important occasion of your having enlisted for duty in our King's service and to express our grateful appreciation of your manly and patriotic conduct in coming forward to bear arms in the defence of the empire now seriously threatened.

We have known you intimately for many years and during that time we are proud to relate you have been good, useful and creditable citizens.

We know that in all likelihood you will, during the progress of this war have to face and pass through many perils and dangers incident to warfare. But knowing you as we do, we feel sure that you are made of the good metal and that with God's sustaining grace you will face all these with patience, courage and fortitude.

In parting we wish you God's speed and a safe return and with our affectionate regards and best wishes we ask you to accept these small tokens and this address as a souvenir of this auspicious occasion in our lives and our appreciation and regard for you our soldiers and defenders.

Signed by the Committee in behalf of friends.

WILL WE EVER WALK ON AIR?

Train Of Thought Inspired By a Letter About "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. D. McLEAN

Orillia, Ont., Nov. 28th, 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. I tried several medicines, but got no results and my Headaches became more severe. One day I saw your sign which read 'Fruit-a-tives' make you feel like walking on air. This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. Now I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I cannot say too much for 'Fruit-a-tives', and recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends". DAN McLEAN.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is daily proving its priceless value in relieving cases of Stomach, Liver and Kidney Trouble—General Weakness, and Skin Diseases.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"I found myself out among the residences, where everything was still and lonely, walking, walking, walking, every shadow appearing like a ghost. I sat down to rest on the curbing, but a policeman drove me away. Once I crept into a darkened vestibule to a big apartment building, but another discovered me there and threatened to take me to the station. The night grew misty and damp, but I found no shelter. I had no will power left, no womanhood, no remorse. It was thus I came there to that corner. I heard the policeman approaching along the side street and, terrified, sprang into the yard to escape; then—then I met you."

"Tell me," I questioned earnestly, "what caused you to interfere between me and the officer?"

"What! Oh, I hardly know," a touch of hysteria in the nervous exclamation. "I was compelled to choose instantly between his mercy and yours. The—the difference seemed small enough then, but—but I realized you were frightened also, and—and so I preferred to trust you. That was all. It was my fate, and—and, well I didn't care much how it ended."

"But you endeavored to escape from me. You sought to compel my leaving you?"

She lifted her face again, flushing, saddened, slightly indignant, the brown eyes widening.

"Perhaps the soul was not all dead," she returned gravely. "Perhaps womanhood was not all gone. I did not know you. I was in terror. But now I am not afraid. I believe I have found a man—and a friend."

I was conscious of a sudden wild throb of the heart, a swift rush of blood through my veins.

"I might have doubted that myself awhile ago," I acknowledged almost bitterly, "but now I am going to make good. Lord, how a fellow can run to seed when he lets himself go! Don't you know you are helping me as much as I am you? You didn't find much out there—only a drunken discharged soldier, an ex-hobo with a laborer's job. I've wanted my chance in life and been an infernal fool. I can see that plain enough and despise myself for it. I knew it before you came. The difference was then I didn't care, while now I do. You have made me care. Yes, you have, girl," as she glanced up again, plainly startled by this unexpected avowal, "You see, you belong to my class, little girl, and—and you are the first of them to speak a kind word to me in five years. It's—it's a bit tough to be cut dead by your own class."

It was her hand, white and slender, which reached shyly across the table and touched mine, but her eyes alone made answer.

"That is all right," I continued, my voice shaking. "I understand how you feel. But this is no fit place for your kind. You better go home to your mother."

She shook her head with decision.

"Why not? Is she hard?"

"Yes. She would be very hard with me."

"Do you mean you would rather risk it here with—with me than go back and face her?"

"Yes, even that," she replied soberly. "I have courage to fight it out here, but not there. I know what it will mean if I go back—reproaches, gossip, ostracism, all the petty meanness of a small town. I loathe the very thought. I am strong again, and I will not go. It is between God and me, this decision—between God and me." She drooped her head, hiding her face upon her arms, her shoulders trembling. "You—you may despise me. You may think me the lowest of the low, but I—I am going to stay here."

I sat in silence, amazed, puzzled, gazing across at her, my hands clinched.

"You actually mean you dare risk yourself here—with me?"

"With your help, with you as a friend to talk to—yes."

"But stop and think what I am," I urged recklessly. "A mere hobo."

"No," she said earnestly, "You are not that. You are a man."

For a long minute I did not answer, unable to determine what to do, how to act. We had both finished our meal, and there was no excuse for lingering longer at the table.

"You will go with me, then?"

"Yes."

CHAPTER IV.

We Go South.

I PUSHED back my chair, and she arose also, following me without question as I passed across to the door. The cashier nodded to my good night, and I opened the door for her passage to the street. The mist of the cloudy night had blown away by an increasing breeze. The air was warm and the sky brightening in the east. I glanced aside into her face and led the way into a nearby park, the two of us trudging along a well kept gravel path until I discovered a bench hidden from observation amid surrounding shrubbery.

"I've simply got to think this whole matter out," I explained simply. "It's happened so unexpectedly I'm stumped as to what had better be done."

She remained standing, resting one hand on the back of the settee, a slender figure, neatly enough dressed, yet exhibiting evidence of her long night's wandering.

"You mean I am a problem? You—you do not know what to do with me?"

I glanced at her, surprised by the chance in her voice.

"Naturally a young woman is usually a problem, isn't she? This particular one has come with a suddenness sufficient to jar anybody's nerves. Three hours ago I was without responsibility, a mere log adrift on the current. I've hardly wakened up yet to the change in conditions. Here I am a fellow so utterly worthless that I haven't even been able to take decent care of myself alone, yet all at once the duty fronts me to double my responsibilities."

Her cheeks reddened.

"No, you are not. Is that, then, your conception of me? Let me tell you differently. I will never accept money from you. Just so soon as this city wakes up I am going to start forth again and seek work. I have regained my courage, and I am no longer afraid. All I needed was to know that I was not all alone. I can fight for the rest."

"Mrs. Bernard," I began quietly, realizing her spirit, "you have given a wrong meaning to my words. I respect you, believe in you and merely desire to help you to the best of my ability. Sit down here and let us face this thing squarely together. We mustn't act like children or close our eyes to facts. For instance, we have both been up all night. That isn't specially new for me, but it is to you, and the exposure and strain show. You are not fit to go out hunting employment."

"A thousand dollars!" she exclaimed, bewildered.

"Poverty has no choice," bitterly. "The fact that I am tired does not matter."

"Oh, but it does! Now I am not quite as badly off as you suppose. All I ask is a chance to think, to arrange some plan. Won't you sit quietly there until I puzzle it out?"

For a few moments as we sat in silence the obvious way out never once occurred to me. Somehow the memory of my own position had become blotted out in contemplation of the serious predicament of my companion. How could I assist her in spite of her pride and her determination to continue the struggle alone? I could not take her to my boarding house, which was exclusively for men, nor did I have any acquaintance able to furnish her employment. I shoved my hands deep into my pockets, and my fingers touched the two bills handed me by Vail. For an instant I failed to realize their significance, and then the recollection of my own engagement came swiftly back. At first the memory was a disgust. The very presence of the girl and her tale of struggle made me realize the sordidness of this plot in which I was involved. Somehow it struck me then as a dirty, underhanded scheme. Yet, as I reviewed the details, this conception largely vanished. The feeling of resentment died away, but I doubted if she could be made to look at it in the same light. I glanced across to where she sat, the gray dawn giving me clear view. Her head rested back upon one arm, and she was asleep.

We remained undisturbed, our settee removed from the main pathway, along which a few early workmen passed. She was the very one to act the part of Philip Henley's wife, if she would consent. Her refinement, the clear innocence of her face, would be convincing, and I began already to long for her company. Yet she would have to be told every detail, convinced the apparent fraud was justifiable. I rather dreaded the look in her eyes when she first heard the proposal and her questioning me. While I still hesitated, fearful of refusal, the sun shining upon her face awoke her suddenly. She straightened up instantly, but her eyes smiled as they met mine.

"I was asleep," she said in surprise. "For how long?"

"Nearly two hours."

"And you have sat there quietly all that time?"

"That is nothing. I was tired, but not sleepy. Besides, I had so much to think about."

"You mean regarding what you shall do with me," and she arose to her feet. "It is time now I did something for myself."

"Wait, please," and I extended my hand, almost forcing her back upon the settee. "Let me say a word first before you decide to go. All I told you last night about myself is true, with one exception. I have money and profitable work in view. See!" and I held before her the two bills.

She gazed at them with wide open eyes, half convinced of some legerdemain.

"A thousand dollars!" she exclaimed bewildered. "Too! Why, what does it all mean?"

"Yes, and $9,000 more promised when I complete work that ought not to require to exceed two months. I was not without money in the restaurant, only I could not ask the cashier to change so large a bill. Sit down again, please, and let me tell you the story."

She did so almost reluctantly, as though doubting my sanity, but I could note a change in the expression of her face as I proceeded. I told it slowly, carefully, pausing to explain each detail to her questioning, yet was not interrupted more than once or twice. Somehow, as I thus repeated the proposed scheme to another, it did not appear quite as easy or honorable as when I faced it alone.

"That's the whole story," I ended, rather lamely. "What do you think of it?"

"I—I hardly know," with slow hesitation. "It is very strange."

She pressed one hand to her forehead, her eyes on the ground. I watched her, an unasked question trembling on my lips. Suddenly she looked up again, her cheeks flushed.

"You were going to suggest that I go with you, were you not?" she asked swiftly. "That I play the wife's part? Why didn't you ask it?"

"Because I lacked courage," I replied frankly yet leaning eagerly toward her. "I was afraid you would take such a proposition wrongly."

"And you see nothing wrong in carrying out your part? You mean to go to Carrollton with some one—a woman?"

"I—I agreed to the terms—yes."

She drew a long breath, her eyes upon mine.

"Then I will go also," she said soberly and held out her hand.

"You mean that?"

"Yes—why not? Surely it is as right for me as for you. You wished me to say yes, did you not?"

My face must have answered, as my lips failed, but she went on swiftly:

"Then I will go; only remember it is acting, a mere play in which I have a certain part to perform. We are to be friends throughout it all—actors on the stage. There must be no misunderstanding about this."

I had recovered my voice now, realizing all she meant and anxious to reassure her.

"Certainly. There will be no mistake, Mrs. Bernard. That was why I hesitated to ask you, for fear you might misinterpret my purpose."

"We go tonight? I shall need clothing."

"Of course. That was what this money was advanced for, to outfit us. How much will you need?"

She thought a moment, a little line of perplexity between her eyes, finally naming a sum which surprised me.

"Not more than that?" I exclaimed. "Surely that is not enough."

"Oh, yes, it is," laughing. "There will be no dressing. All I need do is appear neat."

We sat there and talked it over, deciding exactly our course of action. At 9 o'clock I left her, hunted up the nearest bank and got change for my bill. Then I gave her the amount asked, and we separated, to meet again late that afternoon at the depot. I felt no doubt as to her being there on time. My day was a busy one, as I had to visit my boarding house, buy needful clothing and arrange for transportation.

At the very moment specified I called up Vail on the phone, and he responded instantly, the very tone of his voice evidencing the relief he felt at hearing from me.

"Began to think I had skipped with the thousand?" I asked. "Well, I haven't, for the other nine looks too good. I've found the right woman to go along with me."

"Good! Who is she?"

"Oh, never mind her name. She is all right. A friend of mine."

"Not likely any one I know. Where are you?"

I told him, and he agreed to send over certain papers to me by messenger. These arrived promptly, and I studied them carefully until nearly train time, getting all the facts firmly implanted in my mind. Mrs. Bernard and I met beneath the grim shadow of the train shed.

At first, as she came toward me through the crowd near the gate, holding out a neatly gloved hand, I could scarcely realize that this well dressed, soft voiced lady was the former homeless creature.

"So you did not even know me," she said pleasantly. "Oh, but you did not. You were passing by when I spoke. Don't apologize, for really I take it as the highest compliment. You are wonderfully improved yourself. Is this our train?"

"Yes," and I took up the grip she designated as hers. "Let us get settled and into the diner, for I am hungry as a wolf."

I had procured opposite sections, and before retiring we studied the papers, together with Vail's letter of instructions, and thus came to a complete understanding. She was quick witted and spoke frankly, and yet when I finally lay down to my berth I felt less well acquainted with her than before. Somehow, in a manner inexplainable, a vague barrier had arisen between us. I could not trace it to any word or action on her part, and yet I felt held away as by an invisible hand. Her very cordiality exhibited a reserve which made me clearly comprehend that the slightest familiarity would be checked.

It was at the close of the following afternoon when our train reached Carrollton. The depot must have been a mile from the town, and very few people were upon the platform, two drummers and ourselves the only ones to disembark. The traveling men hastened to the nearest hack, while I glanced about in search of a conveyance. The only other vehicle present was a two seated surrey, driven by a rather disreputable negro. I approached in some doubt.

"No, sah," he said, grinning. "Dis

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from any harmful drugs. Try it.

Communication

R. R. No. 1, Purple Valley, April 22, 16

Editor Canadian Echo

Sir:—

In reference to Mr. Craig's letter which appeared in your last issue it might not be out of place for me to correct the false impression in Mr Craig's mind as to the item headed Albemarle Roads which appeared in a recent issue of your paper. As I wrote the item referred to and asked you Mr. Editor to publish it, and as Mr. Craig has charged that it was intended to be misleading to the ratepayers of Albemarle. It would seem to be up to me to reply to Mr. Craig's letter, at least so far as the charge of attempting to mislead the ratepayers is concerned.

Now, sir, when I asked you to publish the item referred to, nothing was further from my thoughts than an attempt to mislead the ratepayers of Albemarle or any body else, but quite the reverse as I will explain farther on in this letter, that item was a simple and accurate statement of the facts as to the proceedings of the Albemarle Council with regard to the road question at their session held April 8th and the present standing of the road situation as the result of that meeting. So far as I know there is not a single statement made in that item that can be truthfully contradicted. My reason for publishing the item was this; although the Council had been called to meet on Ap. 8th for the special purpose of arranging the roadwork system, yet there was nothing in the report of the Council minutes to show that the road question had ever been discussed, the reason for this was that none of the resolutions presented to the Board were moved and seconded by any of the Councillors and following the generally accepted rule of Clerks, I do not record in the minutes, motions that are not moved and seconded. This as I stated before left the report of the minutes devoid of any mention as to what had been done about roads, so that in fairness to the Council to know, I wrote out and had published a short item explaining what had been done

As to Mr. Craig's criticisms of the present road system I do not wish to comment upon them as I do not think it my place so long as I am Clerk of Albemarle to enter into newspaper discussions of this nature.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space I remain,

Yours truly
Thos. Coveney.

OWEN SOUND

Work was received in the early part of the week by his wife, who now reside in Toronto, of the wounding of Corp. Wm. Fraser, formerly of Owen Sound. Corp. Fraser is now in an hospital at Stables. Prior to enlisting Corp. Fraser was an employee of the Bell Telephone Co., acting as wire chief. When the second Canadian Division was being formed he promptly enlisted qualifying as a sergeant. He is twenty-seven years of age, and this is his first experience in the fighting game. With the troops that wintered at Exhibition Camp in 1915, Corp. Fraser was attached leaving Canada in March of that year. His battalion has been in the trenches since October last, Mrs. Fraser and child are now residing at 429 Dupont St. Toronto.

Tuesday morning the flag at the armories dropped to half-mast out of respect to Private Wm. Wormald, of the 147th Greys, who passed away at the General and Marine Hospital as a result of cancer of the stomach. This is the second death in this Battalion. Pte. Wormald who was 42 years of age, and who went through the Boer war, has had a long period of sickness, having been ill since January last. He came from Meaford but expressed a special desire to be buried here. A full military funeral will take place to Greenwood Cemetery this afternoon when the services will be conducted by Capt. H. S. Mullowney, chaplain of this battalion.

Mr R. McDowall, C. E., has had his aeroplane put in shape for aerial flights this season, and if everything goes all right he may make his first flight on the 24th of May. The engine has been thoroughly overhauled, and the defects which were noticeable in the ground tests made with the machine in the country last season have, it is thought, been successfully overcome. The aeroplane, it will be remembered, was built at the Ferguson Carriage Works on 8th Street East, where it may be seen set up and fully equipped for service. The propeller which fills the wings of the machine with air is capable of developing a speed of 1,300 revolutions to the minute, which should enable the aeroplane to fulfill the expectations of its owner.

"Here is the Nerve Food I know that will help you."

Malnutrition Failure to get the good of the food you eat.

It is not what you eat, but what you eat, digest and absorb, that counts in keeping up the health and vigor of the human body. If you are not getting the benefit of the food you eat you should suspect the nervous system, for the nerves control the flow of the gastric juices of the stomach and the other chemical fluids of the digestive system which effect the digestion of starches, fats, etc.

Especially at this season of the year digestion lags, appetite fails, you do not get the good of the food you eat and vitality is consequently lowered. You feel the effects in loss of energy and ambition, feelings of fatigue come over you and you lack in courage and good cheer.

Eating more will not help you, for you must have nourishment in an easily assimilated condition so that it may be taken up by the blood stream without effort. In short, you need such assistance as is best afforded by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

By using this food cure you enrich the blood and supply nourishment directly to the starved nervous system. The nerves which control the process of digestion are invigorated, digestion is improved, appetite sharpened, and gradually you are restored to health and vigor.

This is Nature's way. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food supplies the elements and the processes of Nature convert these elements into new, rich blood and new nerve force. You cannot fail to be benefited by such treatment, and the results obtained are lasting.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

Canada in Peace and War

On Wednesday evening of last week Mr. Frank Frank Yeigh, Toronto, one of Canada's foremost Lecturers gave a very interesting and instructive picture talk on "Canada in Peace and War" under the auspices of the Women's Institute. In opening his address Mr. Yeigh gave a few very eulogistic remarks regarding the great work, patriotic and otherwise being done by the women of this splendid organization all over Canada. The first part consisted of a trip across Canada from Ottawa west to the coast, showing the Parliament Buildings on fire, shipping on the Great Lakes, the Wheat Fields, the coming Cities of the Prairies. While showing some of the wonders and beauties of the Rockies Mr, Yeigh stated that he had to go to New York to find an audience that appreciated the magnificence of our Canadian scenery. In Victoria B.C., he showed a view of the harbor with vessels from all over the world in port. Canada at war was illustrated by camps and views of our Canadian boys in khaki leaving Toronto, Hamilton and Calgary and other points, on board ship crossing overseas, in London, Eng., in convalescent hospital and on the battle fields of France. The trenches were interesting, the speaker drawing attention to one jokingly placarded "Balmoral Castle". But the views showing the work of devastation the fine buildings and cathedrals in ruins, the peaceful homes a mass of wreckage made one feel something of the horrors of war. The munition workers, airships and zeppelins in flight were shown and the large guns carried by battleships and destroyers Mr. Yeigh was listened to with great attention throughout. He is a man of easy speech does not need any thunder to emphasize his remarks while all the time commanding attention. Two numbers by the male quartet, Messrs. Gilbert, Hamilton, Lawrence and Millar were much ap preciated. Miss J. Lawrence gave a very acceptable selection "Every soldier is my sweetheart", Mrs. Foster and Miss Parke very kindly opening with several piano duets. At the close Mr. Kestner in a few choice words tendered the thanks of the Women's Institute to the Lecturer and to all who had helped make the evening such a success. One of the audience expressed the opinion that if the Women's Institute never did anything elsethey had at least done a good thing in an educative way by having this lecture. The ladies realized quite a nice amount for their Red Cross and Patriotic schemes and in passing we notify all and sundry that we will continue as long as the need lasts.

Death of John Pruder

The pioneers are passing away, this is the natural law. The men who blazed the trails, laid the foundations have left a heritage for others to enjoy. On Sunday afternoon the body of John Pruder an ex-reeve of Albemarle, was laid to rest in the Colpoys cemetery. The funeral procession was a very large one, one of the largest ever seen on the peninsula, and the services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. James, Lions Head.

The late John Pruder was born in Germany, and when he was a child his parents came to Canada and settled in Berlin afterwards moving to Brant. In 1869 he married Miss Elizabeth Crawford, and in 1876 they came to Albemarle, where they made their home and by energy and thrift succeeded. Mr. Pruder was a gentleman who was always interested in public affairs and served many years at the council board, and he was a most active worker for the Conservative party Until this past year he had enjoyed good health. On Monday the 17th as he was sitting on his verandah he had a stroke, and he passed away on the following Wednesday morning. The deceased is survived by a widow and the following sons, William, Owen Sound: David, of Colpoys; James, of Montreal; Hugh. of Winnipeg; and Samuel. who resides on the homestead. The daughters are Mrs. J. J. Parrot, Sarnia; Mrs. R. Tyndall and Mrs. S. Baird Albemarle. There are, too, fifteen grandchildren.

Presentation to Mar Soldiers.

As the soldiers were leaving on Saturday for Walkerton a social evening was held in Mar to bid farewell to the boys. Quite a number of old friends assembled in the school house at 8 o'clock on Thursday evening. Speeches were given to the boys by their pastor, Rev. Brady, Mr Beeson, Rev. Hunter and Mr Tuffnell. The choir sang several patriotic selections and Misses N. Duncan and E. Adams sang solos. Mrs Barly gave a very suitable reading. Rev. Brady read the following address to the boys and Mr Beeson presented the watches to the boys. A number of the girls had the honour of placing the watches on the soldiers' arms after which the soldiers thanked their many friends for their kind wishes.

The address was,—Ptes. George and Will White, John and Jas. Given George Blake, Will Weir and Chas Stoby. It is with mingled feelings of regret and pride that we your friends and neighbors are assembled here this evening to spend a short social hour and bid farewell to you of our number, who are bravely sacrificing all for the Empire. We are sad because of the necessity for active service and although we little realize the sacrifice it involves, yet we feel in this great war, where our very liberty is at stake, you are but responding to the old call of "England expects every man to do his duty" We are proud of you because of the manly spirit you have shown in sacrificing the comforts and pleasures of home life for the dangers and hardships of soldiers' life, and we feel convinced that you will nobly "do your bit" to overthrow this overpowering militarism and uphold the name and honour that Canadian soldiers have already won. To show our appreciation of your noble decision we ask you to accept these wrist watches as a slight token of the interest and kind feelings your friends have for you May God's blessing attend you through the coming perils and if it be His will may you return to beloved Canada where anxious friends will be waiting and watching to welcome you home.

Tara

At the graduating exercises of the Toronto General Hospital School for nurses held last week at Toronto, a Tara girl captured the senior year scholarship in connection with the department of social service, University of Toronto, for one year's continuation work; given by the Board of Trustees of the Toronto General Hospital and Mr. A. W. Austin. The young lady was Miss Ella Grant, daughter of our Reeve. Mr. J. E. Grant. The Leader extends congratulations to Miss Grant.

A big public demonstration was held Monday on Tuesday night, the occasion being the home-coming of Sergt. Milton Aiken from the battlefields of France. The train pulled into the depot about ten o'clock and hundreds of his friends from the village and surrounding country were on hand to greet him. A torch light procession was formed and headed by the 160th Bruce Battalion Band marched through the streets, Sergt Aiken then went to his home to see his father, Mr. Adam Aiken, who is in very poor health, after which he was taken to the Methodist church and given a rousing reception. Sergt. Aiken was one of the first from this district to enlist for overseas service and his many friends are pleased to see him home again. He will take a commission with the 160th Bruce Battalion in the machine gun section.

LITTIE WORRIES IN THE HOME

It Is These that Bring Wrinkles And Make Women Look Prematurely Old

Almost every woman at the head of a home meets daily many little worries in her household affairs. They may be to small to notice a hour afterwards, but it is these same constant little worries that affect the blood and nerves and make women look prematurely old. Their effect may be noticed in sick or nervous headaches, fickle appetite, pain in the back or side, sallow complexion and the coming of wrinkles, which every woman dreads. To those thus afflicted Dr. Williams Pink Pills offer a speedy and certain cure; a restoration of color to the cheeks, brightness to the eyes, a hearty appetite and a sense of freedom from weariness.

Among the thousands of Canadian women who have found new health through Dr. Williams pink Pills is Mrs. N. Worral, Broughdale Ont., who says:—After the birth of my second child I was so weak and run down that I was unable to do anything. The doctor said I had scarcely any blood in my body. I could not walk half a block without being completely exhausted and all the treatment of the doctor did not seem to help me. I called in another doctor, but with no better results. My feet and legs became frightly swollen, I suffered with severe pains in my back and sides. I would be all day dragging around at my household work, and I was beginning to give up all hope of recovery. I had been urged to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills, but like many others, thought they could not help me when doctors had failed to do so, but after much urging I decided to try them. To my surprise in a few weeks I found myself getting better. I then gladly continued their use and found myself constantly growing stronger, and eventually able to do my house work without fatigue. I strongly advise every weak woman to give Dr. Williams Pink Pills a fair trial."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Hanover

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McKechnie and Mr. Frank Adams, of Toronto, motored to town Friday and spent the week end with Mr and Mrs. J. A. Adams.

The body of Mrs. Charles Oppertshauser was recovered from the Saugeen river last Saturday morning. She was drowned on April 28th. The body was discovered by Mr. James Crispin at the rear of his farm, not a great distance from the ground covered by Mr. Charle Fleming diver. The body was floating about a foot from the surface and was caught in the soft soil. The remains were conveyed to her late residence, and the funeral service held there on Sunday was private. After the interment in the Hanover cemetery, a memorial service was held in the Baptist church. A large number attended to pay deceased their last respects.

Mr. Herbert Henning, who has been connected with the office staff of the Knechtel Furniture Co. for several years is going "on the road," for the firm. His territory will be Quebec with headquarters at Montreal Herb is a popular young Hanover man and his removal from town will be regretted by a wide circle of friends. In sporting circles he has figured prominently for years, and has worked unselfishly for different clubs in town. While we are sorry to see Herb leave we feel assured he will "make good" in his new vocation.

Chesley

John Ickler, of St. Paul, Minn., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Charles Biebighauser, and his brother Peter, of this town. Mr. Ickler lived at Clavering, in Amabel Tp., before moving to U. S.

The membership of Wesley Church, Chesley, is 240 and the giving to missions this year amount to $727.70 or nearly $3.00 each. This is over $200 in excess of any previous year. The total givings for church purposes were $4,144. This is a very creditable showing.

There were 22 tenders for Chesley's 20 year hydro electric debentures bearing 5½ p.c. on the instalment plan, opened at the meeting of Chesley council on Monday evening. The debentures amounted to $22,500. The lowest bid was $22,211 by Brent, Noxon and Co. Toronto brokers. The sale went to C. J. Mickle, in trust, at par or $22,500 and accrued interest. This town is a long way from being bankrupt even if our rate of taxation is 30 mills on the dollar.

Mr. J. T. Lutton, Classical Master of Guelph Collegiate Institute, and a former principal of Chesley H. S. passed away at his home in Guelph on Monday at the age of 49 years. He had been ill for a couple of years with Hodgkin's Disease, an enlargement of the lymphatic glands, of a tumorous nature. He leaves a widow, one son and one daughter. Messrs C. J. Mickle and Wm. McDonald attended the funeral in Guelph yesterday. Mr. Lutton took his classes in the Collegiate till within a few week of his death.

W. G. Mair, of Moorsbury, is the possessor of two ewes which gave birth to 3 lambs each. Mr. Mair sold his lambs last week at $8 50 each and the offspring of these two ewes netted him $51. Who would be bold enough to deny that there is money in sheep-raising? And while the price of wool has not yet been advertised by local dealers we understand that it will range from 38c to 40c. The legislature has recognized the importance of sheep raising by compelling councils to pay the full value of sheep destroyed by dogs instead of two-thirds as formerly.

OWEN SOUND

The grain market shows no sign of rally ng despite the fact that prices continue to hold firm, excepting of course, wheat, which has been on the low grade, for the last two months. No wheat is being offered on the local market, and even barley and oats are not figuring to any appreciable extent. The offerings on Saturday comprised only a few loads and they were quickly bought up. Barley sold at 60c. a bushel and oats at 50c. Wheat was quoted at 95c to $100 a bushel.

There was a drop in the price of potatoes several loads going at $1.75 a bag.

The produce end of the market was marked by the usual activity, butter and eggs being the principal features. Butter has dropped to 26c and eggs to 20c., which will be some consolation to those who are inclined to complain of "the high cost of living."

On the recommendation of the Board of Works, the Town Council will spend $2,830 in improving the streets of the town. The The committee after making an inspection of most of the streets, prepared a report of the improvements which they propose making in the near future and the Council last evening adopted it after considering it clause by clause.

Following the message in April that he was wounded and in hospital, the news was received on Tuesday that Pte. Roy Winfield Feltis had died as the result of these wounds. Pte Feltis' home is in Derby but he had resided for some time in Owen Sound where he became well known. He was an engineer by occupation and during his residence here an active member of Y. M. C. A. Particulars as to how and where Pte. Feltis received the wounds which later proved fatal have not yet been received. He was a member of a draft from the 37th Battalion and went with his detachment to England last Fall

Walkerton

As a result of the preliminary canvass among certain of the moneyed men of the town, $3,000, or one-quarter of the $12,000 asked from Walkerton for Patriotic and Red Cross Work, has already been raised. The general canvass of the citizens, which takes place this Thursday and Friday, will aim at raising the balance of $9,000.

Peter Livingstone, who has been in the Walkerton jail before for vagrancy, was brought down from the Bruce Peninsula last Thursday to undergo another thirty days for the same offence. On arriving at the citadel he jokingly remarked that he was back again for repairs, thus showing that the prison damps haven't any great terrors for him.

The first casualty among the officers of the 160 was sustained on the foot-ball field here last week, when Lieut. Duncan McLeod, of Southampton, while making a drive at the ball, threw out his knee so badly that he was removed to the Bruce County Hospital on Saturday. Water under the knee-cap has developed, and and while the injury is a serious one, it is not likely to prevent him accompanying the battalion to the front.

The soldiers from Warton and Bruce Peninsula, who are quartered in the Station Hotel here, was treated to a sumptuous supper on Friday night by the neighboring ladies, who vied with each other in bringing delicacies to the the banquet and making the table, which was set in the hotel, groan with the weight of the tempting spread. The way the soldiers succeeded in lightening the the strains on the table testified to the keenness of their appetites and the quality of the menu.

Mr. Frank Bainton, an ingenious Bervie blacksmith, came sailing into Walkerton on Saturday in a Ford car that threw out no smells of gasoline but ran on the product of Coal Oil Johnny. The high price of gasoline, which has scared so many off the road, has no terrors for the Bervie brave, who has invented and attached a contrivance to the carbonator of his engine that enables the car to slip along on the cheapest brand of coal oil as freely as on the dearest grade of gasoline. As the one costs 14c as against 40c a gallon for the other, the saving effected by rushing through the country with a kerosene can may be easily figured out.

Judge Klein gave a decision on Monday in the case of the young housebreakers which is calculated to make good citizens out of the two young delinquents. Mr. Robertson, who appeared for the Crown in Mr. Dixon's absence reported that the father had made satisfactory restitution for the property destroyed ($130.00). His Honor bound the father for the sum of $200 to guarantee the appearance of the boys in court on May 15th, 1917, to show that they have behaved themselves properly during the year. In case they are able to show a clean sheet for the year, no further action may be taken, otherwise they will be sent to Industrial School. Both of the boys undertake to attend Sunday School every Sunday unless sick and the younger boy must attend school every day, unless sick: and get good reports from their teachers.

BABY'S WELFARE

The welfare of the baby is the fond mother's greatest aim. No mother wants to see her little one suffering from colds, constipation, colic or any other of the many ills that so often afflict little ones. Thousands of mothers have learned that by giving an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets to their children they can keep them well. Concerning the tablets Mrs. Richard Boston, Pembroke, Ont. says:—"Baby's Own Tablets saved my little girl when nothing else appeared to help her. I would not attempt to raise a baby without keeping the Tablets in the house." They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

The foundation is not the most important thing

True, you can't have a good barn without a good foundation but don't forget either that the roof has to stand most of the punishment. Upon it falls the burden of resisting the destructive influences of weather and changing seasons.

Now, the question is "Where am I going to find a roof which will meet these conditions?" Certainly not in wooden shingles which have rapidly deteriorated during the past few years. Not in anything so perishable as wood, nor yet iron, which lets in driving rain, but rather in a permanent mineral composition such as Brantford Roofing.

Now, let us look at a section of Brantford Roofing. First, you notice it has a pure, long-fibred felt base. This is thoroughly saturated with a filler coat of asphalt or mineral pitch. Then it is given another coat. Finally, the surface is thickly covered with crushed slate. You can imagine what a job rain, snow, fire or heat would have penetrating a roof like that. As for comparing with shingles on the score of permanency, or protection, or appearance, or even economy, there is no comparison. You put a Brantford Roof on once, and it will last as long as the building; it will always look well and it will never need repairing.

Why not let us send you samples, also a copy of our booklet which explains how Brantford Roofing is "always on the job". Or, if you will give us the dimensions of your barn or house roof we will gladly submit estimates without charge or obligation.

HILL AGAIN ATTACKED

Verdun Onslaught Centres on Le Mort Homme.

Entire Sector is Violently Bombarded and German Infantry Advance Results in a Momentary Success Along the First Line of Trenches —French Counter-attack Restores Original Positions.

PARIS, May 22.—The Crown Prince's forces returned Saturday afternoon to their efforts to capture Le Mort Homme, on the west bank of the Meuse. The attack, which was preceded by more than usually violent artillery fire, was made simultaneously on the whole sector of the French front which has Le Mort Homme as its centre. After fighting through the rest of the afternoon the Germans were left in occupation of some elements of French advanced trenches on the northern slope of Le Mort Homme and to the west of the height.

Momentary success also was gained by the attacking troops to the east of the hill, but the counter-attack which the French launched all along the line immediately after the first German rush drove the Germans out of the positions they had gained in this eastern sector.

On the northern slopes and to the west of the height the German gain was not made until the attack had been repeated time and again under an extremely heavy fire from the French artillery and rifles. Finally, the attacking waves drove over the first French line and pushed on to the second-line trenches. But as they reached the latter they came under so terrific a fire from the French 75's and mitrailleuses that they wavered and fell back in disorder, at certain points retaining possession of the French first line, on the rest of the line retreating to their own trenches.

British Recover Position.

LONDON, May 22.—A charge of the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment resulted in the recapture from the Germans of the crater of a mine on the Vimy ridge which was lost by the British last Thursday. After a heavy bombardment the Germans made a raid on the British line south-west of Loos, and entered the British front trench, but was driven out immediately. The Germans also attempted to rush a post north-west of Wieltje, but were driven back.

There were thirteen combats in the air on Saturday, in the course of which two hostile machines were brought down behind the enemy's lines.

Aside from three small German attacks south-west of Wieltje last night, which were repulsed, the activity on the British front in Belgium and France in the past 24 hours was confined to the artillery and the flying corps. The front from Vimy to Loos was subjected to a heavy bombardment all day, the bombardment being especially heavy to the south of Souchez Sunday afternoon and night.

MINISTER TO GET MEDAL.

Rev. E. J. Brooks is Recommended for a Decoration.

LONDON, May 22.—Lieut. E. J. Brooks, the Baptist minister from Fairmont, N.S., who as a machine gun officer distinguished himself in a crater fight near Ypres, has been recommended for a decoration.

Colonel Rexford, of the Grenadier Guards, was in London Sunday.

Major D. S. Bauld, who was wounded and saved by his pocket-book, which diverted the bullet, is recuperating.

Major L. E. Hudon, of Montreal, will sail for Canada shortly.

Captain Charles G. D. Roberts, the Canadian litterateur, was with the Liverpool Regiment at Curragh, and had a hot time and several narrow escapes in the Dublin fighting. He will join the staff of the public records office under Sir Max Aitken next month.

Major Manley Simms, D.S.O., Sir Max Aitken's representative at headquarters in France, has recently been promoted Lieutenant-colonel.

Lieut. Thomas H. Parker, of the Dominion Observatory, who was wounded, is doing well at a West End hospital. His injury is not likely to be permanent.

Lieut. George Simpson Bateman, who was killed in the south of England on Thursday, was formerly with the 49th Hastings Rifles, Marmora Company.

German Steamer Attempted Escape.

STOCKHOLM, May 21. — The steamer Trave, the fourth vessel sunk in the new submarine campaign against German shipping, attempted to escape when she caught sight of the submarine. Her captain headed her under full speed for Swedish territorial waters, but stopped promptly when the boat was struck by a well-directed shot from the submarine. The crew, including two women, was given ample time to leave the ship before it sank.

Famous French Aeronaut Killed

PARIS, May 22.—Georges Boillot, automobile racer and aeronaut, has been killed in a fight with five German aeroplanes. He succeeded in bringing down one of the German machines before a bullet pierced his heart.

M. Boillot served earlier in the war as chauffeur for General Joffre. He won the Grand Prize of the Automobile Club of France in 1912 and 1913.

Two More German Ships Sunk.

LONDON, May 22.—The German steamers Hebe and Pera, carrying coal, were sunk Saturday night by a submarine off the southern coast of Cape Oland, in the Baltic.

PROGRESS CONTINUES.

Russian Armies Keeping Up Their March on Mosul.

LONDON, May 22.—The Russians are continuing their march toward Mosul (ancient Nineveh), according to Sunday night's Petrograd official report.

A Constantinople correspondent says that Field Marshal Liman von Sanders is assembling a strong force of Turkish troops at Sivas, in Asiatic Turkey, to oppose the advance of the Russians. The Turks are equipped abundantly with artillery.

The correspondent also says that Turkey has called out recruits of the ages of 37 and 38.

The Russian occupation of Sakis and their advance upon the village of Ban is of extreme importance, and establishes a direct line of communication between the two Russian groups which are operating against the Turkish Mesopotamian army.

"Four thousand German troops are expected at Bagdad in June," says The Times' Bucharest correspondent. "Twelve thousand Austrians already are there. The Turks are weakening the defence of Constantinople, sending all possible reinforcements to Asia Minor and concentrating a large force at Marash, three days' march north-east of Alexandretta (on the Mediterranean in Northern Syria), where they fear an attempted landing by Entente allies."

Although little has been known regarding the military operations in this immediate district, which lies between Lake Urumiah and Khaniken, on the Persian border north-east of Bagdad, Kurdish bands, supported by Turkish regulars, have been for a long time attempting to make inroads into Persia, and, by cutting off from each other the Russian armies advancing toward the Mesopotamian border, make their progress impossible. It is apparent that in these efforts they had been so successful as to capture the Persian towns of Sakiz and Bau, but, as officially announced, the Russians recently ousted them from the positions, and the danger created by this wedge into the Russian line has been removed.

Ban is near the Turkish border, and along a 200-mile front the Russian armies are now drawn up close to the Mesopotamian frontier. Military experts believe that further progress for the Russians should be considerably facilitated by this straightening out of the Russian line and the establishment of direct communication, which not only makes further Kurdish inroads impossible, but lightens the difficult task of provisioning, which delayed the Russian progress in Asia Minor.

COSSACKS JOIN BRITISH.

Body of Russian Cavalry Reinforce Lake in Mesopotamia.

LONDON, May 22.—The first news of the operations on the Tigris since the fall of Kut-el-Amara, sent Sunday by Lieut.-General Sir Percy Lake, commander-in-chief of the British forces in Mesopotamia, although it shows that the Turks are still holding the Sannayyat position on the left bank of the Tigris, where the British check made it impossible to carry out the relief of General Townshend, brings the welcome but astonishing intelligence that a body of Russian cavalry, after an adventurous ride, has succeeded in joining General Gorringe's forces on the south bank of the Tigris.

How this important junction was effected is still unknown, and the story will be awaited with intense interest. The supposition is that this detachment came from the Russian army which is threatening Khanikan, but it still remains a puzzle where and how the Russians succeeded in crossing the river.

Their sudden appearance with General Gorringe has also raised the question whether the Russians have already cut the Bagdad railway at Mosul. In any case the unexpected appearance of this body of cavalry is as great a surprise as was the first landing of the Russian troops at Marseilles, and is another instance of the swift and stealthy movement of the Russian forces in Asia Minor.

An official communication issued Sunday night concerning the situation along the Tigris follows:

"General Lake reports that on the 19th the enemy vacated the Bathaiesa advanced position on the right bank of the Tigris. General Gorringe, following up the enemy, attacked and carried the Dujailam redoubt. The enemy is still holding the Sannayyat position on the left bank of the river.

"A force of Russian cavalry has joined General Gorringe after a bold and adventurous ride."

PEACE IS IMPOSSIBLE.

President Wilson is Told of Determination of Allies.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—"The die is cast. Germany must fight on to the bitter end and cannot escape retribution by useless appeals to neutrals for peace."

This is the answer of the Entente Allies to the steadily increasing peace talk which has reached official circles here from Berlin. The Allies' position, it is explained, has been made perfectly clear to President Wilson.

Both the President and Secretary of State Lansing have been informed confidentially from sources close to the Entente capitals that peace proposals now were out of the question. The time is not ripe, it is explained, and the time will not be ripe until Germany's military dominance has been completely broken."

The Entente Allies have translated Germany's peace pleas into the meaning that the Imperial Government now sees the handwriting on the wall, and is taking measures far in advance in an effort to end the war. This Government also has received official reports from its own agents tending to show that Germany is beginning to feel the effects of the "drag" much more deeply than is generally known.

PORT SAID IS RAIDED

Teutons Make Several Attacks With Aeroplanes.

Key to Suez Canal Suffers Slightly From Shelling—Bombs Are Also Dropped by Aviators at Dunkirk and Belfort—Allied Air Squadrons Bring Down Several of the Enemy Birdmen in Duels.

LONDON, May 22.—An attack on Port Said, the northernmost point on the Suez Canal, by two Turkish aeroplanes resulted in the death of two and the wounding of 13 civilians and five soldiers, is announced in a statement received by the War Office Sunday night from the British headquarters at Cairo. The official report reads:

"Two army aeroplanes dropped 16 bombs on Port Said Sunday morning, mostly on the Arab quarter. Two civilians were killed and 13 were injured severely. Five soldiers were wounded. The aeroplanes were driven away by anti-aircraft guns."

German aeroplanes carried out since Saturday two bombardments in the region of Dunkirk. About 20 shells were dropped Saturday evening, killing four persons and wounding 15. Sunday another enemy squadron dropped about a hundred bombs in the outskirts of Dunkirk. Two soldiers and a child were killed and 20 persons were wounded.

Allied aeroplanes pursued the enemy machines and succeeded in bringing down two at the moment they were about to enter their own lines.

Immediately after the first bombardment 53 French, British, and Belgian aeroplanes flew over the German cantonments at Wywege and Ghistelles, on which 250 shells were dropped.

German aeroplanes Sunday dropped 15 bombs on Belfort, but the material damage was insignificant.

Saturday in an aerial fight off Nieuport a Belgian aeroplane brought down a German machine, which fell into the sea.

On Saturday the British aeroplanes again had several successful encounters. An aviatik fell on fire into some trees in the enemy's lines, one of the occupants falling out. Another fell in flames into the German lines after an encounter with a British scout. A third crashed to earth in the British lines near Marlcourt. Sunday a fourth machine landed undamaged in the British lines, and the pilot and observer were made prisoner. The British lost one machine.

The weather again being favorable for flying there was much activity in the air. A raid was made by enemy aviators in the region of Baccarat, Epinal, and Vesoul. The material damage was insignificant. Four persons were wounded slightly.

French aviators Saturday night threw numerous bombs on military establishments at Thionville, Etain, and Spincourt, and on the camps in the vicinity of Azannes and Damvillers. The railway station at Lumes was bombarded, causing the rapid flight of trains and a large fire in the railway buildings.

In an aerial engagement between four French aeroplanes and three Fokkers, over Bezange forest, one of the enemy machines was brought down and another Fokker, being attacked, was compelled to descend to earth behind the German lines while under the fire of the French batteries, which destroyed it.

GREECE URGED TO JOIN.

She Must Aid Entente or Go Bankrupt, Says Venizelos.

ATHENS, May 22.—Former Premier Venizelos has contributed an article to The Athens Herald, in which he points out what he considers the mistakes made by the Greek Government. He condemns the "blustering methods" of Premier Skouloudis, and states that the army which, he says, has worn out uniforms and boots, as well as part of the equipment furnished at the mobilization, could not take the field within less than two months, and then only if the Entente powers undertook to furnish the necessary equipment. The task of feeding the army, he says, is becoming daily more problematical. The former Premier hints that Greece is on the verge of bankruptcy, and says: "While there is only one road to salvation, it is precisely that which we will not follow."

The article makes a strong bid for closer relations between Greece and the Allies "before it is too late."

French Minister Recalled?

BERLIN, May 21.—A Bucharest despatch to the Overseas News Agency says that Camille Blondel, French Minister to Roumania, is to be recalled at his own request.

Roumania recently concluded commercial treaties with the Central powers. There has been no evidence of friction between France and Roumania, which has been represented as sympathizing with the Entente Allies. Russia, however, is reported to view with suspicion the new treaties to which Roumania is a party, believing they may be of a political nature.

Dillon Deplores Revolt.

LONDON, May 22.—John Dillon, member of the House of Commons for East Mayo, has sent the following message to Judge John F. McGoorty of the Irish Fellowship Club, Chicago:

"The Irish insurrection has inflicted serious injury to the Irish cause. All hope of securing Home rule in the near future depends more than ever on the union of the Irish race throughout the world, and especially on the support of the Irish in America."

Editorial

OWEN SOUND is sixty years old.

THE Bruce battalion will be in Chesley June 3rd

THERE is nothing in a name, a rose by any other name would smell just as sweet, and so Berlin, Ontario will be a thing of the past.

THE Tara leaders say that the boys from that village at the battle front seem to have a charmed life as not a single one has been killed or wounded.

A lady at Goderich, aged 80, and totally blind, knits three pairs of socks weekly—and within the past twelve months has knitted over 125 pairs. This is a record worthy of the D. C. M.

THE daylight saving proposition should work out all right, let us try it. Getting to bed an hour or two earlier and getting up an hour or two earlier will benefit a great many people and do injury to a very small number.

A few years ago we had a Board of Trade. We got together and talked, we may not have done very much good, but we did the town no harm. It is about time that we got together and began talking again. We have an industrial situation calling for attention.

EVERYTHING indicates that the great offensive by the Allies will be delayed for some time. In heavy artillery and ammunition they are not equal to their foe, and the millions of Russians, possibly the deciding factor in this war, have to be armed. All of which goes to show the tremendous preparations made by the Central Powers before war had been declared.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. W e Marshall Friday May 19th a daughter.

The Canadian Order of Foresters attended the Methodist Church Sunday evening. In addressing them Rev. Mr Pradham assumed that the name Forester must have had some definite original meaning. Taking it literally it stood for the simple life, love of nature and brotherhood. From scriptural characters he showed how God was indispensible to an adequate expression of these principles. Fraternity was a bigger fund than finance. Brotherhood gave scope for development of the highest powers these of heart and sympathy.

Address and Presentation.

On Thursday evening May 18th. about fifty friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr Edward Walpole, Keppel. The occasion being to present Ptes. H Baldwin, T. Hill with wrist watches, Pte. G. McCulloch with a signet ring and Pte. W. McKeough with bible and fountain pen also a sum of money to each Pte. McKeough being absent his gifts will be forwarded to him. Mr Robert Evans read the address and Mr James Barfoot made the presentation, to which Pte. Baldwin made a suitable reply on behalf of the soldiers and thanking their friends for the handsome and useful gifts, assuring them that they would always keep in mind the kindness which had been shown them.

The address read was as follows—

Keppel May 18th 1916.

To Ptes H. Baldwin, G. McCulloch, T. Hill and W. McKeough.

Britains my raids voices call
Sons he welded each and all
Into one imperial whole
One with Britains heart and soul
One life, one flag, one fleet, one throne
Britons hold your own.

Those words of Tennysons are forcibly brought to our minds, when at the call of the Motherland Canada's sons from all parts of our Dominion are respouding nobly. We, your friends, and neighbors of the 19th and 21st cons., Keppel desire to express to you our hearty appreciation of the fact that you have donned the khaki as members of the 160th Bruce Battalion and are preparing to leave friends, home and country to cross the sea to fight for the British flag, and the cause of justice, righteousness and liberty For greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend. We honor you for the sacrifice you are making and as you go to fight for us we, who remain at home, will always keep you in our minds and hearts. May our Heavenly Father guide and keep you and if it is His will we hope you will be spared to return to home and friends you are now leaving behind, whom we assure you will be watching and waiting anxiously to welcome you home. We cannot repay you for what you are doing for us, but as a small token of our appreciation we ask you to accept these wrist watches, ring, bible and fountain pen. We leave you in Gods hands knowing that in Him there is safety. Fare ye well.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors of the 19th and 21st cons. Keppel.

James Barfoot,
Robt. J. Evans.

Prominent Merchant Restored to Health by "Fruit-a-tives"

Bathurst, N.B., July 25th, 1914.

"I had a stroke of Paralysis in March, and this left me unable to walk or help myself and the Constipation was terrible. Finally, I took 'Fruit-a-tives' for the Constipation. This fruit medicine gradually toned up the nerves and actually relieved the paralysis. By the use of 'Fruit-a-tives' I grew stronger until all the palsy left me. I am now well and attend my store every day."

Gordon Craig

"I reckon I am, but want I want to know is who you are."

"I" striving to regain my wits. "Why, I am—am Philip Henley. We—we have just got in from the north."

"Is that u woman with you?"

"Yes. May we come in?"

"Oh, I reckon I ain't got no license to turn yer away if yer mind ter risk it. Lord knows I'm willin' 'nough to hav' company. Git yer duds, an' I'll light up so yer kin see a bit."

He disappeared, and I lugged the grips to the top of the steps, where we waited. Then a faint light streamed out through the open door, a moment later outlining his figure.

"Come on in," he said, still gruffly. "Yer don't need be afeerd o' me, mam, and the housekeeper'll be yere directly."

I confess I entered the dim hall reluctantly, obsessed by some strange premonition of danger. But Mrs. Bernard clung to me, and the sight of her white face gave me new courage.

CHAPTER V.

A Pleasant Welcome.

It was an old fashioned living room into which we entered, the floor unswept, the chairs faded and patched. Curtains were drawn closely at the windows, while the single oil lamp stood on a center table littered with old newspapers. The shading of the light gave me only a partial view of the man but he was big, loose jointed, having enormous shoulders, his face half hidden by a heavy mustache and low drawn hat brim. I could scarcely perceive its outline. He appeared a typical rough, wearing high boots, with an ugly looking revolver in a belt holster.

"Where are you from?" I asked, surprised at this display of firearms.

"Texas," with a grin not altogether pleasant. "That's an ol' friend. I was hired fer to keep people outer this shebang. There ain't no work goin' on, so I don't hav' no niggers to keep folks out."

"Who employed you?"

"That don't make no difference. Those was my orders—not to talk nor let anybody hang 'round except you folks."

"Then we were excepted?" in surprise.

"Sure, I reckon yer'd 'a' been hoofin' it up the road long afore this otherwise. Still, I dunno," with a suggestive wink. "I've got a likin' for pretty girls."

I glanced at her, where she had sank down on a dilapidated sofa, but no expression of her face told me she had overheard. It was the man's wink, more than his language, which angered me.

"Yer needn't ride no high hoss with me."

"Cut out your references to the lady," I said in a low tone, "unless you are starting in for trouble."

"Oh, skittish, hey! Yer needn't ride no high hoss with me. I'm on ter your game."

His words sufficed to silence my batteries. I felt no fear of the man, big as he was and armed, but the thought that he might have been sent there by either Neale or Vail and informed of the conspiracy made me cautious about angering him. I must discover first the exact situation before locking horns with this Texas steer.

"Oh, do you!" I returned carelessly. "All right, then, we'll let it go at that. Only please remember the lady is under my protection. What is your name?"

"Coombs," in better humor, feeling he had bluffed me. "Bill Coombs."

"Can we have a bit of lunch?"

"I reckon yer can. Ol' Sally is a rustlin' some grub now. I stirred her up when I first come in."

He sat down crosslegged on a chair the other side the littered table and stared at us, his hat still drawn down over his eyes. I spoke to her quietly in a voice which would not carry across the room.

"Don't mind him," I whispered. "He's only a rough neck trying to bully a bit. I'll teach him his place before tomorrow."

"It is not the man so much," she replied, giving me a glimpse of her eyes. "But it is all so desolate and gloomy."

"Shadows won't hurt us, and this place will look better by daylight."

"You haven't my nerves."

"Oh, yes, I have; only they are trained. I didn't anticipate an easy job when I came down here. I am beginning to wonder if those fellows were square, if they gave me the straight story. Coombs' words would seem to indicate that he knows I'm a fraud. Perhaps he didn't mean that, but it sounded so. Why should they tell that rough neck their plans and send him down here? I'll find out what he knows and how he knows it before another ten hours. If he's here to spy on us I'll make him earn his money."

"I—I hardly know why I consented to come, only I was so miserable; anything seemed better than the life I was leading."

"You saw all the papers," I interposed, "and they bear out every statement."

"Yes. But could they not be forged? Why should any honest lawyer advise a client to undertake such a fraud? It seems to me we are actually criminals, engaged in a criminal plot. Because the plan was concocted by a lawyer makes no difference. We could be arrested, imprisoned."

"We shall have to play out the game tonight at least," I said, startled by her earnestness. "I will talk with Coombs and will tell you the result tomorrow. Your nerves are all overtrung, and the affair may appear different by daylight."

The Texan got noisily to his feet and swaggered across the floor.

"If you all hav' got through yer whisperin'," he said roughly, "I reckon Sally's got ther grub laid out."

I bit my lips to keep back a hot reply, feeling the restraint of her eyes, and we followed him into the next room. The table was set for two, and I could distinguish the shadow of a woman standing motionless in the far ther corner.

"Yer kin talk it out yere," announced Coombs, waving one hand, "'cause I won't be present, havin' et already. I reckon Sally won't interfere none."

He slammed the door viciously going out, causing the lamp to sputter. Then the woman came silently forward, a coffeepot in her hand. She was a mulatto perhaps sixty years of age, her face scarred by smallpox, and with strangely furtive eyes. Somehow she fitted into the scene, and I saw my companion gazing at her almost with horror as she ditted about us silently as a specter. I endeavored to talk while eating heartily, for I was hungry, but found it difficult to arouse Mrs. Bernard to any response, and she merely toyed with her food.

When the colored woman went out Mrs. Bernard dropped her fork and pushed back her chair.

"Oh, I simply cannot stand this place!" she exclaimed. "There is something perfectly horrid about it, and—and the people. How shall I ever get through the night?"

"That is nothing," I soothed, although hardly at ease myself. "She is evidently of the taciturn sort. We don't need to keep those servants, you know. I'll hunt up some more cheerful in town tomorrow. Why, by Jove, it's 10 o'clock already. Have you finished?"

"I couldn't choke down another mouthful."

"Well, don't be afraid. They mean well enough, no doubt. Sallie!"

She came gliding in, her back to the door.

"Ah reckon he's out in one o' ther cabins, sah—he done don't sleep in the house nohow."

"He doesn't sleep here! Why?"

"Ah spect it's cause he's afeerd, too, sah," she replied, her sneaky eyes showing. "Ah's a voodoo, an' Ah don't care 'bout 'em tall, but good Lor', dar ain't no white man wants ter stay in des yere house more'n one night."

She laughed, a weird, grating laugh and started downstairs. I stood still, watching her light disappear. Then, swearing at myself for a coward, I stepped back into my own room and closed the door.

This revealment of conditions left me thoroughly puzzled. I was not frightened at the situation, for I largely attributed the fear shown by both Pete and Sallie to negro superstition. But Bill Coombs was a very different proposition. He was of the hard headed kind, not to be easily alarmed by visionary terrors, and yet he was manifestly afraid to sleep in the house. I was sufficiently acquainted with his type to comprehend there must be some real cause driving him to retreat to the negro cabins for rest.

I sat there for some time smoking, endeavoring to think it all over coolly and listening intently. At first I could distinguish the rattle of dishes downstairs as Sallie cleared the table, and, a little later, heard Mrs. Bernard moving about uneasily in her room across the hall. But at last these sounds ceased and the house become still. I removed a portion of my clothing and lay down on the bed, a certain uneasiness preventing me from undressing entirely. I was tired, but with little inclination for sleep. Could there be any truth in Mrs. Bernard's questioning of the motives actuating the man who had sent us here? Had we come—mere pawns in some game of crime—deceived, perhaps betrayed to arrest? Was Coombs here merely to watch us and report to Neale and Vail how we carried out our part of the bargain? The affair certainly looked altogether different now I was upon the ground, although I could figure out no possible object those men could have. At least they could accomplish nothing without my co-operation, and, if I discovered any evil afoot, I could block them instantly. I was there to save this property for the rightful heir and was determined now to see that Philip Henley received all that was due him. It was after 1 o'clock before I fell into a drowsy sleep.

Indeed, it hardly seemed to me that I had entirely lost consciousness when I was jerked bolt upright by the sharp report of a firearm. For a single instant I imagined the shot fired within my room; then I sprang to the floor and flung it open, peering out into the hall. Everything was still, the rays from my lamp barely extending to the head of the stairs. I could neither see nor hear anything, and yet I had a strange premonition that I was not alone. There was an automatic pistol in the pocket of my coat, and I stepped back after it, picking up the lamp on my return, determined on a thorough examination of the upper story. There was no doubt about the shot—

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

If your work is tiring; if your nerves are excitable; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions.

It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.

Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. Try it.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

"Are you the one who is to show us to our rooms?"

"Yes."

She picked up the lamp and went out, and Mrs. Bernard followed instantly, evidently afraid to be left in the dark. I followed with the grips, trailing up the stairs, having seen nothing of Coombs in the front room. In the upper hall our guide threw open two doors, going into the rooms and lighting lamps, thus giving glimpses of the interiors. The one in the corner was the larger and better furnished.

"This will be yours," I said, placing her valise on the floor. "You can feel safe enough there with the door locked—yes, there is a key—and I will be right opposite if you need anything."

She gave me her hand, but I felt it tremble.

"You are still afraid?"

"Yes, I am—but—but I am not going to be such a fool."

As her door closed I turned to the [illegible] who still stood there, lamp in hand. [illegible] not sleepy, and I wanted [illegible] understanding the sound was no effect of a dream. I wondered if the girl and been awakened by the report and paused to listen at her door, but no sound reached me from within.

I moved down the hall cautiously, regretting the need of a lamp, but the place was strange, and I dare not venture about in the dark.

The first doors I came to were ajar, but the moon was at the back of the house, and I was obliged to enter each apartment and dash my light into the corners to make sure they were vacant. These were medium sized bedrooms, comfortably furnished, although containing nothing new. Only one exhibited any evidence of late occupancy, being in considerable disorder, the bed unmade, some discarded garments strewn about the floor.

Some man had been sleeping up here lately, and it was not Coombs, but a much smaller individual. This knowledge made me even more cautious as I tiptoed down the hall, now narrowed by the back stairway. The first door opened into a bathroom, the tub half full of dirty water, a mussed towel on the floor. The last door, leading to a room apparently extending clear across the rear of the house, was tightly closed. I set my lamp down well out of sight and gripped my pistol before attempting to manipulate the knob. It opened noiselessly. Moonlight streamed through one window where the curtain was not closely drawn, but the gloom was too dense to reveal much of the shrouded interior. I could dimly perceive a table and some chairs, one

MILLER LAKE

(Crowded Out Last Week.)

Rain and more rain hardly anything done in the seeding line here yet

Sunday School was opened up in the Minnonite Church on Sunday, it was closed on the first of January on account of no shed at the church and most of the children had a long way to go to get there.

Mr Harry Hawk, who has been laid up nearly all spring with very sore eyes, is getting some better.

Mr James Brough made a business trip to Wiarton this week.

W. J. Holmes is gaining a little in health and able to be out of bed a while each day.

Mr. Elgin Holmes was down to Spry on Wednesday for a load of oats.

Mr and Mrs D. Martin were down to Mr Harry Hawes at Spry on Thursday.

Mr Ted Bartman of Ferndale was up here on Thursday with a drove of cattle that he sold to Tom Robins.

Mr Wm. Sadler made a trip to Lions Head on Saturday for a disc that was to be there for here, but Bill was disappointed as it was not there and he had his 35 mile trip for nothing.

Mr R. Shaw of Lions Head and Mr Norman Walpole of Durham, agents for the Cockshut Plow Co. were up here on Friday setting up a disc seed drill for D C. Holmes.

Mr John McKay, of Lions Head, was up here on Wednesday delivering fruit-trees.

A number of the people here were out for a bear hunt on Friday evening but Mrs Bear and cubs got safely away.

On Friday Mr S. C. Weatherhead, who has had temporary charge of the Miller Lake Post Office got word from the department to transfer it over to Mr Michael Sadler, who has the permanent oopointment. D. Martin ex post master made the transfer. We have no complaint to make about the change as we believe at the present time it will be more central but we are sorry to loose the name of the office as the mail department has changed the name to Sadler's Corners, it has been Miller Lake for about 35 years.

How the Blood Is Purified

By the Searching and Painstaking Work of Healthy Kidneys.

In its circulation through the body the blood not only carries nutrition to the cells and tissues, but also collects the waste material resulting from the breaking down of cells and tissues, the ashes left by the fire of life.

In due course the blood passes through the kidneys to be purified of these poisonous impurities, and these filtering organs extract each day about 50 ounces of liquids and 2 ounces of solids, 500 grains of urea and 10 grains of uric acid, the material which is found in rheumatic joints.

Sudden changes of temperature throw a great strain on the kidneys, but it is overeating and drinking that are the usual cause of trouble. In a vain effort to remove the excess of waste matter the kidneys break down, uric acid and other poisons are left in the blood and the whole system is poisoned by impure blood.

Pains in the back and limbs, severe headaches, lumbago and rheumatism are the natural result. Hardening of the arteries, excessive blood pressure, weakening of the heart's action, Bright's disease may be anticipated unless prompt action is taken.

We like to think of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as preventive treatment, for by their timely use you can readily prevent all these dreaded disorders. Unlike other medicines for kidney troubles, they awaken the action of liver and bowels as well as the kidneys, and thereby effect a prompt cleansing of the whole filtering and excretory systems.

There is no way by which the action of the kidneys can be so quickly aroused and the blood cleansed of impurities as by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It is therefore the greatest of blood purifiers and much sought for at this time of year, when everybody feels the need of a medicine to cleanse from the system the accumulation of poisonous matter.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

The Women's Patriotic League are shipping a car load of magazines, books, rags, rubber metal and etc, would like the men to hunt up any old metal or rubbers that they have around and leave it out so the ladies can get it when collecting.

Butter wrappers, which were made in Belgium, have gone up in price 200 per cent since the beginning of the war and now it is practically impossible to secure any more. The United States factories are unable to meet the demand and this product is of a much inferior quality. The Echo has only a limited supply on hand and when these are sold out it may be impossible to secure any more.

The exodus to Walkerton Monday was fairly large. About 100 went by special train while as many more went by autos. It is said that the number of visitors in Walkerton to see the county battalion in full strength numbered 7000. The weather was ideal, one of the very best days for the 24th in a life time. Now that Walkerton celebrated the 24th and Chesley lays hold of June 3, why cannot we put on a celebration of some kind for July 1st.

Mr Shoichi Murao, a student of Wycliffe College, Toronto, visiting Wiarton and vicinity in the interests of the Bible Society, spoke in the Methodist Church Sunday morning on his conversion to Christianity. He told of his childhood's training in Buddhism giving him conceptions of the future life of Shintoism impressing him with sanctity, of his teacher in the common school asking whether he was going to live to work or work to live and how the answer came in getting a copy of the New Testament with the marked passage "Man shall not live by bread alone."

Mr Murao is a good speaker having acquired a considerable facility in the English language. He left Japan two years ago and purposes returning to work under the Episcopal church after he has completed his Arts Course in Toronto.

Death of Peter Cheadle.

On Tuesday morning there passed away in the person of Peter Cheadle a gentleman of upright life, kindly disposition and very even temperment. He was born in Toronto more than 65 years ago. His parents died when he was young and the duty of caring for his smaller brothers fell upon his young shoulders, and this duty he faithfully performed. About 31 years ago he came to Wiarton and since that time he was engaged in the butcher and grocery business. Although of a retiring nature he was fond of sport, and was passionately fond of curling and hunting. In his earlier life he was a crack shot and very few could pull an oar with a more powerful stroke. He had not been well for the past year, and in the hope of regaining his health he spent the winter in Detroit. He returned somewhat improved, but it was evident that his condition was not satisfactory, so a fortnight ago he went to Toronto where an examination of his stomach was made with the X rays. He was sent home assured that there was nothing of a cancerous nature wrong with him, this was on Wednesday. On Saturday he was on the street, that night he took a change for the worse and passed away yesterday, the doctor stating that ptomine poisoning was the immediate cause of his death.

The deceased is survived by a widow and one son, Fred of Toronto. There are two brothers Ben of Florida and Albert of Detroit, who are expected at the funeral.

A Big Clean Up

The devotion of the ladies of Wiarton, to the patriotic cause was amply in evidence all last week. Notices had been sent to the residents of the town to have their old magazines, newspapers, rags, iron, and etc ready to be called for on Friday mornihg. Every house in town responded well to the call and large bundles were seen everywhere. The business men and livery men manifested their interest in giving men and teams for the cause, in fact several men assisted all day with the work. Mrs. Matthews of the Public Library is to be congratulated on the excellent assortment of books that she gave, others did well, too, but are too numerous to make special mention. The work was not congenial work and several times when the men were absent the ladies even sorted and packed old iron. they, however. were delighted with the splendid results of their "clean up" and realized about 35,00C lbs from it, making over a car load. It is thought it would be a splendid idea if from now until next year every one would save their old magazines and newspapers, and then again, have general cleaning up. The magazines are really what they depended on and receives most of. The car load is being sent to E. Pulan. Toronto. and it is hoped that he will have a splendid estimate of the goods.

Wounded In Action.

A telegram from the Militia Department, Ottawa, Sunday contained the sad news that William Sinclair. son of Mr George S. Sinclair, for many years a resident of this town, had been wounded and was at a base hospital. Willie Sinclair was a Wiarton boy, born and educated here, taught school for a few years drifted West, where he enlisted. His father who spent the winter at Smiths Falls, is now in Toronto.

Communication

To Editor of the Echo.

Sir,—

One can't very well call a cow a sneak, but of course they have to be forbidden to prowl around the streets. It reminds me of a cow which walked into my back kitchen one time and ate up my vegetables. We don't forbid a man from prowling around the streets at night, but I would ask what better is the man, who sneaked around a lady's house at night, and picked all her choice flowers, leaving nothing but his foot prints.

A citizen.

Conditions at Iroquois Falls

The following letter was received by Mr. George Kempt, from his son Albert, who is an electrical engineer in the service of a paper company at this point.

Iroquois Falls, Ont.

Dear Father:—

Well I reached here although it took three days to make the trip. I saw more good land between here and North Bay, than I saw from Toronto to North Bay, as far as I can see there is the best of land around here with no rocks in sight. This company employs 500 hands, and that is all there are here. They are building houses for their employees. fitted with hot and cold water and steam heat This plant makes into paper every 24 hours about 150 cords of pulp wood, and they have a stock of wood on hand of about 10,000 cds. They cut the logs, float them down the river to the mill where they are sawed into 3 ft length, peeled and stacked by machinery. They have abundance of power and run all their machinery by electricity. The company has erected a new store with everything up-to-date, what we can't buy there we send to Eatons for. The company has erected a hospital with doctor and trained nurses for the benefit of employers, most of the mill hands are Polish and French. Some of the people live in tents and cook their own meals to save board expenses. The paper manufactured here is all used for newspaper printing and is shipped to all countries of the globe. They are building another mill farther north and there seems to be a continual spruce forest all the way to Hudson Bay.

Well I guess I will close now. Here is the store and all its customers. Remember me to all,

Yours truly,
A. J. Kempt.

Bert Robertson Passes Away.

The death occurred in St. Catharines, where he had gone for treatment, on Tuesday morning of Bert Robertson, of Keppel township, whose farm practically adjoined the corporation. The deceased had been ill for more than a year, and his constitution had become undermined from an attack of pleurisy. He went to St. Catharines to undergo an operation to remove an abscess, the operation was successful, but his heart apparently failed and he passed away at the age of 30 years. He was an estimable young man and industrious young man and his early death is to be regretted. His body is being brought home for interment. He is survived by a widow, who was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Moore.

Walkerton

A private of the 160th is to be court-martialled this week on a serious offence. He is charged with being intoxicated while on guard duty and threatening his superior officer.

The School boys collection of old newspapers last Saturday totalled 2,000 lbs. This makes 2½ tons that the pupils of Walkerton Schools have collected thus far.

The first death to occur in the 160th Bruce Battalion took place at 12.30 noon on Tuesday last, when Pte. John Couper passed away at his home near Tara from spinal meningitis. Owing to the contagious nature of the disease no military funeral was held. The measles epidemic in the Battalion has been stayed, and no new cases have developed. One case of diphtheria has broken out in the camp at Walkerton, but the patient was promptly quarantined and a spreading of the disease is not looked for.

According to the assessor's returns this year the population of Walkerton barely exceeds the 3000 mark, which shows a considerable falling off from last year, when the population went over the 3100 mark. The difference in the figures is credited to enlistments, there being 108 gone overseas from Walkerton since the last assessment. These are with the 18th, 34th and 71st Battalions. When the 160th (Bruce) Battalion moves out another big slump will be shown in the figures. Here, but Walkerton is proud of the spirit that is causing the population at home to decline in order that the trenches may be filled at Flanders. It is more important that the lines hold at the front than Walkerton be the biggest station on the Bruce map. When the war is over and the boys come marching home, Walkerton will bounce back into shape again. In the meantime, "Good-bye Molly, Darling, for We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall.

OWEN SOUND

In the casualty lists on Wednesday the name of Lance Corporal Fred Dobie, appeared in the list of killed. Lance-corporal Dobie is the second son of Mr J. B. Dobie is the second son of Mr J. B. Dobie of Thessalon and a nephew of Mrs Dobie, West Second Avenue. While not personally well known here his parents have many friends in Owen Sound and vicinity who will regret his death.

L-Corp. Dobie enlisted in June of 1915, and crossed with the 2nd Universities Company, the same unit with which the late Lieut. T. S Gordon was connected upon first enlisting. Capt. D. R. Dobie and Lieut. J. M. Dobie of the 147th Battalion are cousins.

The two Owen Sound girls, Etta Wardell and Vivian McLean, whose mysterious disappearance from their homes here caused their friends a great deal of anxiety, returned totown on the late train on Tuesday night of their own accord. The girls give as their reason for leaving that they feared that they would fail at the examinations at the Collegiate Institute which takes place next month and for which they were preparing. On reaching Toronto they secured employment at a five-ten and fifteen cent store, but when the report of their disappearance appeared in the Toronto papers, they left for Hamilton. On Tuesday they thought better of their adventure and returned home.

The province at large, as well as Owen Sound and this district suffered a loss which will be keenly felt in the death of Mr Thomas Murray, B. A., Principal of the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, who passed away on Tuesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock at his residence, 215 8th Ave. West. His death came suddenly, following a two weeks' illness which, while considered serious, was not thought to be critical until within a few hours of the end. Even his close friends did not realize the seriousness of his illness and everyone was shocked and grieved when the news became known.

Lightning struck the elevator cover on the big warehouse of Lemon Bros., produce dealers, during an electric storm this morning, May 28th; followed the cable of the elevator, igniting the wood work and the fire spread to the second floor and was soon beyond control. In the third flat was stored an immense number of egg cases and butter boxes, and when the fire got into these an immense heat was created. A pile of one thousand bags of sugar, which had been unloaded only a short time, was also enveloped and fed to the flames. When it was found impossible to save the warehouse, the efforts of the firemen were concentrated on saving the cold-storage warehouse in the rear. A strenuous fight of four hours saved this section, and the contents consisting largely of eggs, were salvaged. The machinery also was unharmed. A portion of the third storey front fell out, and Fireman Loton Daoard was struck on the leg and caused a fracture. Only a small portion of the stock in the warehouse was saved. Frost's garage, which adjoins on the south, escaped damage. The burned building was owned by Elias Lemon, and the stock was owned by his nephews, Morley and Herbert Lemon. There was a light insurance on the building and $45,000 on the contents. The firm has secured a cold-storage plant in an adjoining block, and will have the use of the big, new curling rink until new premises are obtained. The loss over the insurance will be heavy, but the firm resumes business Monday morning. The heavy rain prevented other fires though the burning material was carried over several blocks.

STINGING NEURALGIA

The Trouble Due to Nerves Starved For lack of Good Blood.

An eminent medical writer has said that "neuralgia is the cry of starved nerves for better blood". The one great symptom of this trouble is pain, fierce, stabbing pain, that almost drives the sufferer frantic. The one cause is poor blood, the only cure is to enrich the blood. Heat applied to the inflamed nerves will give relief, but does not cure. Dr Williams' Pink Pills furnish the blood all the needed elements, and the blood conveys them to the nerves. The only way of getting food or medicine to the nerves is through the blood, and the only way to enrich the blood is through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In this way neuralgia, sciatica and other nerve disorders are promptly cured and the whole system benefited and strengthened. Mrs. M. Gleason, R. R. No. 1, Uxbridge, Ont., who was a great sufferer from neuralgia says: "I suffered intensely from neuralgia for four years. My blood was thin and I was completely run down. I suffered intense pain all the time. At different times I consulted three doctors, but their treatment did no more than give me temporary relief. Then I tried different medicines, but the result was the same they seemed no good in my case. I was growing steadily worse, and finally could not leave the house nor do a bit of work. The last doctor I consulted could do nothing for me but give me morphine tablets to ease the pain, and by this time I had about resigned myself to a life of pain. Then one of Dr. Williams' almanacs came to our house and I read of similar cases cured through use of Pink Pills. I got three boxes and before they were all gone the pain began to decrease and I began to have a better appetite. By the time I had taken six boxes I was again a well woman, and my neighbors could hardly realize that such a change could due in so short a time. Later I was bothered with eczema and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me. I have found these Pills worth their weight in gold and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are ailing." You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Chesley

On Monday morning Hardie Campbell and Lindsay Milne left for Toronto where they had signed up with the 69th Battery. They were accompanied by Roy Reid and Wm. Stewart of the Bank of Hamilton staff, who expect to get a place in the same battery. The military microbe has got into the cranium of the boys of Chesley and they are still in the humor for enlisting.

Hon. W. H. Hearst, Premier of Ontario, and an old county of Bruce Boy has consented to come to Chesley on June 3rd to assist in the ceremony of the presentation of the colors to the 160th Battalion. Premier Hearst has just returned from a trip to the West Indies for the benefit of his health and has been greatly benefited by his sea voyage. This will be his first public appearance since his return from the Barbadoes Island. The committee is fortunate in securing this talented and popular son of Bruce to speak on this unique occasion. In a telegram to the local member the Premier says: "My best wishes will ever follow the men from my native country who are willing to make the supreme sacrifice in the great cause. I trust the demonstration will be the success the occasion demands as I am sure it will."

24th Celebration a Monster Success.

Walkerton Herald

The big military demonstration held here on Victoria Day by the 160th Bruce Battalion drew the biggest crowd in the history of the town and was easily the greatest military event ever staged in Bruce. The weather, which was ideal, enabled people from all parts of the county to assemble here and see Bruce's own battalion drawn up in battle array, and going through the various drills and stunts as they are played on the battle-scarred fields of Flanders. A conservative estimate of the crowds assembled places the gathering here at not less than 12,000 souls. About 500 motor cars were darting here and there through the streets. Circus Day or the old time Fall Fairs couldn't measure up as a crowd-drawer with yesterday's events. Bruce's pride in her soldiers was amply demonstrated, and was fully repaid by the excellence of the program rendered.

The proceeds at the grounds amounted to $1458, it being estimated that including soldiers, there were nearly 7,000 people within the exhibition park fence. The entire receipts of the day will probably reach about $2,000, of which $1500 will be devoted to the purchase of mess tents for the Battalion.

The crowd was one of the most orderly ever seen here. Very few drunks were on view, owing mostly to the fact that only beer, wine and soft drinks were allowed on sale here that day, and the keys were turned in the local bars sharply at 7 o'clock.

PIKE BAY

Mr. Joe Heath, of Lions Head, autoed here on Sunday and had a break down and had to have his car towed to Lions Head for repairs.

Showing a Roof Covered with Brantford Slates in Solid Color.

There is Safety Under This Roof

Have you ever had a fine job of decorating spoiled by a leaking roof? If you have, you certainly are in a position to appreciate the value of a roof that is positively water-proof. Some of the troubles common to wooden shingles to-day are that they are apt to split, warp or blow off as well as leak, soon after they are put on. Years ago they were good, but the quality has since gradually depreciated as the available supply of suitable timber became exhausted.

Brantford Slates have none of the faults of wooden shingles. They cannot rust. They do not allow rain to be driven under them as do metal roofs. They do not require rigid supporting as do the common tile or slate roofs. On the other hand Brantford Slates afford the utmost protection with little weight. They are made on a long-fibred felt "base" which is thoroughly saturated under pressure with asphaltum or mineral pitch. Crushed quarried slate particles are then deeply embedded in the surface of this "base", making it water-tight and fireproof.

Brantford Roofing

Brantford Slates are made in the natural slate colors of green, red, black and grey. The colors never fade and the slates do not require painting nor repairing. These slates are pliable and fit readily around gables and into the angles of any roof. This means a continuous roof without seams or joints. Spunks die on Brantford Slates. When you have these slates "on" you are done with the job. Remember they don't require painting or staining and may be selected to harmonize with almost any exterior color design, and the price is not beyond your reach. We would be pleased to send you samples and our Roofing Booklet.

GERMANS DRIVEN BACK

French Have Retaken Part of Cumieres and Dead Man Hill.

After Fierce Battle Allied Troops Have Reoccupied Part of Village of Tactical Importance and Have Taken Trenches to the North-West—Sunday Saw Heavy German Artillery Bombardment.

PARIS, May 29.—In a ferocious battle in which the French took the initiative Friday evening, and which lasted far into the night, the defenders of Verdun succeeded in wresting from the Germans the eastern part of Cumieres, the tactically important village on the west bank of the Meuse. In addition to regaining this portion of the village the French captured several trenches to the north-west of it. All subsequent German counter-attacks, violent as they were, broke down under the French defence fire.

In this attack the French took about 100 prisoners. The French also made some progress to the east of Hill 304 and repulsed a second German attack near Fort Douaumont. The capture of several trench elements south-west of Le Mort Homme netted the French about fifty prisoners.

A renewal by the Germans of their oft-repeated efforts to break through the French lines in Champagne, near Tahure and the Navarin farm, proved futile. While succeeding in the first onslaught in gaining a foothold in a number of small French trench elements, the Teutons were completely ejected by French counter-drives.

Sunday was devoted by the Germans before Verdun to violent artillery bombardments throughout the region of Le Mort Homme, on the west bank of the Meuse, and the sector west of the Thiaumont farm, on the east bank of the Meuse. No infantry attacks were made in the course of the day. The aggregate of the German losses so far in the struggle to gain Verdun are given in the Petit Parisen Sunday at about 350,000 men. The Echo de Paris says the minimum of the German losses on the east bank of the Meuse within the past week is 11,000. After making the strictest rectification of its figures, The Echo de Paris estimates the French casualties at one-third of this number for the fighting for Douaumont and the Mauromont quarries.

Staff information reaching Paris Sunday is to the effect that between May 20 and 25 the Germans employed seven divisions on both banks of the Meuse. Two were transferred from Flanders and two from the region of the Somme. On the western bank of the Meuse four divisions were engaged in the attacks of May 21, 22, and 23. On May 22, prior to the capture of Cumieres, the Germans delivered 16 attacks between the Bois d'Avocourt and the Meuse. Over fifty thousand men were used in the storming of Hill 304 and Le Mort Homme.

The Germans took the offensive in Alsace Sunday night, making two attempts at an attack north-east of Batschweiler, a town north-west of Altkirch. They were unable to leave their trenches under the French fire.

OFFICERS PROMOTED.

Several Doctors Have Been Given Lieutenant-Colonelcies.

LONDON, May 29.—Captain G. R. Geary, ex-Mayor of Toronto, has been appointed acting staff captain at Shorncliffe camp. This indicates that the authorities have not released him, as the Toronto City Council desired, in order that he might resume his legal duties.

The following assistant directors of the Canadian Medical Services have been appointed temporary lieutenant-colonels: Majors F. W. C. Wilson, Shorncliffe; J. McCombe, London; H. A. Chisholm, Bramshott. Lieut.-Colonel McCombe has charge of the London area.

Hon. Captain H. Beaudry has vacated the office of paymaster No. 1 Field Ambulance to become paymaster of the 69th at Shorncliffe. Corp. J. F. Cadenhead, of the 16th Battalion, has been granted a commission, and is attached to the office of the Canadian representative at the front. Sergt. G. H. Hopkins, Shorncliffe, and Pte. H. A. Johnston, C.A.M.C., have been given commissions. W. H. Barnes receives an honorary commission and is attached to the Canadian Red Cross at London.

Lieut. C. S. Lemesurier, of the 23rd Battalion, will sail for home on leave next week.

Field Marshal French expressed satisfaction when he inspected Bramshott camp on Empire Day, when the Canadian forces did a good deal of work. The 87th Grenadier Guards, under Lieut.-Colonel Rexford, gave an exhibition of special work in bayonet charging, while the 73rd Highlanders also made a good showing.

Captain John Lewis, former editor of The Montreal Star, has been promoted Major.

German Airmen Busy in Gulf of Riga.

BERLIN, May 29.—An air raid by a German flying squadron on a Russian aeroplane station at Papenholm, on the island of Oesel, in the Gulf of Riga, is announced in an official communication issued by the War Office Sunday night. The statement reads:

"Thursday night a German air squadron again dropped bombs on a Russian aeroplane station at Papenholm, on the island of Oesel. The squadron obtained lucky hits, mostly on the air station itself, and made

"In spite of a heavy fire directed against them all our aeroplanes returned safely."

GREEK FORTS SEIZED

Bulgar Forces Occupy Posts on Greek Side of Frontier.

They Gave the Defenders Two Hours in Which to Surrender—Allies Had Expected the Move—Greek Cabinet Has Consented to Occupation of Forts in Consideration of Concessions to Allies.

LONDON, May 29.—A Bulgarian invasion of Greece, which it has often been stated would so inflame the Hellenic nation that the latter's entry into the war would become inevitable, has taken place with the consent of the Greek Government. In giving this consent and explaining it to the diplomats at Athens, King Constantine's Government stated that no other course was left open to Greece after she had made similar concessions to the Entente powers in the past. "Greece possesses no option to act otherwise," a Greek statesman is quoted as saying, explaining the consent to the Bulgarian invasion.

The actual crossing of the frontier occurred on May 25 (last Thursday) near Demir-Hissar, via Rupell pass. The invaders, about 25,000 strong, occupied Demir-Hissar station and bridge, and also forts Rupell and Dragotina, Spatovo. It is stated that they are marching towards Kavalla.

The crossing of the Greek frontier by the Bulgarian Macedonian army and the occupation by it of four Greek forts, coupled with the report that the Bulgarians are advancing in the direction of Kavalla, are interpreted here as foreshadowing a Bulgarian drive on Salonica. Such a drive is believed here to be instigated by Bulgaria's ally, Germany, with the view to forestalling any possible allied campaign in Macedonia and thus depriving the Entente powers of the initiative, repeating the performance at Verdun and on the Trentino.

The Daily News' Athens correspondent, announcing the Bulgarian occupation of Rupell, says: "No allied troops are there. The Greek garrison of the fort, which is part of the organized defences or Demir-Hissar, fired 26 shots against the invaders.

"Considerable doubt existed at Athens whether the advance was made by the Germans or Bulgarians. There was a desire to regard the invasion as being undertaken by the Germans, but I have the best authority for saying that the invaders are Bulgarians, led by German officers.

"The latter explained that they had definite instructions to occupy the fort in order to protect the Bulgar left wing against an attack by the Allies. The Greek garrison was given two hours to evacuate, which they did after receiving instructions from Athens.

"The officers taking possession of the fort, signed a document promising to return the fort to the Greeks as soon as the military necessity of holding it ceased. They also promised to indemnify Greece for any damage done by the occupation.

"My information is that the Bulgarians have been practically abandoned by the Austrians and Germans in the Balkan war area, and were consequently forced themselves to take measures which they regard as necessary against an advance by the Allies."

The papers here declare that the Bulgarian advance is a violation of the arrangements concerning a neutral zone.

A despatch from Athens says: After a long conference attended by Premier Skouloudis, the Minister of War, and the members of the general staff, the officials announced Sunday that the Government had consented to the occupation of Rupell by a German-Bulgar force in consideration of the concessions made to the Entente Powers and of the wish of the Government to maintain strict neutrality.

SERBIAN ARMY IN FIELD

Eighty Thousand Men Have Been Landed at Salonica.

PARIS, May 29.—After crossing the Aegean Sea without loss the Serbian army in full strength has now been landed at Salonica, according to a despatch received here Sunday.

Serbia's new army has been variously estimated to number between 80,000 and 100,000 officers and men. It was reorganized on the island of Corfu, which is approximately 700 miles distant by water from Salonica.

The Serbian army totalled about 300,000 men at the outbreak of the war, but this force was greatly depleted as a result of an epidemic of typhus and by the engagements fought in an endeavor to check the Austro-German and Bulgarian invasion of Serbia and Montenegro. The survivors are reported in despatches from Mediterranean points to have included some of the best Serbian regiments.

On reaching the sea coast the Serbians were transported to the island of Corfu, where they were supplied with new rifles and clothing, and efficiently equipped for further service on the Balkan battlefield. When the reorganization had been completed the Entente allies sought permission of the Athens Government to transport the soldiers from Corfu to the base at Salonica across Greek country by rail. Greece, however, steadfastly refused to allow the troops to cross her territory, taking the stand that it would be a violation of her neutrality.

Fell With Aeroplane.

LONDON, May 29.—Capt. Grimes Jones was killed and Lieut. Henry Tennant, son of Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, was seriously injured Sunday in Kent, when a biplane in which they were manoeuvring fell a distance of a hundred feet.

INVASION FAILS.

Austrian Drive Into Italy Cannot Go Any Farther.

ROME, May 29.—The Austrian offensive on the Italian front is exclusively intended, military experts here are convinced, to forestall an offensive movement by the Allies. The Austrians seem fully convinced of the safety of the withdrawal of troops from the Russian and Balkan fronts, hence additional divisions now on the Trentino battle-line were withdrawn from Galicia, Albania, Serbia, and Montenegro.

General Koevess, commander-in-chief of the Austrian forces in Albania, has been placed in command of the artillery on the Trentino front. It is learned. The Austrians are believed to feel certain that an invasion of Lombardy and the occupation of Venice will inevitably lead to peace, and they are convinced, therefore, that their offensive on the Trentino, if successful, will be the decisive and final phase of Austro-Italian hostilities.

The Austrian expectations to invade Italy have, however, already practically failed, since, despite the fact that they succeeded in driving back the Italians more than two miles, they are not advancing on the south-east frontier of the Trentino, which is an open outlet for an invasion, between Monte Maggio and Tonezza, but, on the contrary, have been compelled here to strengthen the positions to which they may be forced to retire by the Italian counter-attacks. These counter-attacks were launched immediately after the Austrians' initial success, and the indications are that the Italians have severely checked the Austrian advance at the weakest point.

A correspondent at the front telegraphs that the Austrian offensive in the Trentino is now practically in abeyance, the wings being unable to advance because of the Italian barrier forts, which are being used most efficiently in the Italian defence plans.

"Hence an Austrian invasion is no longer imminent," he says, adding that he is informed that 63,000 Austrians have been put out of the fighting in the Trentino since May 15.

BRINGING HOME OFFICERS.

Many Now at Front Will Return to Train Units Here.

OTTAWA, May 29.—Announcement of the bringing over from England and the front of a large number of Canadian officers to assist in the training of the Canadian units now being organized was made by the Minister of Militia Sunday night. The services of the best available wounded officers have already been secured by General Hughes, who is a firm believer in this plan.

Among those mentioned are Colonels Clegg, of Peterboro; Preston, of Port Hope; D. D. Cameron, of Picton, Ont.; McPherson and Snider, of Portage la Prairie; A. McDonald, British Columbia; A. L. Young, Brandon; C. G. Bennett, Kingston; J. C. Hodson, Lloydminster, Sask.; B. B. Morrill, of Sherbrooke; Major A. N. Ashton, Brantford; Porter, Toronto; Deeds, the Maritime Provinces; Law, Royal Canadian Regiment; Gough, Barrie; C. G. Arthur, Calgary; Cunningham, Toronto; Andrews, Winnipeg; R. S. Stockwell, Montreal; Mcmagan, Winnipeg; and Cressy, Sudbury; Captain Weeks, London; Major Stapleton, Lieut. Chipman, of Montreal; Lieut. Stewart, of the 214th Battalion. While these officers have not had much experience at the front, yet with the assistance of men of such experience of actual warfare as Major Ackerman, of Picton; Ponton, of Belleville; Captain McCuaig, of Montreal; Captain R. T. M. Scott, of Ottawa, and scores of others who may be classed as experts, it is believed they will be able to bring the new troops into first-class shape. With these men and the capable officers already in Canada General Hughes believes the different camps will be well looked after. While a great deal of attention will be paid to trench warfare, yet it is not anticipated that training this summer will be solely of this nature, but will comprise instruction in attack and defence as well.

BRITISH LINES SHELLED.

Germans Have Shown Increased Activity in Flanders.

LONDON, May 29.—The Germans have been more active than usual against the British lines the past few days, and their expenditure of ammunition has been lavish, according to Sir Douglas Haig's report from headquarters in the field. The positions around Loos, St. Eloi, and Ypres have been shelled with particular violence. Many mines have been exploded, the crater caused by those of the enemy being occupied by the British in every instance.

The Germans attempted to raid the British trenches east of Calonne on Saturday night, but failed. Mines and camouflets south of Loos and east of Souches damaged British trenches, but there were no casualties.

Verdun Last Hope of Germans.

PARIS, May 29.—Georges Clemenceau, in an editorial headed "Errors in Optics," argues in connection with the German peace verbosity and the violent attacks on Verdun, in which he says the cost of life is out of proportion to any possible result obtainable, that "it is easily seen that Verdun is the enemy's last effort." He continues:

"If a triumphal entry by some impossibility could be made in the battered remnants of Verdun, the Wolff Agency would announce it as the 'final victory,' and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg would proclaim that magnanimous humanity inclined him to peace protocols."

The 160th Bruce battalion will remain mobilizing in Walkerton until June 12th

IT is said that there is considerable danger of caterpillars injuring the orchards this year, and that now is the time to deal with the situation.

THE Bruce Herald says that Senator Donnelly will name the chaplain for the Bruce 160th battalion. Probably there are not very many who want his job.

The Republicans will soon nominate their Candiate for the presidency of the United States and whether it is Roosevelt or Hughes he will be a winner.

Recruiting has been painfully slow in Huron county, and so disgusted are the authorities that they have decided to place in the public archives of the county a complete list containing the names of all men of military age who have not enlisted, with the reason given for non-enlistment.

CHEESE is now selling at 19 cents per pound, which will equal the price of butter at 47 cents per pounds. The sooner the farmers in this vicinity get into cheese the more money there will be for their pockets. The skimmed milk has no value for calves to make up this difference in prices.

In the death of J. J. Hill, in the United States, one of the greatest men in his day has passed away He was born near Rockwood and received all his education in that village, and when young went to the United States, and from a poor boy rose to be one of the greatest in the land. Canada has probably never produced a greater mind than he possessed.

STREET improvement for Wiarton is a matter which should engage our attention as soon as we can undertake the job, that is as soon as we have sufficient money for the proposition. Frank street, Berford street from end to end, Gould street, the principal thoroughfares need attention, while many of the back streets are in a much worse condition. However we understand the Council will deal with the matter in the Autumn.

IF Canada goes bankrupt, and is only able ahlo to pay 10cents on the dollar the cause will be this rural mail delivery. It is a splendid thing, this going out to the road and getting the mail. The farmer has the town man all beaten so far as comfort is concerned, and everyone is glad to see him getting the good things of this life, but it is the everlasting growth of the system that is going to put Canada upon the plink, and the revenue obtained from some routes in five years would not pay the cost for one year. However while the boon is being passed around it is a queer place which does not want it, and every member is anxious to secure all he can for his riding. The rural mail delivery is the greatest thing the government ever did for the farmers, but it is expensive.

THE township of Amabel should either repair, and put in a permanent state of repair, the road leading from Wiarton to the township line of Albemarle, or surrender this portion of the township to Albemarle, say from the line leading to Boat Lake the 21st. south of the town of Wiarton This would include the Oliphant road, and the islands as well. Amabel must get down to business, either repair these roads or be prepared to state why this portion of their township should not be ceded to Albemarle, who will attend to the job. For years it has been very difficult to get the council of Amabel in the humor to spend much money on the Oliphant road, while they have practically ignored their right to permanently repair the road leading to Caleb Browns Corner, This road has more traffic pass over it than any other road in these parts. It is the funnel for the Peninsula. We suggest that Wiarton, Albemarle, the northern townships should repair it. It is absurd Much more should be done to it. Appeal to private subscription, or if it is the duty of the township of Amabel, a duty they have shirked long enough and if they will not do it then they should be asked to surrender this portion of the township to Albemarle. Let it be put up to Amabel and if they will not do one thing, then they should be compelled to do the other.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

HEALTH DEMANDS sufficient food to supply the energy for our daily activities and to make good the continuous waste of tissue that is the essence of life itself. On the other hand, overeating is as harmful as undereating, since an undue accumulation of food in the digestive canal leads to the production of poisonous bacterial waste products and places an undue burden on the kidneys.

Since the food is needed not only to supply energy, but also to build up the wastage of the tissues of the body, it is necessary that the various elements in the diet should be present in the proper proportions. This involves at least four distinct problems:—

WHAT TO EAT AND WHY

First.—Certain foods like meat and milk and eggs and beans and peas include a large proportion of protein substances which contain nitrogen, while other foods like potatoes and bread and butter are made up chiefly of carbohydrates and fats which contain no nitrogen. It is important that the diet should contain enough protein to build up the body tissue, but not too much, since it is the protein constituents in particular which are subject to harmful bacterial decompositions when they accumulate in the digestive tract.

Second.—The body needs not only the proteins, carbohydrates, and fats in the diet, but also the mineral elements, or salts, such as calcium and iron. These salts are practically always present in an ordinary American diet, and therefore take care of themselves. It is necessary also that the balance of acid and alkali forming elements should be correct. It has been found that when meats are oxidized they yield an acid ash, while vegetables usually yield an alkaline ash. This is another reason why a proper proportion of vegetable matter in the diet is important.

Third.—There is a class of substances called Vitamins, which are present in meat and butter, for example, but not in bread and lard. "Polishing" or removing the outer coats from rice removes the vitamins, and primitive peoples who live almost exclusively upon polished rice develop a characteristic disease, beriberi. There is practically no danger of vitamin deficiency with any diet generally used in the United States.

Fourth.—Finally, a certain amount of fibrous, rough, indigestible food, such as is found in graham bread, spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, etc., is a desirable element in the diet since it helps to stimulate the movements of the bowels.

If other factors are correctly adjusted, the salts and vitamins will take care of themselves. One should, however, guard against too much or too little protein, too many acid forming goods, and too little of the rough and indigestible but bowel stimulating foods.

The general rule is that a family should—

Spend about as much for milk, vegetables, and fruits as for meat, fish, and eggs; and Spend about as much for milk and eggs as for meat and fish will approximately meet these requirements.

How near does the relative size of these items in your butcher's and grocer's bills come to these standards?

Is the birth of your baby registered? If not, go at once to the Clerk of the municipality and see that all particulars of the birth are placed on record. The Clerk, who is called a Division Registrar, is required by law to keep duplicate schedules of births, marriages, and deaths, and to send one of each of these to the Registrar-General, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, on or before the 15th days of January, April, July, and October in each year. A few Division Registrars are careless about these returns, but the great majority are able, conscientious men who are worth a great deal more to the municipalities in various ways than is commonly recognized. When these records are received at the Registrar-General's Department they are bound up for each municipality, indexed, and stored in fireproof vaults for future reference. Of what use are they, did you say? Well, if you happen to be a soldier's wife with four or five children whose ages you have to prove before you can get them on the Patriotic Fund, or if you have no other means of proving your marriage, the Registrar-General's records will come in very handy, especially since the debt we owe to the soldiers is recognized by the fact that no charge is made to the representative for certificates of the records. All that is necessary is that the application shall bear the signature of the Magistrate, officer of Patriotic Fund, or some responsible person.

Higher Subscriptions Inevitable

The newspaper publishers of county after county throughout the Province are finding it necessary, in order to avoid a serious loss, to increase their subscription rate from $1.00 to $1.50. All the newspapers in at least ten counties have taken this action during the week. In most cases the first of July has been fixed for the date when the new rate is to come into effect. As proof of the absolute need for the increased rate it is only necessary to quote the increased price on stock and material used in a printing office, which the Free Press has been forced to pay the past week On a shipment of our special newspaper the invoice shows an increase of 20 per cent over a shipment of six weeks ago. The ink manufacturers increased the price on an invoice of ink over 100 per cent above last order. On new type the advance is 40 per cent, while for new form rollers now on last week we paid $9.00, whereas the previous lot cost only $7.20. The new subscription rate is assuredly no boll up, any more than it is by the grocers on the increased prices of sugar spices and fruits or the dry goods men on present quotations for cottons and dry goods, and the butchers and farmers for meats, butter and eggs.—Acton Free Press.

Why not?

I've decided it is better to take it for granted that they are well than to give them a chance to spend half an hour of my time telling me about their ailments.

overturned. There was no movement, however, no sign of present occupancy. Convinced as to this, I slipped back for my lamp, shading the flame as the light was thrown forward into the room. A single glance revealed everything. The table, a common deal affair, contained two bottles, one half filled, and three dirty glasses, together with a pack of disreputable looking cards, some of these scattered about the floor. There was no other furniture, and the walls were bare, a dirty gray color. But what my eyes rested upon in sudden horror was the body of a man curled up in a ball on the floor as a dog lies, his face hidden in his arms. That he was dead I knew at a glance.

This murder—or was it suicide?—had occurred within ten minutes. I turned the man over, revealing a bearded face, the features prominent but refined. He was no ordinary rough, and his clothing was of excellent material. He had been shot in the back of the head.

It was murder then—murder! Even as I struggled with the horror a sudden gust of wind extinguished the lamp, and I gripped the table, staring about in the haunted darkness. A moment and my eyes adapted themselves to the new environment, the moonlight streaming through the open window and across the man's body. With heart quaking like a frightened girl, I stole across the floor and glanced out. A single story extension, probably the kitchen roof, was below. Kneeling upon this the assassin could easily dive into the room. Beyond the pale moonshine revealed a patch of grass, a weed entangled garden, and behind these a dense forest growth. To the right of the garden I could dimly distinguish a row of small cabins, the negro quarters. Coombs would be occupying one of these, and they were so close that, even if asleep at the time, he could scarcely fail to hear the report of the gun in the silent night. Yet there was no light along the row of huts, no sign of human presence.

Seized by sudden terror, I caught up the extinguished lamp, scarcely breathing until again outside in the hallway, the door closed behind me. Trembling in every limb, I felt my way along through the darkness, guiding myself by the wall. What could I do? What ought I to do? I knew nothing of the house or where to find Saille. I was not even sure of her presence. Indeed, the very memory of her snaky eyes gave me new horror. And Coombs! Suspecting him, as I did, it would be the height of folly to seek him out yonder in the dark. There was nothing left but to await daylight, to remain on watch, endeavoring alone to formulate some plan of future action.

It Was Murder Then—Murder!

God only knows how glad I was to discover the open door to my own room again. There were matches there on the table, but my hand trembled so I struck three before the wick of the lamp caught fire.

CHAPTER VI.

I Get Into the Game.

I SAW the affair now from a new viewpoint. I was not so sure, so certain, that I understood the entire truth.

Coombs was no plantation overseer, but a mere Texas bully. The very appearance of the man told that. His house neglected, weed grown fields were another proof. What was he here for, then? And Saille: Lord, I could despise that Texas rough, but the snaky eyes of the woman made me shiver and look about apprehensively. Then there was the dead man. There was wrong somewhere, surely—a cowardly crime, murder!

With the first return of daylight I should seek out Coombs, tell him what I had seen and compel him to confess the truth. Then I should know how to act, how to approach her and explain. My nerves steadied as I sat silence, and my mind the woman sleeping across the hall. Then I also fell asleep in the chair.

The gray of dawn was on the windows when I awoke, my body aching from its unnatural position. With cocked pistol in my pocket I slipped into the hall. The faint light revealed its shabbiness, the grimy rag carpet and discolored walls. Some spirit of adventure led me the full length until my hand was upon the latch of that mat door. I could not resist an impulse to look upon the dead man again by daylight and thus assure myself of the reality of what seemed only a dream. All was exactly as I recalled it to memory—the stained walls, the dirty floor, the table littered with cards, the overturned chair and the motionless body of the dead man. From the wound in the head a dark flow of blood stained the floor, and as I bent closer I noticed the eyelids were lowered over the dead eyes. Shot in the head, killed instantly, the hand of the assassin must have performed this act. They surely this killing had been no common quarrel, but a planned assassination, the culmination of some prearranged plot.

This knowledge, while it set my heart throbbing in realization of new danger, yet served also to stiffen my nerves. My thought was not so much concerned with myself and my own danger as with that of the young woman whom I was bound to protect.

I closed the door on the silence and stole quietly downstairs. There was no movement, no sound in the great house. The front room, hideous in its grimy disorder, was vacant, and I opened the front door noiselessly and stepped forth into the spectral gray light of the dawn. The first glimpse about was depressing enough. The house itself, big and glaring as it was, was nevertheless little better than a ruin. Several of the windows were broken, and the steps sagged and trembled under my weight. The front yard, a full half acre in extent, was a tangled mass of bushes and weeds, a high, untrimmed hedge shutting off all view of the road. From the foot of the steps a narrow passage trampled into the dirt circled the corner of the house, disappearing within a few feet.

Convinced that this must lead to the rear and possibly the negro cabins where Coombs slept, I followed its tortuous windings, although half afraid to desert my guardianship of the house even for this purpose. Still there was little to be feared so long as Mrs. Bernard remained securely locked in her room. Perhaps by the time she aroused and appeared below stairs I could find a reasonable explanation of all this mystery—something to smile over, rather than fear.

I emerged into a somewhat clearer space of ground at the rear. The kitchen was an ell, constructed of rough boards, but with shingle roof. The door stood ajar, and I glanced in, easily to find the room empty, the cots and pans told the night before still unwashed.

There was nothing there to interest me, and I crossed a narrow space of grass to where a broken picket fence was visible amid a fringe of weeds. No description can fitly picture the gloomy desolation surrounding that ramshackle place. Evidently this fence, now a mere ruin, had once served to protect a garden plot. But I now met by a tangled mass of wild vegetation, so thick and high as to obstruct the view. Narrow footpaths branched in either direction, and I chose to follow the one to the right, thinking thus to skirt the fence and learn what was beyond before approaching the negro cabins on the opposite side. To my surprise I found myself suddenly standing on the bank of a narrow bayou, the water clear, yet apparently motionless, the opposite shore heavily timbered. Owing to a sharp curve I could see scarcely a hundred yards in either direction, yet close in beside the shore a light boat was skimming over the gray water. Even as I gazed, the fellow plying the paddle saw me and waved his hand. In another moment the bow grounded on the bank and its occupant came stumbling up the slight declivity.

He was a medium sized, wiry looking fellow, with olive skin and small mustache, dressed in brown corduroy, a colored handkerchief wound about his head in lieu of a hat. As he came to the level where I stood he stopped suddenly, staring into my face.

"Sacre! I thought eet was Coombs. Who are you, m'sieur?"

"I came in last night," I replied evasively, "and was just looking about a bit."

The black eyes searched my face, and I noted his right hand touch the hilt of a knife in his belt.

"What water is this?" I asked, ignoring his action. "Bayou?"

"Oui, m'sieur."

"Are we near the sea?"

"Twenty-seex mile. You not know where you are? 'Tis odd you not know, m'sieur."

I laughed, enjoying his bewilderment, yet not realizing how to turn it to better account.

"Oh, no. I came by train in the night and am a little hazy as to location. You live about here?"

"Som' time. Then off again—sailor. Where Coombs? You know, m'sieur?"

"No, I don't," I acknowledged. "Asleep in his cabin likely."

The creole, for such he undoubtedly was, made a swift resolve.

"'Tis like, m'sieur. I find out. Maybe you come too."

The last was more of an order than a question. I gave it no apparent heed, but turned in the direction of the cabins. I had no reason to avoid Coombs, indeed, I desired to see him, and I had no intention of permitting this lad to suppose that I feared his veiled threats. Without so much as glancing back at him I advanced along the footpath, my hands in my pockets. Yet my mind leaped from point to point in eager speculation. Little as I liked Coombs this creole was even more dangerous. The one was a rough, the other a venomous snake. So far as the original purpose of my adventure was concerned it had already largely faded from recollection. The swift recurrence of more startling events dominated.

"Ze right; turn to ze right, m'sieur," said a voice behind me, and then I saw Coombs standing before the door of the second cabin.

"What does this mean, Broussard?" he growled savagely. "Where did you pick up that fellow?"

"At the landing," the creole hastened to explain. "How could I tell? He said he knew you, m'sieur."

"Oh, he did, hey? Well, all I know about him is that he blew in here last night with a woman. Claimed to be young Henley and took possession of the place. I reckon it's about time I saw some papers to prove what yer Stirred by the love of liberty and honor—called by the Empire's need—undaunted by the hardships and carnage at the Front—keen to be in at the finish—Canada's finest manhood is getting into khaki!

Men who thus give up income and home comforts, and risk life itself, certainly should not have to sacrifice such civilized habits as a clean, smooth shave whenever they want it. Experience has shown that the only way to be sure of this at the front is to have a Gillette Safety Razor.

Wherever there is soap and water, and five minutes to spare, the Gillette will give a real velvet shave. Take one to the Front yourself if you can—if you cannot go, see that your enlisted friend has a

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

With cold weather at hand poultry owners turn to the problem of getting eggs in winter. Chickens are most profitable where they are used mainly for the production of poultry meat in spring and summer, leaving the marketing of eggs for fall and winter.

A great deal of the success with poultry in the winter depends on the way the houses are built for warmth, but when we speak of warm poultry houses we do not mean it in the sense that we do in speaking of a dwelling house being warm. To have a poultry house warm enough so that water will not freeze in the coldest weather is sufficient. A simple thickness of matched lumber will provide this condition.

There must be ventilation without drafts, and the open front is best. A curtain is used to close the front in stormy periods. The object in having a warm house is to stimulate the hen and induce her to lay eggs during the cold months. If the fowls are kept warm and are well fed they will lay eggs, while if they are cold or allowed to become infested with vermin the food they consume is employed to keep them warm and maintain an ordinary state of vitality, and there is nothing left for the production of eggs.

The floor should be kept dry and clean. Sanitation is just as essential here as in other farm buildings. The roosting quarters must be apart from the feeding and laying sections. Lice and mites are ruinous to chickens at all seasons and must be kept off the premises. In the morning fowls are hungry and ready to work for their food. It is well to keep them as busy as possible. Work helps to keep them warm, healthy, and contented. With this in mind, scatter mixed grains in the litter. Be rather sparing of the feed in the morning. The grains may be mixed in the proportion of three pounds corn, two pounds wheat, and a pound ground or clipped oats. To this may be added a pound of buckwheat. Have fresh water on hand bright and early. The water may be heated in cold and stormy weather.

At the midday meal is the time to provide those appetizing mixtures so greatly relished by fowls and which make egg production easy. Take scraps of meat, bread, and vegetables and mix them with cornmeal and wheat middlings. Moisten the mass with warm skimmed milk until crumbly. Keep the usual dry ash for afternoon hopper feeding. The ingredients are substantially the same, but the rations are kept dry. Give the fowls all the green food that they care for. Keep oyster shells before them if convenient, and see that they have plenty of grit. Nearly all the common vegetables are relished by fowls, and they should have rations of beets, cabbage, and rutabagas at regular intervals.

Nowadays the 200 egg hen is quite common throughout the country. She is the backbone of many a flock and lends a helping hand to many a worthless sister whose body would grace the dinner table could she be identified. Unfortunately in a majority of flocks neither is known. What's the answer? The trap nest. Starting in October with a hundred pullets and twenty trap nests, March 1 will find the flock divided into three classes. The record will show perhaps 20 per cent. that have laid from eighteen to twenty-five eggs per month. These pullets if they show all qualities necessary to make good breeders should be retained as the nucleus of a breeding pen. Sixty of the remaining hens will perhaps be productive enough to make it pay to keep them for a year or so or at least until the end of their first laying period. The remaining twenty should go to the poultry market. Expert line breeding follows. A strain of prolific egg producers will be secured, but this is not the only object. The fowls must also be the kind that will transmit a sound, vigorous constitution.

Vise Operated by Foot Power.

The drawing shows quite plainly how the vise is made. You see a pulley and rope, also a foot lever and serrated iron for holding power when applied to jaws by a pressure of foot on foot lever, where it is caught and held by a small iron bolt to inner side of lever. This is a very handy rig, as it leaves both hands free to place work, which is oftimes very necessary in making splices and do-[illegible] other woodwork.—Farm Pro-

Pon Picture of the Crown Prince

Mail and Empire

Volumes have been written about the Kaiser but little about the Crown Prince. Most of the matter concerning the Kaiser that appeared before the summer of 1914 may be passed into the discard. It is only in the past two years that he has been understood. Nevertheless the Emperor of Germany has some virtues. He is a faithful if commanding husband. He lives in more or less spartan fashion if one makes a deduction for the pomp and circumstances which he loves. He is abstemious, and before the war conventional morality found in him a severe champion. In other words he is free from the little vices, so far as we know. The Crown Prince is evidently a personality, a man of decided character, but he is not much like his father. He is a sort of degenerate, and his scandalous life was a source of considerable annoyance and anxiety to his father before the war began. At one time it seemed that a breach was imminent between the two. The Crown Prince had been condemned to a kind of banishment. He was in disgrace.

Father and Son

It has been said that the responsibility of the Crown Prince for the war is even greater than the responsibility of his father. It was the Crown Prince who represented the typical junker, rather than his father. This is the contention of those who do not care to admit that their understanding of the character of the Emperor of Germany was completely at fault. The son is represented as having forced the hand of the father. It is said that he and his set considered the father an old fogy, who failed to realize what glory was to be won by the war. This, however, is mere back-stairs gossip. We have nothing to go on in the effort to prove that the Crown Prince was more or less willing than the Kaiser to steep the world in blood. We do know something of his character, for the Crown Prince on more than one occasion has mingled with English people. Five or six years ago he went to India on a hunting expedition. At that time there were many stories in circulation about him. As a rule they did not find their way into print. His hosts were bound by the laws of hospitality.

The Trip to India.

Now, however, these restraints have been removed. We hear the truth about his expedition to India, and how a tiger was heavily drugged and placed at a certain distance from him in order that the Prince might have the honor of shooting the beast. We hear of the pains taken to let him figure as "first sprat" in a pig-sticking affray. The English subalterns who stage-managed the adventure admits now that they had to drive the pig until he was stone cold before he was in proper condition to fall to the spear of the royal visitor. We hear, too, of his fondness for feminine society, of his callous disregard for appearances. He seemed to consider that when he visited India he was on a sort of spree. He could act as he pleased. He recognized no authority except that which his father exercised, and his father was some thousands of miles away. So the Crown Prince "cut loose." He showed the sort of man he was.

A Shameless Flirtation

In the current number of the Cornhill Magazine, Lady Wilson, who met the Prince on his way to India, tells of her impressions of him. Hardly had the vessel weighed anchor when the young man's fancy was caught by a woman of Hebe-like proportions and brazen demeanor, who was nick-named "the monkey girl" because of a pet that she carried with her. The Crown Prince referred to her approvingly as "the flapper," and at once began a flirtation, says Lady Wilson. "He saw no harm in lounging on a deck chair on the promenade deck, having his much-beringed hands manicured by the Monkey Girl. His household was nauseated by the spectacle, and he admitted to me, had put him in to Coventry afterward as a [illegible]. However, the Prince protested that he would do as he pleased. Let deferred to convention the extent of having the manicuring done in his cabin afterward.

On a Spree

He showed himself well acquainted with English slang. He spoke the language perfectly. He dressed in the most extreme English fashion, but he could not be brought to admit that there was any particular virtue in the English people. Lady Wilson says that he is vain and over-bearing, but he is a tin soldier. He has, however, one or two good streaks in his character. On the voyage to India he showed that he loved and understood children. Moreover, he is kindly and simple. These are the characteristics which seemed to distinguish him to Lady Wilson and other English people who met Emperor's Son to India. He showed a sort of low cunning, which was used at times to screen the undeniable fact that usually he was a minus quantity. But often he did not trouble to conceal the fact that he had come to India to enjoy himself. On one occasion he disappeared for 24 hours and none of his hosts nor any of his entourage knew what had become of him. When he turned up he offered no explanations, but probably a report was sent to Berlin, for after this adventure his stay in India was cut short.

Headache is not a disease in itself, but comes as a warning to tell you that there is something wrong with the system. Consequently when you stop a headache by the use of powerful narcotic drugs, you merely stifle the "danger signal" by which Nature tells you that there is trouble ahead.

A starved condition of the nervous system is by far the most frequent cause of headache. You may be going too fast a pace and burning the candle at both ends. The nervous system has no opportunity to renew its vigor, and the result is nervous headache, sleeplessness, indigestion and irritability.

Why not select a treatment that aims to remove the cause of trouble by enriching the blood and building up the starved and exhausted nerves. Such is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the effectiveness of this food cure is so well known that we scarcely need tell you about it.

In almost every newspaper you will find some cure reported as a result of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The mention of it among your friends will reveal the fact that nearly everybody knows it as the standard medicine for diseases of the nerves and other ailments arising from a watery condition of the blood.

News of the Churches

Presbyterian Church,

The last social evening of the young people's Guild of the Presbyterian church, until the fall was held in the form of a social evening. An interesting programme was prepared and everyone enjoyed themselves very much. A great number attended this meetins and thus helped to make the evening lively, the programme consisted of, a duet by Misses M. Lane and B.Geib, a reading by Miss McLachlan' a mixed quartette, Misses F. Jackson J. Lawrence, Messrs W. Barrett and H. Williams, Reading by Miss V. Patterson, a chorus Messrs G. Sinclair G. Jackson, R. Steacy, A. McKenzie N. Barrett, a violin solo by Miss Nelson, there were two contests which created much fun. Light refreshments were served after which they sang the National Anthem.

Methodist Church.

Rev, R. F. Mercer preached in the Methodist Church Sunday morning and Rev. Mr. Pradham in the evening.

Mr. J. Aston, Manager of the Union Bank, gave the first of a series of addresses on civic questions arranged for by the citizenship department of the Epworth League, on Monday evening. His subject was banking and finance.

The Methodist Sunday School has been re-organized. Mr. Jas. Flett is superintendent. A standard of efficiency was agreed upon and regular monthly executive meetings will henceforth be held. Mr. Wilfrid Lennox was elected president of the adult Bible class.

The Methodist Choir in an endeavour to show their appreciation of Miss Cora McMasters service in their midst, before her going to Edmonton, gave a car-ride on Monday night. Four car loads of the young people drove around for a couple of hours, then, adjourned to the restaurant. After that the crowd went to Miss McMaster's home and spent a very pleasant hour with their hostess.

Wiarton District Meeting

The annual District Meeting of the Methodist churches of the Wiarton district was held in the Methodist church, Wiarton, May 24—25. The Rev. W. S. Daniels, of Tara, presided. There was a full attendance of both ministers and laymen, besides several visitors.

Sergeant Milton J, Aikens a probationer for the ministry, who has returned from Flanders to take a position in the 160th Battalion addressed the meeting and was heartily congratulated for the distinguished service rendered at the front.

The reports show a successful year's work. Among the items of interest are: Increase in membership 140. Increase in missionary giving $785; increase in ministerial support $2140; increase for all purposes $4373. The consolidation of Dyers Bay and Tobermory into a single mission has meant a saving of $225 in missionary expenditure.

The following were elected as lay delegates to conference, Geo. Atkey, Wiarton; Jas. Grant, Tara; J. D. Poole, Arkwright; H. Collins, Dobbinton, D. G. Craig, Allenford; N. S. Landon, Lions Head; Geo. Beckett, Kemble, Caleb Brown, Colpoys Bay; Jas. Drew, Cape Croker.

Rev. W. W. Pradham was elected as representative to the stationing committee.

At the Wednesday evening session addresses were given by Rev. R. F. Mercer, of Tobermory, on Britain's Oldest Colony and by Rev. J. T. Staplotou, of Lions Head on "Methodism and Revivals."

County Court

Held in Town Hall Wiarton, Monday

Forbes vs Miehlhausen

This was an action for the conversion of 2 steers, for pasture, and for damages to a hay crop from cattle breaking into lands owned by the plaintiff in the township of St. Edmunds.

The chief interest in the case centered in the conversion of two steers. Forbes had purchased some cattle from Lynch in 1913, which got mixed with Miehlhausen's, who branded his cattle, and by error branded Forbe's cattle as well. After the defendant had taken his cattle to McVicars the plaintiff missed two steers and he maintained that he asked the defendant where they were and he said at McVicars. The defendant denied this. The defendant sold a number of cattle to Charles Pedwell, who killed them, and the plaintiff claims that these two steers were among them. There was no evidence to prove this so the Judge reserved his decision on this part of the case. The defendant had rented lots 4 and 5 E. B. R. St. Edmunds for 50c per head and agreed to put on at least 75 head for one month, but after two weeks he took his cattle away. The Judge was of the opinion that he should pay for one month at 50c per head for 75 cattle.

It also appeared that the defendants cattle had trespassed on the plaintiffs lands in St. Edmunds and injured the hay crop. The lots comprised 65 acres and it was sworn that the damage sustained was about $1 per acre. The defendant will probably have to pay damages, the amount to be fixed by the Judge.

D. Robertson K.C. appeared for the plaintiff and W. H. Wright for the defendant.

The Town Council

The Chairman of the Street Committee and the Chairman of Water Commissioners had a tilt Monday night. It appears that one of the hotels had not paid the water rates and the Water Commissioners were for digging up the street and shutting off the supply from the bay, the argument the Water Commissiones are to bring any man to time but the Chairman of the Street Committee will not allow it, he maintained that it spoils the streets and that the money can be collected in the courts. The Mayor told the Chairman of the Water Commissioner that this was his job and to go ahead that if he could not dig up the street and shut off the water with one man then to get ten men but in the meantime two of the Councillors were appointed to go and see hotel proprietor and explain the situation.

A few years ago the water rates of the hotels were largely increased. This was a compromise because there was a movement on foot to cut off one license and greatly increase the price of the licenses. As, however, most of the license fees goes to the Province it was decided and agreed upon by the hotels to increase the water rates because all this money goes to the town. This arangement was to continue in force as long as the hotels enjoyed the undisturbed possession of their licenses Now however with September 15th appearing on the horizon the increased water rate is not very popular and it is understood the rates will be revised in July.

Mr. Wm. McKenzie was given permission to allow his cement machine to remain alongside of the sidewalk while he is doing work and to remain there over night if he keeps lanterns on it.

The Canada Furniture Co. made their annual report. During the past year they have only employed 50 hands on an average of 10 months and as the agreement calls for 100 hands they accordingly paid the town $180.00.

The Chief made his monthly report. He arrested one person, but he was exceedingly busy in dealing with the measles as he took down 84 cards and put up 67.

June 3rd at Chesley

The town was practically deserted last Saturday, a great many going to Chesley to see the presentation of colors to the Bruce battalion. The Grand Trunk arrangement at this point was susceptible of improvement instead of starting at this point, the special started from Owen Sound, and the rolling stock here was expected to carry the excursion to Park Head, where they would take the special. There was only one first class car here which was filled within half a minute and the ballance were glad to find standing room in baggage cars and the baggage cars were not sufficient for the crowd a fish car was added to the available rolling stock. More than 300 took the train at this point, and when it left Hepworth the number was considerably more than 400, while about 50 were on the Owen Sound end. so it was the height of folly to make Owen Sound the headquarters that day. There was a very large crowd at Chesley ,away up into the thousands and the event was a most enjoyable one.

A despatch to the daily papers thus describes the event:

An open-air drumhead service in Victoria park this afternoon, at which 8,000 people of the town and countryside attended, was only one of the features of the three-days stay of the 160th Battalion here. The presentation of colors yesterday by Hon. Wm. H. Hearst, Premier of Ontario, attracted almost as many people.

The 160th left Walkerton at 8 o'clock on Friday morning and arrived at Chesley about 3.30 p.m. A number of prominent men met the battalion some miles out and escorted them to the town. The streets were beautifully decorated with flags and lines of electric lights. The men were served with refreshments immediately upon their arrival.

Premier Hearst arrived on Saturday morning and was led from the station by a big parade, which was headed by the band. Among the other prominent men who were here for the ceremony were: W.C. Chambers, M.P.P., R. E. Truax, W.D Cargill, J.M.Ball, and Wm. McDonald M.P.P.

GUARD OF HONOR.

A guard of honor for the premier was supplied by the 160th Battalion, under Lieut. Rowland, who is a returned soldier.

On Saturday afternoon at 1.30 the Battalion paraded to Victoria Park for the presentation ceremony. The colors, which were the gift of Mr. M. Halliday, were first dedicated by Lieut- Col. Rev. E. B Johnson of Montreal, a native Bruce boy and were then presented to the battalion by the Premier on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Halliday. The Premier as well as Lieut. Col. Johnson, is a Bruce boy.

A band concert and display of fire works closed the Saturday program.

BIG CHURCH SERVICE

To-day, at divine service in the park, some 8000 in attendance, Lieut.-Col-Johnston again officiated, preaching a excellent sermon. The crowd was one of the largest in the history of the town. The proceeds will be devoted to the funds of the battalion. The 160th left at 9 o'clock Monday morning for Walkerton. It is not expected they will go to London until a week from to-morrow.

Miss McMinn, Tara, was the guest of Miss Della Forbes last week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Yoe, Hopworth, spent a few days with their daughter, Mrs. H. Blythe.

Kennie Lambkin, Sauble Falls, visited friends here Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Howard, Sauble Falls spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. C. Millard.

Albert Hayes, a hydro man, was cutting the wires on an old electric light pole at the north end hill last Saturday when the pole snapped like a pipe stem and came down with a crash. Hayes is a quick thinker and when he felt the first movement of the pole he unbuckled the strap that held him and dropped a distance of 25 feet. He luckily got off with a few bruises. If he had fallen with the pole he might have been months in bed as J. H. Fry who met with a similar accident, a few years ago, was. The pole was rotten all the way through at the earth and was entirely held up by the wires.

On Friday last week Messrs Jas. Thompson and Sons sold 18 head of steers averaging 1309 lbs at 9½c. to Mr Black a Toronto buyer. The cattle were fed by Wm. McLeod in the stables of the McAlpine farm on 12th con Eld. bought by Mr Thomson a few years ago. The steers realized for Mr Thompson $121.08 and our readers can figure out what the 18 brought him. Who can report a better average weight?

Dr. Henderson was fined $20 and costs by Magistrate Bell and Mayor Halliday for infraction of the local option by-law.

Mr and Mrs R. J. Follis are visiting Chesley friends. It is six years since they left for McLeod, Alta., where Mr Follis was Supt. of Public Works. Seven months ago they moved to Carmangay, Alta. where R. J. is conducting a drug store. Mr Follis has been appointed Police Magistrate and Registrar of Vital Statistics for the Carmangay District. He has become famous for even-handed justice in Alberty. He has been mistaken in Chesley for a clergyman and a lawyer. Everybody in this community is delighted to see Mr and Mrs Follis back in the town where they spent so many happy years.

Why Shamed by Blotchy Skin

If you are a sufferer from Eczema or unsightly pimply skin, you know just what it means to have that humiliating, backward feeling about meeting strangers and oftentimes friends. Many a time you have looked into the mirror and wished that your skin would be like other people that you know "without a blemish." This wish can be yours for the asking. If you will go to the druggist and procure a bottle of D.D.D., the greatest of all skin remedies, apply it according to direction, in a short time your skin will be soft as velvet.

Come in and ask for a bottle today on our money-back guarantee. Ask also about D.D.D. Soap, that keeps the skin healthy.

Walkerton

Having vivid recollections of the last gypsy band that visited Walkerton and whose lady palmist insisted that the paws she read contain money, which she deftly managed to swipe as she folded over the hand. Chief Ferguson got busy when another band of Brazilians struck town on Tuesday with four gandily dressed women who started in to clean up on the local cash by a vigorous fortune-telling campaign. One lady was busy working a victim and stroking his mitt when the constable stopped the game and put her under arrest. She was hailed before Magistrate Tolton, who after listening to her yarn, released her on the understanding that she and her gang would fly the scenery here. This they proceeded to do, and although they had three caravans, a dozen kids, several horses and a number of dogs they made a fast getaway, and when last seen were going like the course of empire—westward. With some thirteen hundred soldiers camping here the fortune-tellers had no doubt visions of a rich hall ahead of them when the authorities swooped down and spoiled their game.

The theft charge preferred against Fred Taylor, an implement agent near Cargill, by John McPherson, a Greenock township farmer, was aired in the Walkerton police court before Magistrate Tolton and Richardson on Friday morning last. Fred, it seems sold a wagon to McPherson for $125, and had received on account $116. As there was still $9 due, Fred came and took the wagon away. The farmer thereupon laid a charge of theft against the agent, but in the police court here Fred was acquitted and the case dismissed.

Miss Maggie Rogerson, who has been court stenographer here for the past year, is resigning the position and on September 1st will cease the duties which she has been so ably performing in this connection. The position is enhanced with a salary of $200 per year paid by the County Council, and fees of $300 from other sources, making an annual remuneration of about $500, which is good pay considering the amount of work involved.

Mr John Leggett has resigned his position as principal of the Hepworth Public School, which he has held for the past five years, and in company with his wife spent the week end in town making preparations to remove to Walkerton next month and to take up their abode here.

OWEN SOUND

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. H. Miner 1035, Second Ave. E., received a letter from Lieut. R. W. McFarlane, of the 58th Batt. in France which tells of the death of her son, Pte. Thos. E. Shier, who died from wounds received in action. The letter pays tribute to Pte. Shier's worth as a soldier and a man, and reads as follows: "It is with the greatest sorrow that I have to write you regarding your son No 451305, Pte. T. E. Shier, who died on the 2nd inst. from wounds received in on the 1st inst. Your son was held in very high esteem by the officers and men of his company and had always shown up well in any work with which he had to do. He always appeared very willing and proved himself a good soldier in every way. He died a noble death and was brave to the last. May God comfort and strengthen you in this hour of great trial." Mrs. Miner received a letter from her son which was written on April 25th, only a few days before he was wounded. He was then engaged in bomb throwing, one of the most dangerous parts of warfare.

The steamer Caribou which arrived here yesterday from the Sault with 100 boxes of fish, took on a load of freight for up lake points during the afternoon before leaving the Sault the Caribou was accidently rammed in the side by a barge whilst in the act of turning, with the result that she had two of her tenders broken and a portion of her bulwarks smashed. She is undergoing repairs.

The annual meeting of the North Grey Liberal-Conservative Association will be held on Friday, June 23, in the town hall. The annual meeting will be preceeded by a convention for the nomination of a candidate for the Commons. The convention will take place at 1 30 o'clock and the annual meeting was discussed at the last meeting; and it has been decided by the executive that in view of the increased area of the constituency now including the townships of Euphrasia and Collingwood it could not be expected that a representative body could be got together in the dead of winter in the selection of the lengthy days of June it was regarded as possible that with motor cars, representatives from all of the outlying points could reach town by automobiles and return on the same day. The convention will be important because of the new sections added to the constituency and the fact that the candidate will have a new field to cover as well as represent in the Commons until the election takes place. Holding both the annual meeting and the convention on the same day should insure success of both events.

Last night's meeting of the town council did not develop anything very serious in the way of busines. The discussion of the daylight saving proposition enlivened the proceedings and indicated that this very important subject has not been absorbed mentally by many members of the council and while other towns in Canada are appreciating the advantage of using more daylight and less artifical light Owen Sound has yet to take up this progressive move. At any rate the discussion did not reach a stage that indicated serious thought on the part of some the members.

Word was received on Saturday that Pte. Harold M. Douglass of St. Vincent twp., had been wounded in action. Pte Douglass is a nephew of Messers. John, Thomas and William Legate, of Owen Sound, and is well known here. He went with the Toronto University Corps, at the same time as Lieut. Thos. Gordan, who was killed. The family live on the Eleventh Line, St. Vincent. No particulars as to the nature or seriousness of the wounds have been received.

Mr. E. W. Darragh, who resides at 1735 Third Avenue, and two of his fishermen, Messers. Wm. Chesney and Wm. McComb, had a somewhat sensational experience on the waters of the Georgian Bay on Saturday and Sunday last. The motor boat which they use for fishing having been put out of commission owing to the breaking of the crank shaft, they were obliged to borow a motor boat from the lighthouse-keeper at Cabot's Head. The three left that point about seven o'clock on Saturday morning for the purpose of fishing. Everything went alright until, after fishing up, they had turned and were heading for Cabot's Head. When about nine miles out, however, the batteries of the engine played out and refused to spark. To add to the dilemma the carburetor back fired and they had some difficulty in putting the fire out, though fortunately, no damage or injury resulted therefrom. Nothing remained for the party but to make the best of their misfortunes. They accordingly dropped anchor in about seventy fathoms of water and remained there for 27 hours, when the fishing tug Mystery, came to their rescue and towed them to Cabot's Head. Had a storm came up the men undoubtedly would have been lost. Fortunately, however, the weather was practically calm, though a dense fog hung over it most of the time.

Yesterday and To-day

Wooden shingles of twenty or thirty years ago were of splendid quality, and answered the purpose very well. There was nothing better at that time. In fact no other roofing material was on the market. Yet who would think of putting on shingles to-day? When the deterioration of wooden shingles became noticeable, efforts were made to invent a roofing that would not only be an economical and permanent substitute for wooden shingles, but one that would outlast them in service.

Brantford Roofing was the result. It has "made good." The secret of its success is this: First, the base is of pure, long-fibred felt which is thoroughly saturated with asphalt or mineral pitch. The asphalt and crystal roll roofings are then thickly coated with crushed rock particles, which adhere tightly to that base, and the whole forms a permanent fireproof, water-tight roof.

Brantford Asphalt and Rubber Roofing are made in three different weights. Crystal is made in heavy weight only, and in red or green natural colors. All three grades are pliable and well suited to either flat or steep roofs.

Brantford Roofing

comes in rolls with protected ends. The layers do not stick together and the roofing is easily laid. It requires no painting or tarring when put on. It does not crack with the cold nor melt with the summer's heat. It does not curl, split, rust or blow off. It gives permanent weather and fire protection at a reasonably low initial cost.

May we send you our roofing book and samples? They will show you the real value of these roofing materials.

CANADIANS HOLD LINE.

Positions Recaptured From the Enemy in Counter-Attack.

General Mercer is Wounded and in Hospital at Boulogne, While General Williams, Along With 13 Officers and 350 Men, is a Prisoner —Official Account Warmly Praises Gallantry of Canadian Troops.

LONDON, June 5.—Maj.-Gen. Mercer and Brig.-Gen. Williams, both of the Third Canadian division, are reported missing, and one of them is known to be a German prisoner, after a spirited engagement in the direction of Zillebeke, between Hooge and the Ypres-Menin railway. The British report states that the two officers were inspecting the trenches, and says that they are "missing," but the fact of the capture of one of them is chronicled in the German report, which announced the successful storming of the ridges south-east of Zillebeke and the British position beyond, with the capture of a slightly-wounded general, a major, 13 other officers, and 350 unwounded men. The British were said to have suffered heavy losses. The British statement admitted a German advance of 700 yards, but asserted that the Canadian troops recaptured much of this ground.

Wounded officers reaching London late Sunday night report that General Mercer, severely wounded, has been taken to Boulogne Hospital. If this is correct it is General Williams who has been taken prisoner.

The British official statement issued at midnight Saturday gave the following account of the battle:

"Fighting of a very severe nature continued unceasingly south-east of

MAJOR-GENERAL MERCER.

Ypres between Hooge and the Ypres-Menin railway. Following on their initial advantage obtained Saturday evening in penetrating our forward line in this neighborhood, the Germans pushed their attack during the night and succeeded in pushing through our defences to a depth of 700 yards in the direction of Zillebeke.

"The Canadian troops, however, who are holding this sector of the defences, launched counter-attacks at 7 o'clock this morning, which have succeeded in gradually driving the enemy from much of the ground he had gained. The Canadians behaved with the utmost gallantry, counter-attacking successively after a heavy and continued bombardment.

"The enemy losses were severe. A large number of German dead were abandoned on the recaptured ground. General Mercer and General Williams, of the Third Canadian division, who were inspecting the front trenches Saturday during the bombardment, are missing."

Sunday night British official said: "The situation around Ypres has not materially altered. There have been artillery bombardments, and our troops retain the ground regained in their counter-attacks Saturday. No fresh attacks have been undertaken by us."

The German report of the fight as contained in Saturday's official communication reads:

"We captured by storm on Friday the ridges of the heights south-east of Zillebeke, south-east of Ypres, and the English position beyond, taking prisoners one general, slightly wounded; one major, and 13 other officers and 350 unwounded men. The number of prisoners taken was small, the enemy having suffered very sanguinary losses. During the night attempted counter-attacks made by the enemy were easily repulsed."

According to information received Sunday night, General Mercer has been severely injured and is being removed to the hospital at Boulogne. General Williams, who accompanied General Mercer, was also severely injured and was taken prisoner.

The following four officers who took part in recent fighting arrived in London at a late hour Sunday night, Major W. Enver, 49th, abrasion on back; Lieut. Pet. C.M.R., wound in face; Lieut. Drabble, 49th, wound in cheek and suffering from shell shock; and Lieut. Puton, C.M.R., scalp wound. All the cases are slight.

No News at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, June 5.—Up to a late hour Sunday night the militia department was without information on the latest battle of Ypres, in which the Canadians again bore the brunt of the German onslaught. Major-General Hughes was expecting a special report on the engagement on Friday and Saturday, but this had not been received up to midnight and the department is dependent on press despatches for its information.

The department has no indication of the casualties, but they will likely be heavy, as counter-attacks have generally been costly in warfare as carried on in France.

VICTORY FOR BRITAIN

North Sea Battle Went Strongly in Favor of British Navy.

Corrected Reports of Great Conflict Show That Although the German Fleet in Full Strength Engaged Only an Advance Guard of the British Fleet the Teuton Losses Were 18 Craft as Against 14 Vessels Lost by Britain.

LONDON, June 5.—The British Admiralty Sunday afternoon gave out a statement declaring that pending the compilation of details of last Wednesday's North Sea battle these facts have been positively established:

The German reports of the battle are false.

The German losses were heavier than the British, not merely in proportion, but positively.

The arrival on the scene of battle of the main body of the British high seas fleet was the signal for the German fleet to speed back to its base.

Previous to Sir John Jellicoe's arrival the German fleet had been severely punished. Sir John took up the pursuit. The two main bodies were repeatedly in momentary contact, but the Germans' flight made it impossible for the British to bring their full force into play.

Darkness put a stop to the pursuit, and then the destroyer flotilla took up the chase and successfully attacked the Kaiser's warships.

Late Sunday night a German Admiralty statement was received here, asserting that the German fleet suffered no losses beyond those admitted in Saturday's official account.

While the British Admiralty does not cite names to support its assertion that the German losses were heavier than the British, it declares that "there seems to be the strongest ground for supposing" that the following units were lost by the Germans:

Two battleships, two Dreadnought battlecruisers of the "most powerful type," two light cruisers of the latest type (Wiesbaden and sibling), one light cruiser of the Rostok (1912) type, the light cruiser Frauenlob, at least nine destroyers, one submarine.

This would make a total of eight warships, nine destroyers and one submarine, a grand total of 18 vessels, as against only six warships and eight destroyers—a grand total of 14 vessels—admittedly lost by the British.

The British claim brings the German loss in tonnage—thus far asserted by Berlin to be only 49,000—well up to or even beyond the British loss of 125,000 tons.

By way of emphasizing that the main body of the British grand fleet made a clean sweep of the North Sea waters once it appeared on the scene, the British Admiralty relates that Sir John Jellicoe, "having driven the enemy into port," returned to the main scene of the action and stayed there until noon on June 1—nearly 20 hours after the first shots had been exchanged on the previous afternoon—and searched the sea for disabled vessels. Finding none, and having fulfilled his task, the British commander returned to his base, 400 miles away—presumably the Orkney Islands. On the following evening, the Admiralty states, the British fleet was again ready to put to sea.

As to the British losses, the Admiralty insists that there is nothing to add to or subtract from the previous enumeration of ships lost.

The pessimism which prevailed as a result of the Admiralty's original statement of losses, which is now considered to have been needlessly candid and conservative in underestimating the extent of the German losses as compared with those of Great Britain, has been greatly lessened by the latest statement.

A despatch from Copenhagen says rumors are current in Hamburg that two additional German warships than those announced in the German communication—the battleship Westfalen and the battle cruiser Lutzow—were put in the battle. A wireless despatch received here Saturday from Berlin said the German Admiralty admitted the loss of the Westfalen.

The official list of the casualties among officers show that hardly a single officer of the line escaped from the British cruisers sunk in the battle. An additional casualty list of petty officers shows that 43 of them were saved from the Queen Mary, Invincible, Fortune, Arden, and Shark. None was saved from the Indefatigable, Defence, Black Prince, Tipperary, Turbulent, Nomad, or Nestor.

The list gives the names of 65 men killed aboard the Warrior and of 27 men wounded. On other ships engaged in the fight 115 men were killed and 85 wounded.

Admiral Lord Beresford in an interview Sunday, while contending strongly for the view that there was no failure in the British strategy, and that Vice-Admiral Beatty won a brilliant success, though it was dearly bought, declares that the only mistake made was by the Admiralty in allowing the Germans to get first in the field with the news of the battle, or, as he puts it, with "impudent fabrications." Otherwise, said Lord Beresford, no fault can be found with the Admiralty.

An unofficial report is to the effect that eight German vessels which took part in the battle were cut off by the British ships and compelled to seek refuge in Danish waters. According to this report the Danish authorities have given them 24 hours in which to make necessary repairs and leave the territorial waters with the alternative of being interned, and British vessels are waiting for them should they decide to leave the refuge.

RUSSIANS PLAN DRIVE.

Heavy Bombardment Has Begun Against Austrian Lines.

LONDON, June 5.—"Everywhere there are signs of an impending infantry attack," is the significant sentence which closes an official statement issued Sunday night by the Austrian War Office, received here by wireless via Berlin.

All along the south-western front in Russia, where the Teuton lines are defended chiefly by Austrians, the Czar's heavy artillery has opened a violent fire and indications are that the Russians are planning a new offensive on a large scale against the Austrians, evidently with the view to making impossible the withdrawal of reinforcements for the Austrian offensive on the Trentino, and possibly for the purpose of forcing the despatch of Austrian troops from that front to the Russian battle line.

Such an offensive by the Russians at this time would also have an effect upon the Verdun fighting, where Austrian reinforcements were reported to have arrived last week. The Russian artillery fire during the last 24 hours has been particularly violent on a front of 25 kilometres (about 17 miles) near Olyka. This town lies slightly to the south-east of the Volhynian fortress of Lutzk, in Teuton hands since last fall, and due north of the fortress of Dubno, also captured in the great Teuton drive ten months ago.

The Russian attack in this region is facilitated by the base at Rovno, the third Volhynian fortress, which the Austro-German forces have vainly tried for months to approach. On the Dneister and the lower Strypa, as well as north-west of Tarnopol, on the Galician front, which is defended exclusively by Austro-Hungarian troops, the Russian big guns are equally active.

ONSLAUGHT FAILS.

Germans Try Unsuccessfully to Turn French Positions at Fort Vaux.

PARIS, June 5.—Several attempts made by the Germans Saturday night and Sunday morning to turn the French positions at Fort Vaux, on the Verdun front, from the south-east, were unsuccessful, the War Office announced Sunday afternoon. The night attacks resulted in their gaining a foothold in the French trenches in the ravine between Damloup and Fort Vaux, but they were immediately driven out by a counter-attack. The assault Sunday morning was checked by the French curtain of fire.

The Germans reported the shelling of the fortified village of Damloup, on the eastern slope of the Vaux heights, with the capture of ten officers, 520 men, and several machine guns. The Berlin statement asserted also that French efforts to penetrate trenches south-west of Vaux failed with severe losses to the attacking forces.

The French communique admitted the occupation by the Germans of a deep ditch north of Fort Vaux.

Elsewhere, however, the Germans were reported to have been repulsed with heavy losses, and the French continued to hold the interior of the fort. The German assaults against the fort were multiplying, but the fire of the French artillery and machine guns caused many casualties.

AEROPLANES BROUGHT DOWN.

German Craft Are Wrecked in Air Raid on Toul.

PARIS, June 5.—The German aeroplanes which bombarded Toul on Sunday were brought down by a French pursuing squadron. The French official report says:

"Sunday at noon a group of German aeroplanes dropped several bombs on Toul. Six persons were killed and about ten were wounded. The material damage was of slight importance. No military establishment was struck.

"A pursuit squadron from Toul took the air immediately and vigorously pursued the enemy aeroplanes, one of which was brought down in our lines at Sanzey, twelve kilometres north of Toul. Two other enemy aeroplanes, struck by the mitrailleuse fire of our machines, descended abruptly in the German lines."

Two Zeppelins Destroyed.

ESBJERG, Denmark, June 5.—Two Zeppelin dirigible balloons are reported by fishermen returning to port to have been destroyed.

The Avis Lamvig states that fishermen saw a Zeppelin in flames as the result of gunfire and that the air vessel was destroyed at a point 40 miles off the Thyboroin Canal. The entire crew perished. The Ekstrabladt says that fisherman arriving at Ringkjobing say they saw another Zeppelin destroyed Friday some miles from these waters.

Mayor Charges Assault.

INGERSOLL, Ont., June 5.—Charged with assaulting Mayor W. J. Elliott, occasioning actual bodily harm, a warrant has been issued for the arrest of ex-Chief of Police A. W. Gummerson. The alleged assault took place on Monday, May 22nd, and on the 27th of May an information was laid and a summons issued. The efforts to serve the summons having been unsuccessful, a warrant has been issued and outside police departments notified.

Allies Seized Salonica Telegraphs.

LONDON, June 5.—The Entente Allied troops have occupied the telegraph offices, the port and Custom House at Salonica, according to a Reuter despatch from that city. At the same time they have taken extensive precautionary measures about the town to prevent possible opposition. The commanders of the gendarmes and the police have been relieved of their functions, the despatch says, and martial law has been proclaimed.

IT is a good thing for the Empire that Kitchener's life was spared so long. Kitchener and Gordon are names to be remembered by every Briton.

There are those who do not believe in funeral under the auspices of the lodge. Admit that there is an objection, it is, however. a good thing to see a large number of men show their respect to a departed brother.

No wonder that we have eggs high at this season of the year when they should be cheap. Just fancy there were $11,000 worth of eggs in the cold storage of commission house recently destroyed by fire. The cold storage eats the eggs instead of the stomachs of the poor people.

THE Bruce battalion should be thankful that they are soon to move to London, and that the dumping here and there for the sake of a town that wants to make a few dollars will not occur again. It is quite natural for towns to want to put on a big day, but the youth of this County, who have offered themselves for the war, deserve a little better treatment.

The War

Nearly two years ago the great war started, and the end is nowhere in sight. Incredible amounts of money have been spent, millions of lives have been lost, but the war will still go on. No one expects to see it end this year, and it would now appear that the close of this war will mean the utter exhaustion of the Central Powers, and this can be only accomplished by the allies throwing all the power of their great resources into the conflict.

It would be impossible to estimate the number of years that the great loss of life in men and money will put this world back. Wars may be a good thing in some ways, they unite a Nation and an Empire, they touch the heart cords of loyalty, call out the best and the most heroic in human life, they put an end to tyranny and advance civilization, but this war was not needed for any of these purposes. Vanity, ambition for power touched the match to the magazine of Europe and started this awful carnage. Kitchener has been drowned by a submarine, who was regarded as the saviour of the Empire, but this will only speed on recruiting, and into this mighty conflict Canada has given and will give all her available men and money, because, who lives if Britain dies. It is far more than a national sacrifice, it is the time for every man, woman, and child in the Empire to determine to win the war or to perish.

Began His Ministry Here.

On Sunday the Rev. S S. Hardy, who has just recently been appointed Rector of Trinity Church, began his work in this parish, and his sermons both morning and evening were much appreciated. In short it is quite evident that Mr Hardy will be a distinct addition to the moral forces of the community. He has all the advantages of youth and a pleasing personality and should make a worthy successor to the Rev. Mr. Masters.

The Rev. Mr Hardy is a native of London, a graduate in Arts of Western University and in theology of Huron College. His first ministerial work was that of assistant in the South Church, London, then he was sent by the Bishop to take the curucy in New St. Pauls Church, Woodstock and also while there had charge of All Saints Mission. Returning to London he was appointed Rector of the Church of the Redeemer, and from London he was transferred to Toronto, where he was curate in St. Marys. Last week there was a most eulogistic reference to his work in that church in the Mail & Empire and the parishoners took advantage of the occasion to show their esteem by presenting him with a most complimentary address, accompanied with a purse of gold, and a living chair to Mrs Hardy. Mr and Mrs Hardy will be most cordially welcomed to the town, and we hope that their sojourn here will be pleasant.

Mrs. Alex. Hinds, Keppel, received word last week informing her of the death of her brother Charles Walker, which occurred in Verginia during the latter part of May. The deceased was well known here, as he came to this part when quite young and did not go away until he was 18 years of age. He was 59 years old at the time of his death. He had been a most prominent citizen in Verginia.

RECITAL

A very pleasant musical (instrumental and vocal) recital was held in the Hall on Friday evening under the auspices of Miss O. Thompson the recital was given by Miss Thompson and pupils who were mostly from Owen Sound. The Hall was prettily decorated. The stage was transformed by screens and flowers, house plants, apple blossoms and long stemmed tulips were in evidence on the platform, making it a bower of beauty. There was a splendid audience, who all appreciated the excellent music very much such music is a rare treat in Wiarton. Everyone did their part splendidly, it was hard to distinguish which was the best. Mrs E. Melligan played a very pretty piece by Krofman, Miss Francis Ely selection from Poldini, Miss Marie Christn, the well known Torontelle, by Hellen Miss Lina Davis sang a very pretty solo entitled "my dear soul" Misses K. Pearson, H. Dawes, E. Loos, and H. Kennedy each acquitted themselves well showing the excellent training, throu' which they had gone. Miss Scully played two selections which showed her perfect touch, Misses Clara Millar and M. McBride sang very nicely, Miss Irene Schultz a girl of twelve years played two selections from Grey and one of Chapin's which were all old favourites, they were soft and sweet and highly delighted the audience. Miss F. Thomson, a sister of Miss Thomson's played Kamenoiostraw "by Rubenstein which was enchanting. The proceeds were to go to the Red Cross Society.

A fire started in a vacant house, Scott street Monday evening, which has recently been occupied by W. J. Patterson and did considerable damage. Within three minutes after the alarm sounded the brigade had the water turned on.

MR. ROSENBURG

589 Casgrain St., Montreal.
April 20th, 1915.

"In my opinion, no other medicine in the world is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as "Fruit-a-tives". I was a sufferer from these complaints for five years, and my sedentary occupation, Music, brought about a kind of Intestinal Paralysis—with nasty Headaches, belching gas, drowsiness after eating, and Pain in the Back. I tried pills and medicines of physicians, but nothing helped me. Then I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives", and now for six months I have been entirely well.

I advise any one who suffers from that horrible trouble—Chronic Constipation with the resultant indigestion, to try "Fruit-a-tives", and you will be agreeably surprised at the great benefit you will receive". A. ROSENBURG.

are, young feller, 'fore yer go snoopin' round at daylight. What's yer game anyhow?"

The man's bluster gave me my clew. The thought suddenly occurred to me that for some reason he was more afraid of me than I of him.

"You can see my authority, Coombs, any time you are ready to exhibit your own," I returned coolly, leaning back against the side of the cabin and staring him straight in the eyes. "If you are the overseer here, then it is my money that is paying your wages, and from the look of things you'll not hold the job long at that."

Coombs did not cringe, but my tone brought him uneasiness.

"The niggers won't work," he returned gruffly. "Thar ain't a nigger on the place."

"Apparently white men enough hanging around. What's the matter with the negroes?"

"Ghosts," and the fellow laughed. "Maybe yer've seen sum?"

I straightened up, stung by the sneer in his voice.

"No, but I've seen something more to the point—a murdered man."

"What!"

"Just what I said. There was a man killed last night in that back room upstairs. Shot in the head through the window. I heard the shot and investigated. His body lies there now."

I saw Broussard's snaky eyes flash across toward Coombs' face, but the latter remained motionless.

"It's a d—— lie!" he ejaculated roughly. "There is nobody there!"

"Easily settled. Come with me, and I'll show you."

Rather to my surprise neither objected to the test, and we tramped in single file toward the house. Some precaution kept me at the rear, and I followed silently to the room of the murder.

There was the furniture as I remembered it, the dirty walls, the opened window. But the overturned chair stood against the wall, the cards were stacked on the table, and there was no body lying on the floor. Coombs let out a harsh laugh.

"Well, where's yer dead man? I reckon yo don't see none, hey?"

"No," I insisted, "but I did see one—twice. The body lay there where the stain shows on the floor. It has been carried away within half an hour."

"A likely story. Who could do the job? Nobody round these parts—'cept Sallie an' me, an' I reckon it wasn't Sallie. So cut it out, young feller. After breakfast you an' me have a little talk—that's a few things. Come on, Broussard, an' let's talk over that matter o' ours."

The two went down the stairs together, and I closed the door of the rear room and stepped out into the hall. Sallie was in the kitchen, for I heard her voice questioning the man as they passed through. Out of the passage I caught a glimpse of them both disappearing through the woods toward the bayou.

That dead body had not moved itself. Human hands had accomplished the deed during the brief period of my absence outside. Whose hands could have done it? Not those of Coombs, surely, for he could not have passed me and attained the house while I was in the garden unseen, nor Sallie, for she possessed no strength to more than drag the dead man to some nearby covert. With the possibility of this in mind I searched the vacant rooms of that floor, closets and all, thoroughly, but to no result. There was therefore but one conclusion possible—unknown parties were involved. We were not alone in the house in spite of its apparent desertion.

I paused in doubt before Mrs. Bernard's door, convinced this was the truth. Should I tell her frankly the story of the night, my vague discoveries, my suspicion? I surely had no right to deceive the woman or keep her with me. I had determined myself to face it out—to risk life, if need be, to learn the truth. But I had no right to involve her further.

I rapped at the door twice before there was any movement within. Then her voice asked who was there, and at my answer she came out fully dressed, fronting me with questioning eyes.

"The night has rested you," I said smilingly, my heart beating in swift appreciation of her beauty. "Are you ready for breakfast?"

"For anything to escape the loneliness of that room," she replied seriously. "I really look rested—it is not from sleep, for I have passed the night in terror. My slumber was fitful and filled with dreams. But I am sure of some things—my door was tried twice, and I heard some one prowling about the hall"—

"That might have been I," I interrupted, "as I was out there during the night, but I certainly never tried your door."

"You had a light?"

"Yes."

"I saw that shining over the transom. It was much later when my door was tried—not long before daylight, I think. Whoever it was passed out the front hall window on to the porch roof. My light was burning, although turned low, and no doubt he saw me sitting up, wide awake, on the edge of the bed, for he had disappeared by the time I gained courage to approach the window and look out."

"Climbed down the trellis probably," I said, deeply interested. "It appears strong enough to support a man. I wish you had got sight of the fellow."

She lifted her hands to her head.

"But I was so frightened. My head throbs now with pain. I was frightened last night in the darkness. I confess I completely lost my nerve and would have run away if I could. Perhaps I even said things which made you believe I regretted my action in coming with you. But I am more myself now, and I mean to remain and discover what it all means. Can you guess why? Do you not suspect who I am?"

"Who are you? Only as you have told me."

"And I told you only a half truth. I am the wife of Philip Henley." Her cheeks flushed, a touch of passion in her voice as she faced me. "That is the truth. Do you suppose that I would ever have come here with you otherwise? No matter how desperate my condition was, that would have been impossible. I should have despised myself."

My surprise at this avowal kept me silent, yet I could not conceal the admiration from revealment in my eyes. She must have read aright, for she drew back a step, grasping the knob of the door.

"I—I wanted to tell you yesterday—all the way coming down here. But I wanted to discover just what you were like."

"You mean whether I could be trusted?"

She looked at me frankly.

"Now I am simply going to trust you fully. I must. There is no other way. I thought it all over and over again last night and determined to confess everything as soon as we met this morning."

CHAPTER VII.

The Decision.

NOW that I could openly associate myself with Philip Henley's wife in a struggle to retain for her what was justly her own, all feeling of doubt vanished, and I became grimly confident of the final result.

"I am glad to know that," I said, "for now I can work openly, knowing exactly what I ought to do. I have felt like a rat shrinking in a hole. I believed what those men told me. They convinced me with proofs I could not ignore, but they must have lied. Would it be possible for Philip Henley to be in a penitentiary convicted of crime?"

"It would not be," she returned firmly. "There was no time after I left him for an arrest and conviction. That alone is sufficient to convince me of fraud and conspiracy. His resignation was simply forged."

"Then what do you suppose has occurred?"

"Answer one of two things," she said soberly. "He is dead or helpless in the power of those men who sent you here. There is no other conclusion possible. They had possession of his papers, even his private memoranda. They knew more of conditions here than I had ever been told. In my judgment, he is dead. Otherwise I cannot conceive it possible they would dare attempt to carry out such a conspiracy. The very boldness of their plan convinces me they believed no one lived to expose them. They knew he was dead and believed, if I still lived, that I knew nothing of his inheritance. The telegram announcing the judge's death I never saw. It must have arrived while Phillip was too intoxicated to grasp its meaning."

"You know nothing, then, of the two men Neale and Vail?"

"No. There is a Justus C. Vail, a lawyer, in the city. I found the name in the directory and called at his office. He was away making political speeches, had been gone two weeks."

"Then the fellow assumed that name, thinking it might be familiar with it and thus be impressed with the legality of the transaction. As to Neale, I will go to the courthouse in this county and find out about him. You have told me the whole truth about yourself now?"

"Absolutely, yes. Here is my marriage certificate; I have always kept it with me, for I have been afraid of him almost from the first. I gave you the name Bernard unthinkingly, as that was the name he insisted upon living under. Is that all you wish to know?"

"All now, yes. I must have time to think and plan what is best for us to do. I can already see my duty sufficiently clear, but not how to go at it. The fact is, Mrs. Henley"—

"Would it not be better for you to call me Viola?" she interrupted. "Some one might overhear, and we must continue to carry out the deception, I suppose."

"Then, Viola"—and her eyes suddenly flashed into mine—"the conditions I have already discovered here in this house are no less strange and dangerous than the mission which brought us here. Everything looks bad. There was murder committed in this house last night."

"Murder!" Her face went white, her fingers clasping my sleeve. "Who was killed? Coombs? That woman?"

"Neither. A man I never saw before. I heard the shot and found him lying dead on the floor of the rear room. He had been shot in the back of the head through an open window." And I told her the whole story.

"Murder!" her face went white. "Who was killed?"

Bewildered consternation was clearly manifested in the girl's white face and yet there was a firmness to the lips that promised anything but surrender. For an instant she seemed to struggle to regain her breath.

"Oh, how terrible! I can scarcely realize that all you have told me can be fact. There were pirates along this coast once—I have read of them—but now, in our age of the world, even to dream of such a state of affairs would be madness. What can it mean? Have you any theory?"

"Absolutely none. I am groping in the dark without a single clew. But in my judgment there are others than Coombs, Sallie and the creole involved about whom we know nothing."

"You mean there is a band, that we have stumbled into a rendezvous of outlaws?"

"I suspicion so. This plantation has been practically abandoned for years. Even when the judge was alive he lived in town and could get no negroes to work out here because they believed the place was haunted. A bayou comes within a hundred yards of the rear of the house, so concealed by trees and weeds as to be almost invisible until you stand on the banks. We are only a little over twenty miles from the gulf. Altogether this would make an ideal hiding place for Mobile or New Orleans thieves."

"What do you mean to do?"

The question was asked quietly, and I glanced at her, noting the color had returned to her cheeks.

"I? Why, remain and ferret it out, I suppose," and I laughed. "Coombs is going to have a talk with me later. Intends to make sure who I am no doubt, and I may learn something from that during the interview."

"What about me?"

"You had better return to town. A tug-boat runs Sallie trade said there was a regular boat. Probably Coombs has some kind of a rig we can drive down in. I'll ask him after breakfast."

"So it between you do not wish me with you?"

"I shall feel more free alone," I replied, "for I shall have only myself to guard. I am used to taking care of myself. Besides, this is likely to prove a rather [illegible] lady."

"And you conclude I can be of no help, no assistance?"—

The cracked voice of Sallie came to us up the stairs, the unexpected sound startling both.

"I reckon you all better com' down an' eat."

She stood in the light of the front door watching us, and we descended the flight of steps without exchanging a word. The woman turned and walked in advance into the dining room.

"Where is Coombs?" I asked, looking about curiously.

"He done eat already, but I reckon he'll be found 'gain after awhile. You all just help yerselves."

We endeavored to talk as we sampled the meal, directing our conversation into safe channels, both obsessed with a feeling that whatever we said would be overheard. The woman had vanished into the dark passage leading toward the kitchen. Neither of us ate heartily and as soon as we dared pushed back our chairs. It was a relief to get out of the room, but as we stood a moment in the front doorway breathing in the fresh air I noticed a giant form approaching the house through the weeds.

"Coombs is coming already for his interview," I said hastily. "As it may be stormy, perhaps you had better retreat upstairs."

"I will go," she said quickly, "but I shall not leave this house while you remain."

She was gone before I could speak, before I could even grasp the full purport of her decision. I followed the flutter of her skirt up the stairs, half tempted to rush after, yet as instantly comprehended the uselessness of any attempt at influencing her. Even the short space of our acquaintance had served to convince me that she was a woman of resource, of character and determination.

I heard the thud of Coombs' feet upon the steps of the veranda. That he had been drinking I realized at a glance, and it was equally evident that he planned to overawe me by brutal domineering.

"So yer've got through eatin,' hey?" he began coarsely. "Whar's the female? Thought I saw her here."

"You did." I returned coldly, "but Mrs. Henley has returned to her room."

"Mrs. Henley, huh! Think yer kin pull thet bluff over me?"

"What bluff?"

"Aw, this Henley racket you sprung last night—bout yer being young Phil Henley come back."

"Did I say that?"

"Yer shure did," eying me in some surprise. "I reckon my ears heard all right. Why, what are yer this morning?"

"If I ever made any such claim as that, Coombs, it was merely to assure our admittance. It's different this morning, and I am going to be just as frank with you as you are with me. Is that square?"

"I reckon," uneasily, not yet able to gauge my purpose and feeling his bluff a failure. "I ain't got nothin' ter lie about so fur as I know. Let's go inside, whar we kin have it out quiet like."

I followed him into the front room, and he kicked out a chair so as to bring my face to the windows. As I sank into it I noticed a dusty mirror opposite which gave me a dim reflection of the entire room. Coombs shut the door leading to the back of the house and sat down facing me, his big hands on his knees. His effort to look pleasant only made him appear uglier than usual.

"Waal, go on!" he said gruffly.

I crossed my legs comfortably and leaned back in the chair, quite conscious of thus adding to his irritation. My best card was cool indifference.

"There is not much to say," I replied deliberately. "I'll answer your questions so far as I think best, and then I'll ask a few of you. The lady upstairs is Viola Henley, the wife of Philip Henley. She has come down here to take legal possession of this property. That is the situation in a nutshell. I am merely accompanying her to make sure that she gets a square deal."

His jaw sagged, and his eyes wandered.

"Oh!" he managed to articulate. "What is your real game?"

"Exactly as I have stated it, Coombs. To the best of my knowledge Philip Henley is dead—at least he has disappeared—and his widow is the rightful heir to this estate."

"Waal, I reckon he ain't dead—not by a jugful!"

I felt the hot blood pump in my veins. Did the man know this to be true, or was he merely making the claim for effect?

"That, of course, remains to be proved," I returned smilingly.

"Oh, does it, sure! So does this yer wife business, to my thinkin'. Waal, it won't take long ter settle the matter, believe me. Who are yer anyhow?"

"My name is Craig—Gordon Craig."

"A lawyer?"

"Not guilty."

"A detective?"

"Same pipe."

I thought he gave a grunt of relief. "All right, then. I reckon I got yer number, Craig. Yer after a little easy money. Somehow, I've caught on to the string, down yer, an' framed up a scheme to cop the loot. Might have worked, too, if I hadn't been on the job an' posted. Now, lookin' yer over, I reckon I'll—"

"Drop that, Coombs!" I interrupted sharply, leaning forward and staring him in the eyes.

"Oh, no use, hey?"

"Yes, too much for you to befool even with your cronies. If you mention her name again except in terms of respect there is going to be trouble."

He laughed, opening and closing his big hands.

"I mean it," I went on soberly. "Don't think I am afraid of you. No, you keep your hands where they are! If it comes to a draw you'll find me quick enough to block your game. Now, listen!"

I made no display of a weapon. He could not be sure that I was armed, yet my right hand was hidden in the side pocket of my coat. The brute and the coward struggled for mastery in his face.

"I've told you the truth about who we are and our purpose in coming here," I went on slowly and clearly, "because I have decided to fight in the open. Now, I want to know who you are—what authority you have on the Henley plantation. Speak up!"

The reply came remarkably, but there must have been a keenness in my face which compelled an answer.

"I told yer—I'm the overseer."

"A fine specimen, from the looks of the place. What were you ordered to grow—weeds?"

"That's none o' your business."

"It's the business of the lady upstairs, Coombs, and I am representing her at present. It will be just as well for you to be civil. Who appointed you to this position—the administrators?"

"I reckon not."

"Ever hear of a man named Neale—P. H. Neale?"

"No."

"Or Justus C. Vail?"

He shook his head.

"So one sent you any word, then, that we were coming or gave you any orders to look after us?"

The blank expression of his face was sufficient answer. I waited a moment, thinking, endeavoring to determine my next move. This knowledge made one thing clear—we were playing a lone hand. As well planned as was the scheme of those two conspirators, they had reckoned without sufficient knowledge of the existing conditions here. But was this true? Would villains as shrewd as they be guilty of such neglect? Besides, they had assured me that the overseer would be notified of our coming. Suddenly there flashed back to my memory a picture of that murdered man in the rear room. Could he be the connecting link, the overseer sent by Neale? Only the harshest measure would compel Coombs to acknowledge the truth. I drew in my breath, every nerve braced for action. Then I jerked the pistol from my pocket and held it, glimmering coldly in the light, across my knee.

"You probably have some reason for lying to me," I said coldly, "and now I am going to give you an equally good reason for telling the truth. What do you know about the administrators of this estate? There is one named Neale, isn't there?"

"I—I reckon so."

"How do you know?"

"Waal," feeling it useless to struggle against the argument presented by the blue steel barrel, "all I know is a fellow com' 'long yere awhile back with a paper signed Neale, thinkin' ter take my job."

"What happened to him?"

"Oh, he just natt'rally got kicked out inter the road, an' I reckon he's a running yet. He was a miserable Yankee runt, an' I didn't hurt the cuss none to speak of. What yer askin' all this fer anyhow," he questioned anxiously, "an a-drawin' that gun on me?"

"It seemed to be the only available method for extracting information. Pardon my insistance, Coombs, but wasn't that dead man up there the fellow Neale sent?"

"Not by a jugful," and I could see the perspiration break out on his forehead. "Why, there wasn't none anybow. That guy skipped out north ag'in."

"Under whose orders are you in charge here?"

He was so long in answering, his eyes glaring ugly under beavy brows, that I elevated my weapon, half believing he meditated an attack.

CHAPTER VIII.

Circumstantial Evidence.

SUDDENLY I became aware that his glance was not directly upon me, and I lifted my own eyes to the surface of the tarnished mirror behind where he sat. It reflected the large portrait of the late Judge Henley hanging on the opposite wall, and—by the gods—I thought I saw it move, settle back into position! I was upon my feet instantly, swinging aside into a better position for defense. Before Coombs could realize what had occurred I had the gun muzzle at the side of his head.

"Now answer," I commanded sharply. "Whose orders put you here?"

He choked, shrinking back helpless in the chair.

"You won't always have the drop on me."

"Well, I have now. Speak up. Who is the man?"

"Philip Henley," he whispered, so low I scarcely caught the name.

"What!"

"Waal, I told yer," he growled resentfully. "Yer kin believe or not, just as yer please, but so help me mar's the truth. I reckon I know."

I stared at him, half believing, half incredulous, I became conscious that she stood in the hall doorway. Coombs lifted his head, glad of any respite, and I glanced aside also, dropping the pistol back into my coat pocket.

"You—you were quarreling?" she asked, coming into the room. "You were up long I became anxious and came down."

"Nothing serious." I assured her smilingly. "Coombs here was a little reluctant to impart information, and I was compelled to resort to primitive

James Parker, Clerk.

Tara

The most severe electrical storm of the year passed over this district early on Saturday morning, accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain. Lightning struck the house of Mr. George Dolphin, on the 12th Con. of Derby, the bolt damaging the chimney and scattering the stove pipe. At Arrawesle the lightning struck the stable of Mr. John McMullen and dislocated a rafter but no further damage was done.

Pte. Percy Ruff of the 34th Batt., who was at Shorncliffe camp, England, has gone to the front in France. The officers were filling up vacancies in the another battalion and Percy volunteered to go to fill the place of another man who had deserted. He was accepted and is now in France. Mr and Mrs. Ruff have reason to be proud of the courage and bravery of their son.

According to notice given in last week's Leader the Conservatives of Tara held their annual meeting on Monday evening in the room over Walker and Merriam's hardware store. There was a fair attendance and the business that came before the meeting received careful attention. The election officers took place and resulted in the re-election of F. W. Walker, President, Robt. Mills, Sec, Andrew Trafford, Treasure.

The patriotic concert held in the church last Tuesday evening was a decided success over $175.00 being taken in.

"John," said the minutely observant woman, "did'nt you forget to tip the waiter?"

"No. I attended to that right at the start. I handed him all the money I can afford to spend and told him to take his tid and then bring us some to eat with the change."—Washington Star.

Women not only have the last word, but in most of the arguments they usually grab the first one, too.

Nerve Force is so much like Electricity, and the latter is so much better understood, that we have used this vivid telephone picture to illustrate what takes place in the human system when the connecting nerve fibres are deranged or something goes wrong at Central.

In the nervous system the brain is the Central where the Nerve Force is created, and whence are issued the orders which control the whole human body. Here is consumed one-fifth of the blood in the human body, and when the blood supply is deficient in quality or quantity, the brain and the nervous system are first to feel the effects.

Neuralgic pains and headaches, inability to rest or sleep or concentrate the mind, dizziness and noises in the ears, are some of the symptoms of a starved nervous system.

Just as machinery lags when the current of electricity fails, so the bodily organs weaken when the supply of nerve force runs low. Digestion is impaired and you lose appetite, the liver, kidneys and bowels are slow in performing their functions, the heart's action weakens, circulation is slow, hands and feet are cold, you are easily tired, lose ambition and grow downhearted and discouraged.

This describes the condition under which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can prove of greatest assistance to you. Forming new, rich blood it feeds the starved, exhausted nerve and brain cells back to health and vigor. The new vital, nerve force flows out through the intricate system of nerve fibres to every member and every organ of the body, carrying new vigor, energy and strength and driving out pain, weakness and disease.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. At any drug store.

County Council

The County Council of the County of Bruce met for the June Session at the Town Hall, Port Elgin on Monday evening, June 5th. All members were present.

D. Izzard, Reeve, on behalf of the Council and citizens of Port Elgin, extend a hearty welcome to the Council, to which the Warden suitably replied.

The members recognized that the June Session is always a strenuous one and got to work at once. The Road and Bridge Committee reported that the spring freshets this year had dealt very gently with the county bridges, none of them being seriously damaged though some had for a time been in considerable danger of being carried away. A Committee was appointed to examine some of the chief bridges and make any repairs found necessary.

Communications were read from the Canadian Patriotic League and from the Belgian Relief committee giving particulars of the work done and thanking very heartly the council and people of the county of Bruce for their very generous treatment of these funds, and for the example they had thereby set for others.

The Government officials notified the council that an Order in council had been passed allowing deer shooting on the Peninsula this fall. but no dogs will be allowed For the next two years after no deer hunting will be allowed there.

Mr. Jas. Douglas, Reeve of Hepworth, presented a very instructive report of the proceedings of the Ontario Educational Association, to which he had been sent by the county. A large number of interesting and important matters especially dealing with Rural Schools were considered and some important legislation may grow out of the Association recommendations.

It was decided to pass a by-law licensing junk dealers in the county.

Grants were made of $2.000 to the Walkerton Hospital, $1.000 to the Kincardine Hospital. $50 each to the Villages of Tiverton ane Hepworth for roads.

Mr Anderson, of Lucknow, pointed out the difficulty there was in many parts of the county in obtaining magistrates to try cases and especially liquour cases, and thought the Government should be asked to appoint police magistrates for districts. The council however declined to take any action in the matter.

A by-law was passed to raise $42.000 for Patriotic purposes. This money is required to pay the grants for this purpose made at January Session of the council. The money is payable under the by-law in ten years. No furthor grants were made at this Session for these purposes.

Messers. C. M. Bowman and W.D. Cargill, M. P. Pa. were present on behalf of the Bruce Preparedness League and explained fully the objects of the League. On motion of Messers. Christie Hunter the council itself fully in sympathy with the objects of the League, and granted $100. towards its expenses.

Special grants were made to Eastnor and Amabel of $100 each to assist in maintaining roads over which the whole traffic of the Peninsula moved, and which had to be kept up for the benefit of several Townships.

A very lively fight developed over the Equalization of the County. For some time the question as to whether or not income and business assessments should be included in the Equalization, has been a bone of contention. the representatives of the rural municipalites contending they should be and those from the towns and villages that they should not be. Up to 1912 these were included but in that year Judge Barret. on an appeal to him, struck these assessments off, leaving the County rates to be levied on real estate only. Last year Juege Klein, on an appeal to him, held they should be included. The Equalization Committee this year brought in a report recommending that they be not included but on a close vote in council this report was sent back to the committee with instructions to include these assessments. The committee later reported again with them included. After considerable discussion another vote was taken on the question by the whole council, when, by a majority of one it was decided that these assessments should not be included. The county rates will therefore again be levied on the real estate only.

Another question of large importance which was before the council was the question of good roads. In January a committee was appointed to look into the question and report and their report was now presented. The committee had arranged with Mr. McLean, of the Government Highway Dept. to be present and explain the good roads legislation. which he did at length and very clearly He pointed out that other counties had adopted the movement and not one of them had raised any objections or tried in any way to withdraw from it. Many people had the idea that it was an expensive system but Mr. McLean thought this had come from some parts where they had no gravel and had to import crushed stone which ran the cost up considerably. In a county like Bruce where they had fair roads to start on and lots of good gravel and the expense would be very light while the roads would be materially improved. The Government was spending large sums of money to help counties in this work and he thought Bruce should take up the question and get its share of the money.

The matter was thoroughly discussed at length and the council passed a resolution approving the scheme and appointed a committee to look into it and report at December session

Messrs. Morgan, Gunton and Sayles addressed the council pointing out the necessity for a Childrens Shelter in connection with the work of the Bruce County Children's Aid Society, and the liability of the county in such matters under the Statutes. After full consideration it was decided such a shelter should be provided by the county, and a grant of $500 a year made towards its maintenance. A committee was appointed to look after the matter.

The usual number of accounts were presented for payment, and the usual number of committees appointed to attend to repairs on county bridges,

The committee appointed to consider the adoption of the bridge on the 6th con. of the Township of Brant as a county bridge reported against its adoption, and this report was adopted.

The citizens of Port Elgin made things most pleasant for the members of the council during the week, and treated the members to an auto trip, so they could all see the large county bridges in that section, which was very much appreciated by the council.

Council adjourned to meet at Council Chambers, Walkerton. on Monday, Dec. 4th, next.

P. A. MALCOMSON.
county clerk.

A Startling Decision

The Walkerton Herald says:—Forty Germans from Walkerton and surrounding country, who applied to become British subjects, were refused their naturalization papers at the Chancery Sittings here the other day by Mr Justice Clute of Toronto on the ground that no subjects of an enemy country shall take the oath of allegiance and become British citizens during the war, Mr Clute bases his finding on the decision of Mr Justice Meredith of the Supreme Court of Canada, who also maintains that such alien citizens must be construed as enemies of the British Empire. If this decision is to be accepted and become recognized throughout Canada then it will put these Germans in a hard Plight, for as the law states that it is an offence for any British subject to either buy from or sell to an alien enemy, or carry on business with him in any way. then it would seem a crime for Canadian banks to lend them money, for dealers to buy their produce, or for any Canadian subjects to traffic or trade in any way with them. This being the case they would find it almost impossible to sell a horse, cow or a load of hay etc., or even to purchase a loaf from the baker. Just how they could exist under the circumstances isn't clear, but such, it seems is the finding of Mr Justice Meredith in Toronto and followed by Mr Justice Cluto at the Chancery Court, Walkerton.

The zinc mine is showing some activity. Mr. Walker, of London, is here looking after the companys interests and we understand others are to follow. We hope the mine will be in a producing basis in a short time.

Owing to the heavy rain and thunder storm Friday afternoon Mr. Duncan's barn was not raised until Saturday when it was raised in good style. Messrs Thomas and White were again captains and Mr. Thomas again won out. They're both good sports and know how to play the game. Mr. Duncan will have a snug little barn when completed.

Mr. Tuffnell received word from his son Pte. Fred Tuffnell in England that he had been transferred to the 2nd contingent and expects to be in Flanders pretty soon. Quite recently Pte Tuffnell received a badge of honor for being 2nd best shot among several thousand competitors, Mar boys score again.

Cattle buyers are very much in evidence this last week and the cause is not far to seek, in the first place there is recognized to be a world shortage, second. the hundreds of distillery cattle that were available this time other years are not to be had this year, thirdly, when choice steers are selling at from $10 to 10.50 in the Toronto market there is naturally a rush of buyers to try and secure more feed and turn over in the fall and make a handsome profit. The Bruce Peninsula is the cheapest place on earth to feed stockers and keep that tau and often twenty dollars a head profit in the farmers pocket instead of the speculative buyer.

Things look Promising

It would appear that the parties negotiting for the cement plant mean business. It is reported that they have an option on the institution good until July 1st, but it looks like they regard the matter as settled. At all events they have engaged a nightwatchman and engineer. It was previously announced in The Echo the new concern intends to manufacture magnesia, potash, hydrated lime etc. and they talk as if they will need 150 men. It is the psychological moment for the enterprise from our stand point.

Mr J. G. McLay of Lindsay was in town on business on Monday.

Walkerton

Chief Ferguson received a phone call about 8 o'clock Saturday night from a farmer near Belmore urging him to come out and arrest a band of gypsies, who, the agriculturalist claims had settled like a bunch of locusts on his farm and were taking about all they could get their hands on. He states that they even went into his house and took money off his sideboard. The farmer seemed in a quandary as to how to get them off his farm, as they didn't seem disposed to go although repeatedly told to move on. The chief, after listening to the rural tale, of woe, advised the complainant to tell his troubles to Teeswater, as that burg was much nearer and the sleuths there handier for quick work.

Tom Scott, formerly of the Electric Light Co's staff here, and son of Judge and Mrs. J. H. Scott of Paris, late of Walkerton, is now training with the 32nd Kingston Battery at Petawawa Camp, near Barrie, for overseas service. His father, Judge Scott, was formerly Colonel in the old 32nd Bruce Regiment and Tom saw some little service in the same battalion.

Several cases of mumps added to a fine assortment of measles is likely to detain the 160th Battalion in Walkerton at least another week, although the headquarters staff here has received no definite instruction about the matter yet. The advance party of 25 men, who are in London erecting tents and preparing for the reception of the Battalion, will not have things in readiness for the departure of the Battalion on Monday next, as was proposed, so whichever way the cat jumps the 160th will not move out on June 12th. The boys are getting good training here, and it will not exactly be a national calamity if they should spend a week or two longer in town. As soon as they depart, it is expected that instructions will immediately come for Bruce to get busy and organize another Battalion. From appearance of things at the front, the war will likely last a considerable time yet and Bruce may have to put two or three Battalions into the field fulfill its duty and insure victory.

Hotel Assessment Reduced $11,200

Listowel Banner

At the court of revision on Thursday evening, attended by Messers. R. A. Climie, F. Von Zuben. H. Ellis and J. M. Campbell, with the first mentioned as chairman, the business tax against the hotels was struck off and the assessment, generally, on hotel property lowered.

T. H. Rolls appealed against the assessment of $10,500 on the Grand Central and had it reduced to $6,750.

Aaron Roos secured a reduction on the Arlington from $7,200 to $4,800. Joe Boehmer on the Queens from $10,500 to $6,750 and J. P. Walter on the Station hotel from $2,800 to $1,800.

Wiarton the Banner District

The Rev. Mr. Prudham and the Rev. Mr. Stapleton who returned from the Methodist Conference held at Simcoe last week said.

The people of Simcoe generally, gave a very cordial welcome to all and the pastor of Simcoe Methodist Church, Rev. M. Benson D. D., was untiring in his efforts to make all welcome, A former pastor of Tara church. Rev. J. A. Jackson was elected President on first ballot and he also was appointed pastor of Hanover church for the ensuing year.

Under the shadow and depression of the great war some items of progress are encouraging. e.g. (1) Increase in giving for pastoral support of which $200 came from Wiarton district. (2) An increase in membership of 700 of whom 140 were in Wiarton district. (3) An increase of $2000 00 for missions, of which $785 00 was contributed by Wiarton district Methodists. Only two changes have been made of pastors were made in this district. Rev. J. A. Jewitt, of Allenford, being succeeded by Rev. Theo. B. Edmunds M. A., an energetic young man and Mr. J. Drew of Cape Croker, by Mr. John Hilsitch. The Rev. Mr. Drew will go to Grand River. 18 ministers of the Conference have enlisted for overseas service, of whom 5 are chaplains. Taken in all phases of their work the Methodist Churches of the vicinity have reason to be thankful and to go forward with renewed energy.

The foundation is not the most important thing

True, you can't have a good barn without a good foundation, but don't forget either that the roof has to stand most of the punishment. Upon it falls, the burden of resisting the destructive influences of weather and changing seasons.

Now, the question is "Where am I going to find a roof which will meet these conditions?" Certainly not in wooden shingles which have rapidly deteriorated during the past few years. Not in anything so perishable as wood, nor yet iron, which lets in driving rain, but rather in a permanent mineral composition such as Brantford Roofing.

Now, let us look at a section of Brantford Roofing. First, you notice it has a pure, long-fibred felt base. This is thoroughly saturated with a filler coat of asphalt or mineral pitch. Then it is given another coat. Finally, the surface is thickly covered with crushed slate. You can imagine what a job rain, snow, fire or heat would have penetrating a roof like that. As for comparing with shingles on the score of permanency, or protection, or appearance, or even economy, there is no comparison. You put a Brantford Roof on once, and it will last as long as the building; it will always look well and it will never need repairing.

Why not let us send you samples, also a copy of our booklet which explains how Brantford Roofing is "always on the job" Or, if you will give us the dimensions of your barn or house roof we will gladly submit estimates without charge or obligation.

MOVING ON LEMBERG

Russians Now Hold Great Triangle in Volhynia.

Irresistible Advance of Czar's Armies Has Resulted in the Capture of 108,000 Austrian Prisoners and Hundreds of Cannon Within a Week—Dubno and Dovno in Russian Hands.

PETROGRAD, June 12.—Unchecked in their mighty rush against the Austrians, the Russians are sweeping forward in Volhynia and Galicia. In the latter sector, after capturing Buczacz, the important railway town on the west bank of the lower Stripa, regarded as the strategical gateway to Bukowina, and smashing the enemy lines along the Stripa and Dniester, General Brusiloff's troops are moving on the Gnila Lipa, 12 miles west of the Zlota Lipa at Potok, and are seriously threatening Lemberg. At several points the Austrians' defence has crumpled completely and their retreat has become almost a rout.

The town and fortress of Dubno, 25 miles from the Galician frontier, fell into the hands of the Russians Sunday. With it the Czar's forces are again in the possession of the Volhynian fortress triangle, consisting of Lutsk, Dubno, and Rovno.

Dubno, which had been in the hands of the Austrians since September 7 last, lies on the Rovno-Brody-Lemberg railway, and is about 82 miles from the Galician capital.

Simultaneously with the drive in Volhynia the exetrme left wing of the Russian southern army forced the Austro-Hungarians to withdraw their whole line in north-east Bukowina, and advanced to within only 16 miles of its capital, Czernowitz. The Austrian War Office admits the withdrawal of the lines in north-eastern Bukowina.

The Petrograd official stories of the fighting, as contained in the communications of Saturday and Sunday make interesting reading.

"Our offensive in Volhynia, Galicia and Bukowina obtained fresh successes yesterday. The enemy armies [illegible] prisoners alone," say the War Office reports.

"Troops under General Brusiloff, fighting with enemy rear guards, have crossed the River Styr above and below Lutsk. The forces which crossed the river are pursuing the enemy, who is endeavoring to hold his position in the rear.

"In Galicia north-east of Tarnopol, in the regions of Gladki and Tsebroff, heavy fighting is proceeding for the possession of heights which have changed hands several times.

"The piercing of the enemy front in the region of the Stripa has resulted in our occupation of a fortified position on the east bank of the river. At dawn to-day our troops entered Buczacz, and, developing the offensive along the Dniester River, carried the village of Sclanka. In the village of Potok Zlota we seized a large artillery park and large quantities of shell.

"The fierce attacks of our troops are throwing into our hands thousands upon thousands of prisoners and booty of all kinds, the exact estimation of which is as yet impossible.

"During Friday's fighting we captured 97 officers, 5,500 men, and 11 guns, making the total up to the present 1,240 officers, about 71,000 men, 24 guns, 167 machine guns, 5 bomb mortars, and a large quantity of other war material.

"During Saturday's fighting we took as prisoners one general, 409 officers, and 26,100 soldiers. We also captured 30 guns, 13 machine guns, and five bomb throwers. This makes the total trophies in the recent operations one general, 1,649 officers, and more than 106,000 soldiers, and 124 guns, 180 machine guns, and 58 bomb throwers.

"In a single sector on the enemy front we captured 21 searchlights, two convoys, 29 field kitchens, 47 trains of machine guns, 12,000 pounds of barbed wire (a pood is equivalent to 36 pounds), 10,000 concrete planks, 7,000,000 cubes of concrete, 10,000 poods of coal, enormous depots of ammunition, and quantities of arms and other material.

"In another sector we captured 30,000 rifle cartridges, 300 boxes of machine gun cartridges, 200 boxes of hand grenades, 1,000 useable rifles, 4 machine guns, 2 range finders, and a Norton portable pump for the extraction of drinking water.

"The capture of such enormous war materials prepared by the enemy for various operations affords proof of how opportune was our coup against the enemy.

"Among the various episodes may be noted the plucky struggle of our young formations near Rojitche, on the Styr near Lutsk. Here the Germans attempted to render assistance to the Austrians, but by our infantry attack, delivered under cover of heavy artillery, they were dislodged from the town, losing over 2,000 prisoners, two guns, and seven machine guns. Our troops pursued the retreating Germans.

"Our forces operating in the region of Dubno (one of the fortresses comprising the Volhynian triangle) captured the town and fort and are on the enemy's heels. Some Russian detachments crossing the Ikwa River have developed their offensive. A part of the Russians occupied the region of the village of Dashkowka, on the Mytnoff-Berestetchko road, forcing the enemy at his Mytnoff point of support to surrender. Besides dislodging the enemy from his principal position north of Boutchatsky [illegible] many prisoners there, including the staff of an Austrian battalion, and also took a great quantity of arms."

PLANS FOR IRELAND.

Lloyd George's Proposals Are Likely to Go Into Effect.

DUBLIN, June 12.—An official report issued by the Nationalist party concerning its recent meeting gives the history of the situation resulting from Premier Asquith's visit to Ireland and the appointment of David Lloyd George to negotiate a settlement of the differences between the Irish factions.

The statement says Premier Asquith returned from Ireland profoundly convinced that the castle government was completely broken down, and that he made no attempt to set it up again by the appointment of either a Lord-Lieutenant or a Chief Secretary for Ireland. It gives the proposals of Mr. Lloyd George, formulated on his own responsibility as a result of his consultations with all the parties, which may be regarded as the Government's proposals. The proposals were:

"First, to bring the Home Rule Act into immediate operation; second, to introduce forthwith an amending bill as a strictly war emergency act; third, that during the interim the Irish members were to remain in Westminster in their full numbers; fourth, that during the war emergency period the six Ulster counties should remain under the Imperial Government; fifth, that immediately after the war an Imperial conference of representatives of all dominions be held to consider the future government of the Empire, including the government of Ireland; and, sixth, that following this conference and in the interval provided by the War Emergency Act a permanent settling of all great outstanding problems would be proceeded with.

The foregoing proposals were set out briefly in a speech at the Nationalist meeting by John Redmond, who added that no conference had yet been held between the opposing parties, each side submitting proposals to its own supporters.

The reports indicate that the Ulster Nationalists are still hesitating, and may repudiate John E. Redmond's and John Devlin's acceptance of the proposal.

HUGHES IS CHOSEN.

He is Nominated by Old Line Republicans for Presidency.

[illegible] dent: Charles Evans Hughes, of New York.

Vice-President: Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana.

With this ticket nominated Saturday afternoon, after the collapse of peace negotiations with the Progressive party, the Republicans entered the campaign of 1916.

Judge Hughes was named on the third ballot, the first and only one taken on Saturday, receiving 949½ votes; Colonel Roosevelt received 18½; Lodge 7, Dupont 5, Weeks 3, and Lafollette 2.

For Vice-President, Fairbanks was chosen on the first ballot for Vice-President, receiving 863 votes. Former Senator Burkett of Nebraska received 108; Governor Borah of Idaho 7, Governor Johnson of California 2, and Wm. Grant Webster 2.

The appearance of harmony and unity within the party was presented when, just before the convention adjourned at 2 p.m., the nominations were made unanimous. It was acclamation without heartiness, without zest, without enthusiasm.

SUCCESSES FOR BRITISH.

Two Forces Have Won Victories in German East Africa.

LONDON, June 12.—British troops invading German East Africa from the north have captured Mombo, a town on the railroad in the Usambara district of German East Africa, while another British force operating from Rhodesia has occupied the town of Blamarckburg, on the south-eastern shore of Lake Tanganyika. The text of the British official statement announcing these successes says:

"East Africa—The Pangani River has been bridged at Mikotcheni. Further progress has been made in the Usambara district. Masinde has been reached and the Mombo station has been captured. Myalamo has been occupied. Major-Gen. van Deventer is engaging the Germans east of Kondoa Irangi.

"On the Nyasaland border we captured a field gun and booty in the Poroto mountains and occupied Bismarckburg."

Two Lumbermen Drowned.

MATHESON, June 12.—While attempting to cross Moose Lake in a canoe during a heavy storm on June 2, A. J. Bateman and Ben Slee, two lumbermen, were upset and drowned before assistance could reach them. The accident was witnessed by a Mr. Rice on the shore, who endeavored to go to the rescue, but the men had gone down for the last time before he could reach them. Bateman's body was found last Monday, while a search is still being made for Slee.

A. J. Bateman lived on Kenilworth avenue, Toronto, prior to coming north about two years ago. His father and mother also reside here.

Tornadoed at Constantinople.

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—The Berliner Tageblatt publishes the following despatch from its correspondent at Constantinople:

"Gen. Chas. V. Townshend has arrived here. He was received with military honors and was permitted to visit the American Ambassador."

Colliers Need Ships.

HALIFAX, June 12.—Nova Scotia coal miners have memorialized Sir H. Borden, setting forth that unless the Dominion coal steamers requisitioned by the Admiralty are released grave disaster will befall the industry. They ask for redress.

LINE NEVER WAVERED

Canadians Clung Desperately to Ruined Trenches.

Bombardment of Ypres Salient Was Most Violent, Which the Canadian Troops Have Yet Experienced, but Men Remained Firm Under Terrible Shelling—Awards for Gallantry.

OTTAWA, June 12.—The following communique has been received from the Canadian general representative at the front:

Canadian Corps Headquarters in France, via London, June 12.—During the first week of the month heavy fighting occurred on the Canadian front. Early in the morning of June 2nd the enemy opened a tremendous bombardment over the area of our left division.

The weight of fire was greater than any hitherto experienced by the Canadian troops, and in spite of the cessation of our artillery continued in steadily increasing volume for four hours.

The front and support trenches were severely damaged and in many places obliterated. Entanglements were destroyed. The smoke and fumes of thousands of bursting shells, high explosives, gas and lachrymatory, hung heavily in the air and rendered observation almost impossible.

Major-General M. S. Mercer, C.B., and Brig.-General V. A. S. Williams had arranged to inspect certain front works Sunday morning. The generals were caught in the bombardment and unfortunately both are missing. It is reported that when last seen General Mercer had been struck on the head by a flying sandbag and General Williams wounded in the face.

All along the line our troops clung to their shattered trenches with the greatest gallantry. When the bombardment ceased the enemy advanced and everywhere encountered desperate resistance. At various points there was fierce hand-to-hand fighting. Officers and men rivaled each other in heroism.

Our losses were heavy, but the enemy paid a high price for every captured trench.

Local counter-attacks were quickly organized. As a result some of the lost ground was recovered and a new line established.

The following morning an organized counter-attack still further improved our position.

In order to take part in this operation some of our battalions were obliged to move across the open under intense shell fire and through heavy barrages. Nowhere did the line waver. Each battalion advanced and carried through its appointed task with splendid dash and unflinching determination.

Since then sections of our defences have been subjected at intervals to heavy bombardments. At one or two points the enemy has attempted to attack but in each case has been repulsed with loss.

The following awards have been made to officers and men for gallantry on the occasion of a German raid on our trenches during the month of May:

Distinguished Service Order: Lieut.-Colonel W. A. Griedbach, 49th Battalion.

Distinguished Conduct Medal: Color-Sergt.-Major C. Miles.

Military Medal: Sergt. J. Wallis, Corporal F. Bennett, Private A. I. McKinnon, Private G. W. Tomkinson.

ACTIVE AROUND YPRES.

Salient Has Again Become Scene of Violent Bombardment.

LONDON, June 12.—According to the British official issued at midnight Sunday, the Ypres salient has once more become the scene of chief activity. For about three hours during Sunday afternoon the enemy shelled the British trenches heavily on the southern portion from Hill 60 to a point 1,500 yards north. The bombardment was preceded by the shelling during the morning of the town of Ypres and the back area.

The only infantry action during the day on this front was an attempt by the enemy to rush one of the blocking posts of the British in Sanctuary wood. It was repulsed.

Sunday night, after a heavy bombardment of the British trenches between Thiepval, Blaumont, and Hamel, the enemy in the course of a raid in the Ancre valley was able to cut off a few men who formed part of a wiring party; five are missing.

On the remainder of the front there was nothing except minor trench mortar and artillery actions opposite Fricourt and south of Neuville-St. Vaast.

A Fokker was brought down near Habourdin.

PRELUDE TO OFFENSIVE?

Italy Believes Allies on Western Front Will Now Move.

ROME, June 12.—As a result of the Russian offensive in Galicia, the news of which was hailed with joy, the Austrian pressure is expected to decrease in the Trentino, especially since the members of the Russian delegation here are now convinced that the Russian offensive is going to lead to a general offensive of the Allies along the eastern front.

Meanwhile the Italian resistance in the Trentino is solid. The occupation of Mount Castgle 2,7 [illegible] local success, and does not open an outlet to invasion, since the immediate positions of the valley of Astico form a barrier which the Austrians are powerless to overcome, especially since it has failed to drive out the Italians dominating the lateral positions.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT would appear a big man He has dictated the entire policy of the Republicans, he had the nomination of the Progressives, but has declined it showing that he stood for principles and not for office. Possibly he could not have been elected had he accepted, but one thing is certain he could have kept Hughes out, now Hughes will probably win, and Canada will be profoundly glad to see the American nation possess some backbone again.

Mrs. P. H. Cheadle and son sincerely thank all friends, and the members of Court Wiarton C. O. F. for kindness and sympathy shown in their bereavement.

SADLER'S CORNERS

The people of Miller Lake, who got out to church last Sunday morning enjoyed a treat as the Rev. Mr. Cressman preached. Mr. Cressman is presiding elder for this district of the M.B.C church, he was up here once before about 11 years ago in another man's place and the people here were pleased to hear him again. He went from here to Haye's school where he dispensed the Sacrament of the Lords Supper. Mr. Legeer drove him to both places and back to Ferndale for the evening service.

Mrs Robert Nixon, of No. 1 Lindsay passed through here on Tuesday to pay a visit to her parents Mr. and Mrs James Rae.

Mrr W. J. Rouse left here on Sunday afternoon for Wiarton, where he will take the train to Wyborn, New Ontario.

While the people here have no fault with the change in the Post Office as it is more central, they would be better satisfied if the route was left the old way that is to Stokes Bay instead of Brinkmans Corners.

Mr D C Holmes made a trip to Spry on Friday.

Mr Geo Butchart, of Tobermory, autoed by here on Friday on his way to Lions Head where he left Mrs Butchart a week ago under Dr. Hackings care, if Mrs. Butchart is well enough he will bring her home with him. Dave Brough accompanied him.

Mrs. Tom Robins had a nasty experience on Tuesday she had borrowed Mr. S. Hawks driving mare and Frank Steips buggy as Mr. Robins was very busy with his own horses, she went to Stokes Bay for groceries and got home alright but when she got home the trouble started. Mrs. Robins tied the mare to a gate post while she was getting the groceries out of the buggy, and while she was in the house with one armful the mare got loose and as she is always ready to run away she took the chance again. Mrs Robins got hold of the halter shank and held on until it broke and the mare getting free did not take long to make Frank Steips new buggy a lot of broken wood and scrap iron.

Mr and Mrs Henry Esch were over to Lions Head on Monday and Mrs Esch spent a pleasant afternoon the guest of Mrs H. Davidson. Mr Esch went over to get a new wagon that was to have been there on Saturday night but he had that 36 mile trip for nothing and had to make another one on Tuesday, as the boat had not called at Lions Head until then.

Mr and Mrs J. Pyke spent Monday fishing at Stokes Bay.

COLPOYS BAY

Mrs. J. Tyson, of Wiarton, visited her sister, Mrs. W. T. Parke, a day or two last week.

Mr. and Mrs Kieough are welcome visitors at the home of Mr Harry Bell and Miss Bell. Mrs. Kieough is a sister.

Mr. C. E. Whicher was at Port Elgin all last week on county council matters.

Mrs. Lemcke Sr. visited Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lemcke at Purple Valley for several days last week.

Miss Hilda Whicher has been confined to the house with a very sore leg, caused by the bite of a dog when she was visiting in Wiarton. We are pleased to say the wound is healing nicely now.

Mr Edmund Kalbfleischie and Mr. Henry Lemcke were out in the new launch Wednesday last during the strong wind storm, but arrived home safely Friday morning.

At the Ladies Aid held at the home of Mrs W. H. Brown June 7th, the annual strawberry festival held on July 1st was arranged for. Further announcements will be made in The Echo.

The flag at Mr. C. E. Whicher's store was at half mast this past week, honoring the memory of the late Earl Kitchener.

Master Gordon Weir was very poorly this past week with measles and a very heavy cold. We hope he will soon be better.

The red ticket with measles on it has disappeared from our village, and the wee ones are free once more

We are pleased to note that the cement works across the Bay is being put in readiness to manufacture potash.

Mrs. Donahue. of Wiarton, and Miss May Petter, of the same place visited at Forest Home over Sunday.

Good Roads For Bruce.

Wimund Huber, C. E., of the department of Public Highways, Toronto, was in Bruce co. last week looking over the highways and interviewing reeves of the municipalities, with a view to ascertaining what the propects are for the county taking up the " Good Roads" movement.

The matter came up at the last session of the county council through the receipt of a communication from the Highways dept. A motion was made to file the communication without action. which Reeve Anderson, of Lucknow, moved in amendment that a Committee be appointed to get all possible information regarding the Good Roads scheme, and to report at the June session. The amendment carried. and Hunter, of Kincardine; Anderson, Lucknow, and the reeve of Saugeen were appointed.

It was in this connection that Mr. Huber visited the county last week. Some years ago a bill was passed by the Ontario Legislature to encourage the counties in the improvement of the county roads. The financial feature of the scheme is that the province will pay forty per cent. of the cost of road improvement when taken up by a county, and the work is carried out in accordance with an approved standard. Twenty counties (nearly half in the province) have taken up the movement, and, of course, counties which do not take it up help to pay 40 per cent. of the expenditures in those counties even if they do nothing themselves.

A system of roads for the County is first fixed upon and the County Council takes over these roads from the municipalities. All necessary engineering work is done by the Highways Dep., and any necessary suggestions and advice given by provincial engineers. An inspector is appointed by the Department and the work of improvement is proceeded with by sections.

Mr. Huber thinks that in a county like Bruce where gravel is fairly plentiful and well distributed the cost of improvement should be much less than many counties which have taken up the sch me.

IN MEMORIAM

In St. Catharines on May 30, death came peacefully to George Albert Robertson at the early age of 30 years. "Bert" as he was familiarly called, was well and favorably known, having attended both Public and High Schools here. Afterwards he went into the market garden business, having first learned the genial trade. Being of a jovial disposition he made friends with everyone. Some what over a year ago he contracted pleurisy, but seemed to recover to some extent. Yet hoping for greater improvement, he went to Toronto and from thence to St. Catharines for treatment. An operation was advised and although apparently successful, death resulted a few hours afterwards. The funeral held from his late residence Friday afternoon was largely attended and many beautiful floral offerings paid tribute to his memory. Besides, his widow, formerly Miss Myrtle Moore, he leaves to mourn his early death, his father J. H. Robertson; three sisters, Mrs E. Hooey, Chesley; Mrs J. Webster and Mrs W. G. Cheshire also one brother J. H. Robertson of Durham.

methods. The result has been quite satisfactory."

"Kin I go now?" he asked uneasily.

"Yes, by way of the front door."

I watched his great hulking figure until he disappeared along the path leading around the house. I had no fear that he would ever face me openly. All I needed to guard against was treachery. Then I turned and looked into the questioning eyes of the woman.

"What did you learn? What did he say?"

"Only one thing of real importance," I answered in subdued tone, "and I dragged that out of him by threat. He was not employed by Neale, and the fellow who was sent down here to assist us was disposed of in some way."

"Killed you mean?"

"I suspect as much, but Coombs claims he was kicked off the place and returned north."

For a moment she stood silent, breathing heavily, her eyes on my face. In the pause I saw again the picture of the old judge and remembered.

"Why is he here, then? What authority has he?"

"Come outside into the garden and I will tell you the whole story."

In front of the veranda and to the right of the brick walk the latticework of a small summer house could be discerned through a maze of shrubbery and weeds. On a rustic seat within we were completely screened from observation. With flushed cheeks and eyes bright and questioning she could scarcely wait for me to begin.

"Now tell me. Surely we are out of sight and hearing."

"I do not think I shall ever be entirely assured as to that until I know more of our exact situation," I replied, speaking cautiously. "We may have been seen coming here, and those weeds would easily conceal an eavesdropper. The truth is, I have gained very little information of value and am as mystified as ever. If that fellow told the truth it is beyond my understanding. I think he lied and yet cannot be sure. He claims to be working under the orders of Philip Henley."

"What! impossible!"

"So I felt, and consequently hesitated to tell you, but now that I have been compelled to do so, I will explain in full. He said this under a menace, a condition which often inspires men to speak the truth. I can scarcely imagine his making up such a story, for he is a dull witted fellow, and even before he had threatened to test your claims to be Henley's wife."

"You told him, then?"

"Everything, except the original cause of our being here. I determined this morning to fight in the open, under my own name. That is the right way, is it not?"

"Yes, I think so," and she lifted her eyes to mine. "I like you better for that."

"I think I like myself better also," I said with a laugh. "I confess I didn't care much at first. But after what you said the night of our arrival I began to view the thing in a new light, and to despise my part in it. Yet even then I felt bound to carry out my agreement. It was only when you told me your identity, that I felt free to decide otherwise. I want to serve you, and I want you to respect me. Down in your heart you haven't really been assured that I was not one of that gang of conspirators. You came down here to watch me."

"No—no. I scarcely think I ever did doubt you, only it was all very strange. Nothing seemed real."

"We are both getting our heads above the mist now," I interrupted gently, "and deep as the mystery appears, when finally solved it will likely prove a very sordid, commonplace affair. The main thing is for us to thoroughly understand and trust each other."

"I trust you." And both her hands were impulsively extended. "I have from the very first. I did not come here to watch, but because I believed in you. Truly this was my motive rather than any thought of the property. I came because—because I knew you needed me. I had an intuition that you were going into danger, into some trap. It was not until that afternoon that I realized clearly what this all meant to me personally. I seemed to wake up as from a dream. Then I sat down in the rest room of one of those big department stores and thought it all out. At first I determined to tell you everything, but I did not know how to do it. I could not [illegible] you. I—I had to [illegible]

[illegible] great blot [illegible] brought me [illegible] to you that night before [illegible] I stood you to be a public [illegible] I am surprised I chose aright. You are the man I thought you to be. I am glad I came."

[illegible] the hot blood coursed through my veins. Wild words leaped to my lips, only to be choked back unspoken, although I scarcely knew what strength combined to win the swift victory. Impulse, made with sudden revelation of love, swept me partly near to outburst, yet reason held sufficiently firm to restrain the flood of passion. I knew I must refrain; I read it in the calm serious of those eyes fronting me in frank friendship. A word, a single, mad, ill considered word would sever the bond between us as though cleft by a sword. With any other I might have dared all, but not with her. She trusted me—yes! But as a gentleman. Should I fail in that test of her faith I could never again hope to regain my place in her esteem.

"Let's not talk of ourselves," I said, releasing her hands, "but of what we must face here. I have told you that Coombs claims to be working under the orders of your husband. Is that possible?"

"I cannot conceive clearly how it could be, and yet he might have received notice of his father's death in time to assume control of the estate by telegraph or even by letter."

"I hardly think Coombs has been here so short a time."

"He might have been the old overseer, however, and retained."

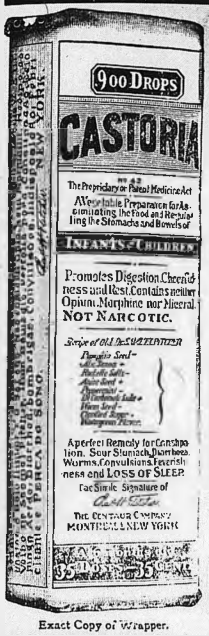
"True. Yet how could Philip Henley know that he had inherited the property?"

She thought a moment seriously, a little crease in the center of her forehead.

"Of course I can only guess," she hazarded at length, "but it would seem likely he was notified of his father's death by one of the administrators and doubtless told at the same time of his inheritance. He was the only son, and there were no other near relatives. It would be only natural for him to retain the old servants until he could come here and select others."

"There is only one fact which opposes your theory," I acknowledged, "otherwise I would accept it as my own also. Coombs plainly threatened to confront you with Henley to test your claim to being his wife."

"Even that would not be impossible," she admitted reluctantly, "for he must have known of the judge's death even before—before I left. Only I do not believe it probable, as he was in no condition to travel and had very little money. Besides," her voice strengthening with conviction, "those men who sent you here, Neale and Vail, would never have ventured such a scheme had they been uncertain as to Philip Henley's helplessness. I believe he is either in their control or else dead."



"Then Coombs lied."

"Perhaps, although still another supposition is possible. Some one else may claim to be the heir."

"This was a new theory and one not so unreasonable as it appeared at first thought. Still it was sufficiently improbable, so that I dismissed it without much consideration. She apparently read this in my face.

"It is all cryptic in the dark until we learn more," she went on slowly. "Have you decided what you mean to do? Coombs [illegible]

Albemarle Council

Colpoys Bay, May 27th, 1915

Albemarle Council met on the above date as a Court of Revision and for general business pursuant to adjournment of last meeting. All members present. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Couch and Adams—That in compliance with the proposition of an influential deputation of the Town of Wiarton proposing a joint improvment of the road leading north from Wiarton to the townline of Amabel and Albemarle, and considering the the large interest of this township in this road we herewith make a grant of $100 for the repair of said road on condition that Wiarton will grant an equal amount and that the Township of Amabel makes a substantial grant commensurate with their responsibility for the up keep of the road and that representatives of the Albemarle Council be appointed to interview Amabel Council to ascertain their willingness to make a sufficient grant to warrant assistance from Albemarle. Also, in our opinion, it might be well to ask for substantial grants from the County Council and Provincial Gov't.

Weir and Craig—That this council be now formed into a Court of Revision of the assessment roll.

Couch and Whicher—That Samuel Adams be appointed chairman of the Court of Revision.

The members of court having taken their declarations, it was moved:

Weir and Craig—That the appeals of Messrs, John D. Wite, John Ashcroft and W. T. Parke be laid over until the adjourned Court of Revision.

Whicher and Craig—That this court do now adjourn until 1.30 p. m.

Court resumed at 1.30 p. m.

Couch and Craig—That the Court of Revision be now adjourned until the 12th of June next.

Council resumed general business.

Weir and Craig—That Ellis Hardman be appointed pound-keeper in place of Jas. Cunningham, who has resigned, and that By-law No. 546 be amended accordingly.

Couch and Weir—That the petition of Donald Cameron and others for permission to erect a rural telephone line operating in Albemarle, be granted and that they be given the right to erect poles and wire etc. on the public highways in this township providing said poles and wire do not interfere with traffic.

Craig and Adams—That By-law No. 541 be cancelled and that the inspector be dismissed and this council appoint four or six commissioners to supervise the grading and gravelling of roads in the different divisions and by-law be drawn up for same.

Craig and Weir—That the committee on roads be dismissed and that all orders for payment of work or other expenditure be presented at regular meetings and approved by council for payment.

Craig and Weir, that the following commissioners be appointed: div. No. 1, Joseph Adis; div. no. 2, L. McMillan and Wm. Thomas; div. no. 3, W. Campbell and John Crawford; div. no. 4, R. W. Forbes and Robt. Hepburn; div. no. 5, B. Howe and Wm Coveney.

Orders were issued on the Treasurer to the amount of $151.80.

Craig and Weir—That this council do adjourn to meet again on the 12th day of June as an adjourned Court of Revision.

All motions carried.

Thos. Coveney,
Clerk.

Presentation to Pte. Featherson.

A very jolly crowd gathered at the home of Pte. Henry Featherstone in Mt. Horeb, a week ago Friday night, to present Pte. Featherstone with a wrist watch. The following address was read, after which Pte. Featherson made a suitable reply, thanking his friends very much for their kindness:

Clavering, May 26, 1916

To Pte. Henry Featherstone,
Dear Friend,—

It is with mingled feelings of pleasure and regret that we have met here at this time, pleasure, because you are about to fit yourself to defend the right, and regret both for your relatives and ourselves who will miss you so much.

We can realize to a small extent the sacrifices you are making and we appreciate your action all the more. We realize you are leaving a christian home and a kind neighborhood and are about to go into less congenial surroundings and more rigorous occupation but we feel sure that your actions and speech, as when with us, will always be above reproach. Remembering you, as some of us do as a school boy, as an attendant at church services, at Sunday School, at the Epworth League and also in our social intercourse and entertainment we realize our loss will be great.

Now as a very small token of the esteem in which we hold you we ask you to accept this wrist watch. We need not ask you to remember the givers when you look at it because we feel sure you will. You have enlisted in our Empire's army, not because you love war but peace. You saw your home, your loved ones, your liberties threatened and you answered the call of duty. For this we honor you, in that you are willing to stand between the usurper and the things so dear to you and all of us. We will not forget that it is for us you are going forth, nor will we forget to uphold you before the throne of Him in whose hands we all are.

By your many friends.

Why Shamed by Blotchy Skin

If you are a sufferer from Eczema or unsightly simple skin, you know just what it means to have that humiliating backward feeling about meeting strangers, and oftentimes friends. Many a time you have looked into the mirror and wished that your skin would be like other people that you know without a blemish. This wish can be yours for the asking. If you will go to the druggist and procure a bottle of D.D.D., the greatest of all skin remedies, apply it according to direction, in a short time your skin will be soft as velvet.

Come in and ask for a bottle today on our money-back guarantee. Ask also about D.D.D. Soap, that keeps the skin healthy.

"Thank you, I will take the Nerve Food with me."

"I don't want to miss a single dose, because it is doing me so much good. My nerves were so bad that I could not rest or sleep, and would get up in the morning feeling tired out.

"Besides that, I frequently had severe nervous headaches and got so cross and irritable that every little noise would set my nerves on edge. I did not seem to have any energy or strength, and the slightest exertion would use me up entirely.

"Then a friend told me of the benefit she obtained from using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I decided to give it a trial. It was not long till I found that I was sleeping better and enjoying my meals. There did not seem to be so much to worry me, and I began to find a new pleasure in life. It is wonderful the way the Nerve Food is building up my health and strength, and since I have been using it I have found out that many of my lady friends have had a similar experience."

This is the way women everywhere are talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Seldom has any treatment ever aroused so much favorable comment. While natural and gentle in action, this food cure is wonderfully potent in building up the run-down system. Ask your friends about it and put it to the test when in need of restorative treatment.

Mr. Louis Schwan, has received from his son Ernest. who is at the front, the medal for distinguished conduct, which was awarded him a few weeks ago. It will be remembered that at the risk of his life under a heavy fire, Private Schwan, went out and rescued a wounded comrade for which he received the medal. This medal which is made of solid silver, has the picture of King George on the one side and the facts connected with the gift on the other. It is about as large as a silver dollar and much thicker.

Another effort will be made to save the deer on the Bruce Peninsula by giving them the close season for three years, beginning, however next year. It will be remembered that we had a close season of three years not long ago, but if rumor is correct there were quite a number of deer killed all the same. It would be far better to make the penalty for breaking the law a pretty stiff one so that the law would be observed. Hunting will be allowed this year from Nov 1 to Nov 15 but without dogs.

The Bruce Hearld says, Earl McFarlane, who was committed to Walkerton jail from Wiarton on April 3rd, to serve six months for deserting from the 34th Battalion, just as they were about to leave London for overseas, and who lately joined the Wiarton Co. of the 160th (Bruce) Battalion, has been pardoned by the Governor General of Canada, and ordered to be turned over to the commanding officer of the Bruce Battalion, with which he will likely proceed to the front. The ex prisoner is stated to have three brothers now enlisted for the fight, and his only offence seems to have been the over-staying of his leave-of-absence, with the result that his Battalion got away without him and he was subsequently convicted as a deserter.

Northern Summer School

To Be Held in Wiarton, July 3 to 10th.

The early Methodists had camp meetings. They sought the shades of the forest, and for a week or ten days drew near to God. For years England has had the counterpart in the Keswick Conferences held in the beautiful lake regions. D. L. Moody was a revivalist, but some realized that revivalism would run to seed without training. To meet the need Northfield and like conferences were organized. The Student Volunteers gave us missionary out-burn many of these annual uplifts and inaugurated a number of smaller gatherings like that at Silver Bay.

In Canada, of recent years, these small gatherings have multiplied and in most cases a definite missionary aim. Five has been kept associated with Bible study. This year some thirty-five summer schools have been planned. Some of these like Whitby, are interdenominational and extend from two to three hundred students. The purpose of these is the Northern Summer School to be held in Wiarton July 3 to 10.

The Northern is under the auspices of the Epworth Leagues of the Owen Sound, Wiarton, Walkerton, Palmerston and Mount Forest Districts. This school is intended to train leaders, discuss methods, deepen spiritual life, give vision of the world's need, and help young people in the decision of the place of their life's work. Every pains has been taken by the management to provide the best possible talent. No local lectures are to be attempted. Methods that have proved successful elsewhere are being followed. Sunday School teachers, Young People's Society leaders, High School students, and any desiring a week's holidays at the minimum of expense and the maximum of good should plan to attend. The school stands for discipline, for study, for spiritual life, for larger knowledge, for rest and recreation, for good fellowship.

Methodist Church, Wiarton, where the Summer School will be held.

As the name indicates the school is projected to meet the needs of the northern districts yet comparatively untouched by the Summer School movement. Unlike St. Thomas and Whitby where the magnificent ladies colleges afford every facility for a summer school, Wiarton must resort to other means. Instead, the hospitality of homes is solicited for lodging purposes. Already the Trustees of the Methodist Church and of the Public School have offered the use of their buildings. The basement of the church will be turned into a dining-hall where the members of the school will take breakfast, dinner and supper. One of our townsmen, Mr L. Mouck has been engaged as caterer and promises to give his best attention.

The morning sessions of the school will be devoted to classes, lectures, and discussions. The afternoon will be kept strictly free or rest and recreation. The whole day is designed for physical refreshment as well as for intellectual stimulus and spiritual uplift. The evening sessions will be open to the public and will consist of addresses from returned missionaries and representative leaders of the church. A rally of the Young People's Societies of Wiarton and surrounding district is being arranged for the first Monday evening of the school July 3. A missionary exhibit will be on hand and a bookroom opened for the convenience of the school.

The courses of the school are largely serial and cumulative. Attendance throughout the whole session is advised. For one hour each day the school forms into Mission Study classes where a definite text book is studied consecutively. Another hour each day is devoted to discussions on the place and function of christian education in its many bearings.

The expense is as low as it is possible to make it. Board for the week will be $5.00. Registration fee entitles to privileges of the school $2.00. No railway rates have been arranged but the usual concessions may be had where any ten person travel together from the same station and return together by asking the local agents.

Full information may be had from the Secretary Rev. W. W. Prudham or the local registrar Miss Eva Young, Wiarton.

Rev. D. Norman, B A.

Rev. D. Norman B. A., of Japan

Rev. D. Norman, B A., has been for nineteen years a most successful missionary in Japan. He is original, practical and has the happy art of attaching himself to the Japanese. Rev. E. S. Moyer of Durham is a successful leader among young people. He has teaching ability and will conduct a class in the study of the immigration problems arising out of the Strangers within our Gates. He represents Mount Forest District on the staff of the Summer School.

Rev. Geo. A. King B. A.

Rev. Mr King is another of the younger men who has been a leader at several Summer Schools. He is stationed at Kingsville, the home of the first summer schools of this kind in Canada. He gave a very fine course of Bible Study on the Philippians last year at the Alma College Summer School which he has been asked to repeat in Wiarton.

Rev. Geo. A. King, Kingsville

Rev. T. Albert Moore Dr. D.

Rev. Dr. Moore is one of the leading men of Methodism. He was for years Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, has been President of Conference and is now in charge of the Department of Social Service and Evangelism. For years he has taken an active part in the Young People's work of the church. He is expected to preach for the school July 9. He will also lead in the Institute Hour on the subject of Educational Evangelism and Social Service. Dr. Moore is a cousin of Mr. Thomas Moore, Oliphant.

Rev. T. Albert Moore, D. D., Toronto

Rev. W. J. Fiddis, Ph. B.

Rev. Mr. Fiddis, of Cargill, is Treasurer of the Northern Summer School. Mr. Fiddis has been appointed to Cayuga. He will be missed from this part of the country.

Rev. W. W. Prudham B. A., B. D.

Rev. W. W. Prudham, Secretary of the Northern Summer School has had large experience in Summer School teaching. He has been on the staff of the Alma College Summer School, St. Thomas, ever since its inception in 1908 besides serving in the same capacity elsewhere.

Rev. W. W. Prudham, Wiarton

Rev. R. W. Scanlon M. A., Ph. A.

Dr. Scanlon is registrar of the Northern Summer School. He is stationed at Port Elgin. He is an active worker in the newer plans of Christian service.

Rev. R. W. Scanlon, Port Elgin

Rev. W. S. Daniels, B. A., B. D.

Rev. W. S. Daniels, President of the Northern Summer School, was for ten years president of the Summer School for Hamilton Conference an other two years was Secretary of the same organization. He is pastor of the Tara church and Chairman of the Wiarton District.

Rev. W. S. Daniels, Tara.

NOTES

The Epworth League of the Wiarton Methodist Church has undertaken to secure rooms for the Summer School. The committee in charge is Misses Pearl Newman, M. McCrae, Mildred Shaw, Frances Linton, Ila Scott, Mildred Phillips, Martha Hambly, Jessie Trout and Verra Patterson.

The permanency of the Summer School depends in a large measure upon Wiarton's ability to entertain it.

What impression will a hundred visitors carry away of our town. Some places are remembered by the cordiality of the people, some by the appearance of streets, lawns and shops.

Have the steps to the Park been repaired? New comers invariably want to get to some such vantage spot. The Park is certainly an asset too little appreciated.

Be sure and take your meals at the Dining Hall. It helps the caterer. But it will help you more because there is so much of good fellowship thrown in. Imagine sitting at the table with Rev. Dan. Norman and hear him talk about Japan, or Miss M. Brimston tell you of experiences among the Chinese. Summer School leaders are to entertainers.

"Come early and stay late" is a good motto for the Summer School folk. The courses are so arranged that you get the fullest good by sustained attendance.

One does not have to be a Methodist to go to Summer school, nor does one need to wait for any appointment. Everybody, anybody are eligible on the same terms.

The merchants and others not been solicited for assistance, not even an ad has been found on the programs and announcements Everybody is trusted to encourage by good cheer at least a worthy enterprise,

Can anyone suggest how the afternoons may be best spent in recreation? Young people are fond of sports and outings. Perhaps our bunches will be in shape and our cars ready, or some games arranged suitable for all. A few farmers with a bunch of hay on a hay rack have made a merry time before this.

Presentation and Address

On Tuesday of last week Mrs W. B. Reeve, Oxenden, who had been the efficient president of the Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church for seven years, was presented with the following address accompanied with a gift of a fountain pen.

Oxenden, June 13th, 1916.

Dear Mrs Reeve:

We, as members of the Ladies Aid of the Oxenden Methodist church, take this opportunity to show our appreciation of your leadership, being President of our Society for so many years. During the seven years which you have been president we have always found you capable, willing and trustworthy, always anxious for a forward move either financially or spiritually. At your suggestion members have learned to lead the devotional part of our monthly meetings thus testifying and growing for Christ and thereby receiving a blessing which you so willingly shared.

We ask you now to accept this Fountain Pen as an expression of the esteem in which you are held by the members of the Ladies Aid. We are pleased that you are still with us for we know you will always be ready to do as you believe the Lord leads you, encouraging us to be a self-sacrificing, humble and forgiving society doing everything to the honor of our Lord giving him all the Glory.

Signed on behalf of the Ladies Aid,

Mrs E. J. Loney
Mrs Jas. Atkey
Mrs C. A. Loney

CLIPPED FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES

Walkerton

Of twenty-one aliens who applied to become British subjects at the general Sessions of the Peace before Judge Klein in Walkerton on Tuesday last only three succeeded in getting into the fold, to wit: Eleanor Strunk and Anna Huermann, of Formosa, who were natives of the United States, and Jacob Ruber, of Carrick, who was born under the French flag in the Province of Lorraine. Outside of these two Yankees and Frenchman there was nothing doing in the issuing of citizenship papers. The other nineteen, who were born in Germany, and were therefore citizens of an enemy country, had their applications laid over for another year, which was a mild way of refusing them, for if the war is still in force then, a further adjournment of their requests will likely be in order. With Mr. Justice Clute turning down forty German applications for British citizenship at Walkerton a few weeks ago and Judge Klein refusing another batch of nineteen here on Tuesday, the chances of any more Tuetons getting their papers in Bruce while the fight is on seems slim. No doubt many of these have voted at elections, and enjoyed all the privileges of citizenship without probably being aware that they were actually aliens in the land where they had so long toiled and lived. With the outbreak of the war and stringent ruling of the courts against the subjects of an enemy country, the horror of the situation has suddenly dawned on them and the rush to enroll under the British flag, which in many cases are loyal and sincere is at best belated, and as a penalty for procrastination they now find that citizenship which was so easily secured before, shut flatly against them until after the war.

Mr. Geo. D. McKay, who organized the Bruce methods of recruiting, which enabled the 160th to be brought up to full strength in the shortest time and with the least expense of any rural battalion in the Dominion, was asked over the phone on Thursday last by Col. Shannon of London, to assume the position of Chief Recruiting Officer for the whole of Army District No. 1, which reaches from Windsor to Tobermory, and comprises the counties of Bruce, Huron, Lambton, Essex, Wellington, Waterloo, Middlesex, Oxford and Perth. In this area are three-quarters of a million people, of which it is estimated at least one hundred thousand are available for service. The Bruce methods of recruiting, in which every available man of military age is located and personally seen, has made such a hit with the militia, that Sir. McKay, who organized the system and pulled off the stunt in Bruce, is thought the proper man to place in charge of the scheme for the whole district. As the undertaking is such a big one, Mr. McKay has not decided yet whether he will accept the job or not, but will accompany the battalion to London on Wednesday to look into the matter and consider the proposition.

At the County Council last week it was decided to compel all junk dealers to pay a license fee of $10, for carrying on their business in the county. As they are continually using the roads in the pursuit of their trade, and as they pay no other business tax, it was deemed but fair that they should bear some share in the upkeep of the highways that are so essential to their calling.

Chesley

We have entered upon the third week in June and the dreaded frost which has often damaged the timothy and clover crops so badly in the first two weeks of June has fortunately been absent this year. The prospects for a heavy crop of hay never were better. We notice one of our correspondents advises farmers to start haying earlier than usual this year as the dry weather early in July was the best for making hay in 1915 and the same may be true of the present year.

John Wright of 11th con. Brant received a letter from his son Albert's chum at Ashford Hospital, England, that Albert was wounded the second time he was in the trenches and is now deaf and dumb and suffering from a shell wound. The letter which is dated June 1st, says Albert is receiving careful attention and is expected to recover. Pte. Wright belonged to the Prince Albert Batt. and left overseas in September last year.

John H. Moore, son of Mr and Mrs W. J. Moore of Wiste Alta., and formerly of Chesley was successful in winning an $80 scholarship in his first year exams in medicine in Manitoba University. We congratulate Harold on his success. His sister Mae is to be married on June 28th to Mr Mowha of Brandon, Manitoba.

A Derby Tp. farmer recently sold a pig on the market in Owen Sound for $50. The porker weighed 630 lbs Thirty-five years ago a porker of the same weight would have brought about $25 after it had been dressed by the seller.

OWEN SOUND

The friends of Earl Franklin an Owen Sound young man who was thought to have been lost in the disastrous lake storm on Nov 9, 1913, were agreeably shocked when he appeared in Owen Sound on the late train on Saturday night. Instead of perishing on the Str. Noble, which went down on Lake Huron in the great storm, Franklin left the steamer just before it left on its ill-fated voyage. He went to the States immediately and was not aware that he was counted as one who had met a watery grave until about three months ago, when on arriving at Montreal he met an ex Owen Sounder who told him that he was considered dead. He at once sent word to his step father and mother, Mr and Mrs Franklin, who live on the West Side, Owen Sound, but it was not until Saturday night that he presented himself in flesh and blood for inspection. Earl Franklin although a young man has had a varied experience, and has lately joined the 124th Battalion, Toronto, and in camp at Niagara, and came here on week-end leave. He returned to camp this morning

The market on Saturday showed slight improvement over the two previous Saturdays, particularly as regards attendance. Grain features showed a tendency to rally, a number of loads changing hands. Prices were firm as the following figures will show: oats 50c; barley 65 to 70c wheat 95 to $1.00; hay $15 a ton; potatoes $1.75 a bag. The produce market was marked by an increased attendance of buyers and sellers. Butter was firm at from 21 to 22 c a pound, while eggs went for 21c a pound.

Southampton

The Underwriters report, following the visit of the Inspector a few weeks ago, has been received by the Town Council. Many improvements for fire protection in the town were suggested, and the condemnation was pretty strong.

Fishing has been very good this season. The tugs have been making better hauls than is usual at this season of the year, and the past week the perch and herring fishing has been good at the long dock.

Our factories are all very busy these days, and the main trouble is to get men enough to keep up with the orders The Bell Furniture Co. have recently received another shell box order.

Tara

A case of criminal assault was tried here last Friday before Magistrate McDonald, the defendant being Charles Calhoun, and the plaintiff Samuel Kingston two Elderslie farmers. It appears that bad feelings has existed between the two parties for some considerable time and on the first day of June the two men met on the road. Kingston driving in a buggy. Some hot words passed between them and Calhoun tried to pull Kingston out of the buggy and failing to do so jumped into the buggy and beat his opponent with his fists so badly that a doctor was called to tend to the defendants injuries. After hearing all the evidence Magistrate McDonald committed Calhoun for trial before the judge, bail being given C. E Start appeared for the plaintiff and C. J. Mickle for defendant. The case has created considerable interest as both parties are well known in the district.

Mr. Norman Monkman, son of Mr. Thos. Monkman, con. 3, Arran, has made the supreme sacrifice in giving his life for his country, having been killed in France recently. The sad news was telegranhed to his father on Saturday. Deceased was 26 years and ten months old and enlisted at Oyen, Alberta; in November, 1914, with the 3rd Mounted Rifles going overseas to England a year ago this month. He went to France last September and saw considerable fighting during the past months. Ten years ago he went to Alberta and had been farming a half section of land near Oyen. He is survived by his father, 3 sisters and 3 brothers, who have the sincere sympathy of the entire community. Norman was liked by all who made his acquaintance and he gave his life for his country and in the cause of right and justice.

Captain Danard was home on Monday and returned to Walkerton on Tuesday. He intends leaving for Ottawa this week to take up a special course in musketry. A new order has been issued and officers must specialize in some one department of service and Capt Danard has chosen musketry. The 160 is expected to leave for London some time during the latter part of this month.

Austrians Have Not Withdrawn.

ROME, June 19.—The Austrians are maintaining their original plan in pressing their offensive in the Trentino, and have not withdrawn troops from that front because of the Russian offensive in the east, it is declared in Sunday night's official War Office statement. Belief is expressed that such a withdrawal will become more difficult because of the counter-offensive which the Italians are now maintaining. Further Austrian attacks have been repulsed, and in the Frenzela and Sugana sectors the Italians have made further progress.

Prohibits Export of Foodstuffs.

LONDON, June 18.—As a sequel to rioting in Holland resulting from a shortage of food, the Dutch frontiers will be closed next week, and the export of foodstuffs prohibited until the supply reaches normal, according to a Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

TO CRIPPLE AUSTRIANS

Brusiloff Seeks to Break Up Teutonic Armies.

Fall of Czernowitz is Step in a Movement to Break Through the Enemy's Lines at Several Points —Austrians Are Now Separated Into Three Armies, and Are Rapidly Falling Back.

LONDON, June 19.—The Russian offensive has been renewed after a temporary pause, with increased fury. An incessant rain of shells is falling even thicker than in the earlier days of the offensive, on the Austrian trenches, and the Russian ammunition supply appears to be inexhaustible. Heavy guns have been brought up, the despatches from the front say, and huge Russian reinforcements have appeared near Torchin, west of Lursk, in the Stokbed-Styr district, and near Horodeuka, between the Dneister and the Pruth.

The breaches made by the Russians on the south-western front, spreading fan-shape from 30 to 40 miles in the rear of the Austrian line, have now effectively separated the three main Austrian army groups operating between the Dniest and Bukowina. The continued retreat of the more advanced portions of the Austrian forces is occasioned, therefore, more from strategic reasons than because of actual pressure applied by the Russians.

The primary object of General Brussiloff's campaign is not the retaking of lost territory, and, although it is quite conceivable that Lemberg may be caught in the encircling movement developing from the flank attacks of Lutsk and Czernowitz, the chief aim of the Russian advance is obviously to destroy—or, at least, cripple—the Austrian army.

The tremendous number of prisoners taken by the Russians up to Saturday roughly estimated at 165,000, with additional losses in killed or wounded of 150,000, attests to the success of the Russians in accomplishing this aim.

After much hard fighting on the River Pruth, where the Austrians fought desperately with a view to gaining time for the evacuation of Czernowitz by their army and the removal of military stores from the city, General Lechnitzky has finally entered the capital of Bukowina. The capture is an important one, as it entails the command of several important railway lines. The city had been untenable for several days because of the tremendous Russian bombardment, which compelled the flight of the civil inhabitants, and evacuation of the place by the Austrian forces. It is expected that further details of the capture will show that both sides suffered sanguinary losses.

The recapture of Czernowitz by the Russians comes at a dramatic moment, it happening only a few days after the Austrians, with imposing ceremony, had unveiled on the city hall a double-headed Austrian eagle such as the Russians had removed during the occupation of the city last year.

Russian headquarters announce the capture of Czernowitz in the usual laconic terms. It gives no description of the desperate fighting known to have occurred for the crossings of the Pruth River after the Austrians blew up the bridges, but adds the interesting fact that the Austrians are being pursued into the Carpathians, which is the only alternative to being driven into Roumania, where they would be interned.

The Russian official account makes the interesting revelation that German reinforcements have already been brought from the French front to the assistance of the hard-pressed Austrian:

"Yesterday, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, General Leshnitzky's troops captured by assault the bridgehead at Czernowitz, on the left bank of the Pruth. After desperate fighting for the passage of the river, where the enemy had destroyed the bridges, we occupied Czernowitz.

"Our troops are pursuing the enemy, who is retreating in the direction of the Carpathian passes. In the course of the capture of the bridgehead, we took over 1,000 prisoners and also seized guns in Czernowitz."

NEW LEVIES AT VERDUN

Germans of 1917 Class Captured by the French.

Proportion of Mere Boys in Great Battle Area Has Increased — Fresh Attempts North of Verdun Meet With No Success—Activity is Reported From St. Mihiel Region.

PARIS, June 19.—An official statement issued Sunday says: "We have identified by prisoners taken two fresh divisions on our Verdun front. The proportion of men belonging to the 1916 class brought up as reinforcements by the Germans has increased considerably. We are able to ascertain the presence of young soldiers belonging to the 1917 class."

A despatch from Amsterdam states that an official order appears in the German papers calling all the soldiers of the 1917 class to the colors.

Fresh attempts by the Germans against the French positions northeast and north-west of Verdun met with no success, says the French War Office, and the Germans suffered heavy casualties in their attacks—delivered against Le Mort Homme and Thiaumont sectors.

Again there has been considerable activity in the Argonne forest and in the Vosges mountains, where the French in the former sector used their long-range artillery effectively against German positions, and in the latter sector put down a surprise infantry attack south-west of Carspach.

The French forces made an attack on the German positions north of Hill 321, west of the Thiaumont farm Saturday morning, capturing some trench elements and taking some 30 prisoners.

No infantry attack was made by the Germans in the course of the day, but their artillery continued its violent bombardment of the French positions on Hill 304, and the second line in the Chattancourt sector, on the west bank of the Meuse, and of the sector south of Fort Vaux on the east bank.

Considerable activity is reported from the St. Mihiel region. There was fighting with hand grenades in the forest of Apremont, south-east of [illegible] and French aviators bombarded German camps at Montsec, to the east of St. Mihiel, and caused a fire in the railway station at Vigneulles-Hattonchatel, to the north-east of the same town.

German aviators again dropped bombs on Bar le Duc, injuring a few persons, but doing little material damage.

A French detachment raided the first and second German lines at Hill 425, east of Thann, in the Vosges, cleaning out the trenches and bringing back some prisoners.

TURKS ROUTED.

Petrograd Reports an Advance in the Direction of Mosul.

LONDON, June 19.—In a Petrograd official an advance in the direction of Mosul, north of Bagdad, is recorded. A party of 27 Russian scouts attacked a Turk detachment numbering 300. The fight lasted for two hours, and finally the enemy was dislodged from his position and forced to take flight.

The Constantinople official claims that a British attempt to land a force on the northern bank of the Euphrates between Korna and Nasseire was prevented by the Turks, who drove back the British after six hours of fighting. Behind them the British left 180 dead, it is alleged. The Russian force which invaded Mesopotamia from Persia in the section east of Mosul has been driven back into Persia and north of the town of Bane, five miles inside the Persian border, according to the same report.

The following official communication with regard to the operations in Mesopotamia was issued Sunday evening:

"General Lake reports that on the night of June 16-17 the enemy unsuccessfully undertook to bombard our saps on the front of Sannayyat.

"The description in the Turkish communication of June 17 of an attempted English landing on the north bank of the Euphrates was either imaginary or a distorted version of the successful punitive expedition mentioned in the British communication of June 16."

BIG EVENTS NEAR.

Next Fortnight Will Be Important, Say London Critics.

LONDON, June 19.—Partly as a result of the activities on the various war fronts this week a widespread belief exists here that the next fortnight may prove the most important thus far in the war.

The continued strictness of the Entente Allies' blockade against Greek ports is engendering a growing feeling of uneasiness in Government circles. Rumors are rife that the Entente's ultimatum, which is expected to be delivered Monday, may present as an alternative to compliance with its demands, the rupture of diplomatic relations between the entente allies and Greece. It is not thought that the Greek Cabinet can long stand the pressure. The lack of breadstuffs on the outer islands of Greece and in the not readily accessible parts of the kingdom is already causing disturbances, although the Government insists that the available wheat supply at Piraeus is sufficient for more than a month.

Late Chief of German Staff Dead.

BERLIN, Germany, June 19.—Lieut.-General Count Helmuth von Moltke, chief of the supplementary general staff of the army, died of heart trouble Sunday afternoon during a service of mourning in the Reichstag for the late Field Marshal von der Goltz.

KING VISITS FLEET.

Name of Navy Never Stood Higher, Says His Majesty.

LONDON, June 19.—An official communication issued Sunday evening gives an account of a recent visit by King George to the Grand Fleet and an address by the monarch to the representatives of the units of the fleet on parade. In his address King George said:

"Admiral Jellicoe and Officers and Men of the Grand Fleet:

"You waited nearly two years with most exemplary patience for the opportunity of meeting and engaging the enemy's fleet. I can well understand how trying was this period and how great your relief when you knew on May 31 that the enemy had been sighted. The unfavorable weather conditions and approaching darkness prevented that complete result which you all expected. But you did all possible in the circumstances. You drove the enemy into his harbors and inflicted on him very severe losses. You added another page to the glorious traditions of the British navy. You could not do more. For your splendid work I thank you."

At the conclusion of his visit the King sent the following message to Admiral Jellicoe:

"I am thankful that I had the opportunity of congratulating you and the Grand Fleet on the result of the recent engagement in the North Sea. Assure all ranks and rating that the name of the British navy never stood higher in the eyes of their fellow-countrymen, whose pride and confidence in their achievements are unabated. Good luck and God-speed. May your future efforts be blessed with complete success."

King George left London Tuesday evening to visit the fleet, and returned to London Sunday. During the course of his tour he inspected the whole of the grand fleet and visited all of the wounded men from the Skager Rack fight in the various hospitals.

U.S. TROOPS CALLED.

National Guard Will Be Hurried to Mexican Border.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Virtually the entire mobile strength of the National Guard of all states and the District of Columbia, was ordered mustered into the federal service Sunday night by President Wilson. About 100,000 men are expected to respond to the call, although Brig.-Gen. Alfred Mills estimates that the maximum militia forces available would be 145,000 men.

They will mobilize immediately for such service on the Mexican border as may be assigned to them.

Secretary of War Baker Sunday issued the following statement:

"In view of the disturbed conditions on the Mexican border, and in order to assure complete protection for all Americans, the President has called out substantially all the state militia, and will send them to the border, wherever and as fully as Gen. Funston determines them to be needed for the purpose stated.

"If all are not needed an effort will be made to relieve those on duty there from time to time so as to distribute the duty.

"This call for militia is wholly unrelated to Gen. Pershing's expedition and contemplates no additional entry into Mexico, except as may be necessary to pursue bandits who attempt outrages on American soil.

"The militia are being called out so as to leave some troops in the several states. They will be mobilized at their home stations where necessary recruiting can be done."

FOUGHT LIKE DEMONS.

Canadian Prisoners Cheered by Belgians at Courtrai.

LONDON, June 19.—Soldiers returning to Courtrai from the front on Wednesday said the Canadians fought like demons until they recovered the trenches lost the previous week, writes a correspondent of the Amsterdam Telegraaf, who adds:

"Germans losses were heavy during the British bombardment preliminary to the recovery of the ground. The correspondent saw people from Courtrai, who described scenes there after the German defeat. Train after train and a long succession of motor ambulances brought the wounded back in Rue de Lille, and on the market places cars stood dripping with blood. Inhabitants of Courtrai rejoiced at the German setback, as on the previous Saturday they were angrily forbidden to cheer when 200 Canadian prisoners were marched in through the Porte de Menin.

"After being given food in the big schoolroom the prisoners were taken to Ghent. Cheered occasionally when Belgian women caught sight of the men, not even the brutal punishment of the Huns could prevent them from cheering. On Monday 57 more Canadians came through, but neither party had any officers and no general was seen."

Editorial

If the United States becomes involved in war with Mexico it will mean that practically the whole world is at war.

THE widow of John Jacob Astor has decided to marry again, and in reaching this decision she has cut herself adrift from a mansion and from an income of $5,000.000 Men are worth having.

There is no doubt that much injury has been done to the crops owing to the unprecedented wet season, and if ever Canada wants a good harvest it is this year. Hay will be a good crop but hay is not everything.

CHESLEY got some rain last week, enough to sweep away a dozen bridges, damage the electric light plant to the extent of $10,000, carry away 3000 logs down stream, and damage the dam of Krug Bros. furniture factory to the extent of $2.000.

Amabel Council has given $150. towards repairing their own roads providing other municipalities assist in this enterprise. The Amabel council should have had rich red blood enough to say that they were able to take care of their own roads, and invite other municipalities to attend to their own affairs.

WHEN the young man who would not enlist reads of the death of Archie Hill and Ernie Bolton, can he think that life is more precious to him than it was to them? In death these young men are honored, in life these other young men are not regarded with very much respect.

ON our front page there appears the announcement of a Summer School, which we are glad to note, will be held in Wiarton We are confident that the people the town will give the visitors a cordial welcome and that the week they spend in this town will be most pleasant and profitable.

THERE are a whole lot of things being left for settlement when the war is over, for instance Home Rule for Ireland. Prohibition for Ontario, Church Union for the Presbyterians. Possibly the human race may be so thankful then that they will agree to anything, and it is just possible that even then they will show their teeth when dealing with a contentious question.

The Town Council

Messrs. George Hahn and George Hoffman asked the council to open a drain near their lots. Every spring they are flooded and for eight years the council has promised relief and has not made good The chairman of the street committee will give the matter his consideration.

The High School Board advised the town that they wanted sewer connection, and this matter will be attended to.

The county assessment this year is as follows:

|---|---|
| General county rate - | $1780 34 |
| Municipal equivalent - | 40 11 |
| War tax - - | 547 80 |
| | $ 2368 25 |

The reeve contends that the county tax is not as high as last year.

For a number of years the post office has been exempt from taxes because it is leased by the Crown. Legal advise, however, has been secured. and it is to the effect that the tax on this property can be charged against the land.

Thomas Cordick sent in his resignation, and the chairman was authorized to secure a suitable man for work on the streets, and pay him a good wage.

The recent heavy rains have been rough on the culverts. The one near the cemetery having been carried away there will be a county bridge built of cement put in its place. It appears that the flood has been putting the bridges over the drain on Taylor street out of commission. and Coun. Hurlbut maintains that the corporation is under obligation to repair these bridges, because this is a creek and was forced upon them 27 years ago by changing the water course. However legal advice upon this point will be secured.

Work of Royal Flying Corps

The following from a letter written by a nephew who has been at the front in the aviation service, may be of interest.—Ed Echo

France June 7, 1916

Dear Uncle;— I think. I wrote just after I came to France in January didn't I?

Well there isn't much change from then except that the days are longer and when the days are fine we get in a lot more flying.

I have been doing artillery work (ranging the guns by wireless) chiefly altho we do lots of patrols and bomb-raids and photography etc. but for the last two weeks I have been doing patrols only on a little "scout" machine It is a tiny little thing and goes about 85 miles per hour. I have to patrol a certain part of the lines at a height of about 12,000 ft from 3 30 a.m to 5 a.m. and from 5.30 p. m. to 7p. m. I haven't met any Huns on it yet but hope to soon. I had one fight with a Hun about three months ago when I was taking photographs on their side of their lines. He tried four or five times to drive me back but I got 18 photographs (and one bullet through my machine a foot beneath my seat). The worst part of this business is the sound of the "Archies" bursting. Whenever we go near the lines, at no matter what height, the Huns paper away at us with anti-aircraft guns and they are mighty good shots too An Archie bursting about fifty feet away from you, when you are sailing serenly along about a mile and a half above the battle field and thinking of anything under the sun except meeting St Peter, has a very nerve-racking sound believe me, and when a dozen start cracking and whissing you begin to sit up and take notice. One night a Hun machine came over and dropped some bombs near our hangars and then a few nights after there was a gass attack and we got a lot of the tail end of it. We are only five or six miles from the lines. I have flown over the Canadians several times when they were fighting.

As ever

Your nephew Rob

MAR

Fridays rain beat them all and thats saying a good deal.

Mr John Brown an aged resident of Adamsville attended church here Sunday evening.

Rev. McEwan of Wiarton preached to a large congregation in the Baptist church Sunday evening.

Misses A. White and McGarvey and Mr Beason attended the Baptist Association in Paisley last week.

Mr Matthew White sr. who has been quite poorly for some time, is we are pleased to hear, slightly improved.

Miss Edith Given, Toronto, accompanied by her cousin Miss McMaster is spending her vacation with the formers parents Mr and Mrs Jas. Given.

Gordon McMaster, of Kilsythe, is spending a few holidays in Mar and his old school chums are delighted to have Gord amoung them again.

Considerable discussion arose from a request to spend $100 on the road leading from Caleb Brown's corner to Wiarton. The reeve stated that Albemarle had agreed to give $100 towards this purpose, Amabel $150, and the County Council $100, so if the town would not do anything it meant that $450 would not be spent on this highway. It had been hoped that Amabel would come up to $200, but Amabel failed to make the grade.

Coun. Pope took decided objection to spending money for Albemarle, Eastnor or Amabel, when there are not 10 yards of good roads in town.

Coun. Crane maintained that it is the councils duty to help the town, and it is of as much importance to repair this road as it is to repair our streets, the people come over this road to town to transact business. This view was held by others A resolution was put through authorizing the chairman to spend $100 on the road between Division street and Caleb Brown's corner. Coun. Pope asked for the yeas and nays. He and Coun Plante voted nay, while the others voted yea.

The town's relation to the Canada Casket Co. came up for discussion, and this was laid over until the next meeting of council.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal treat and a building-tonic, free from any harmful drugs. Try it.

"I FEEL LIKE A NEW BEING"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought The Joy Of Health After Two Years' Suffering

MADAM LAPLANTE

85 St. Rose St., Montreal. April 4th.

"For over two years I was sick and miserable. I suffered from constant Headaches, and had Palpitation of the Heart so badly that I feared I would die. There seemed to be a lump in my stomach and the Constipation was dreadful. I suffered from Pain in the Back and Kidney Disease.

I was treated by a physician for a year and a half and he did me no good at all. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" as a last resort. After using three boxes, I was greatly improved and twelve boxes made me well. Now I can work all day and there are no Headaches, no Palpitation, no Heart Trouble, no Constipation, no Pain or Kidney Trouble and I feel like a new being—and it was "Fruit-a-tives" that gave me back my health".

that and deep down in my own consciousness honored her the more, even while I struggled against the inevitable. Yesterday I might have spoken the words of passion on my lips, but now they were sealed.

I felt the pistol in my pocket, took it out and made sure it was in readiness, then advanced cautiously toward the house. The hall was empty and so was the front room. The latter appeared desolate and grim in its disorder and dirt. My thought centered on that picture of Judge Henley hanging against the farther wall. I could never be satisfied until I learned absolutely what was concealed behind that heavy gilded frame. There was mystery to this house, and perhaps here I had already stumbled upon the secret. I opened the door leading to the rear, silently, and listened. There were voices talking at a distance, two women, one a pleasant contralto, the other cracked and high pitched. The lady was doing her part; I must do mine. I closed the door gently and stole over toward the picture.

A black haircloth sofa with broad mahogany arm offered two easy steps, enabling me to tip the heavy frame sufficiently so as to peer behind. The one glance was sufficient. Underneath was no opening in the wall much less in width than the picture, yet ample for the passage of a crouched body. The arm of the sofa made egress comparatively easy, while the frame of the picture, though appearing heavy and substantial, was in reality of light wood and presented no obstacle to an active man. The passage was black, and I thrust my head and shoulders in, striving to discern something of its nature. For possibly three feet I could trace the floor, but beyond that point it seemed to disappear into impenetrable darkness. This line of change was so distinct that I surmised at once it marked a descent to a lower level, either by ladder or stairs.

CHAPTER IX.

A Chamber of Horrors.

THERE was no hesitancy as to what I must do. Now that I had discovered this secret passage it must be thoroughly explored. The safest way was to borrow through the dark, trusting to hands and feet for safety and prepared for any encounter. Whoever might be hidden away there would certainly possess some light sufficient for my purpose if needed.

Standing on the sofa arm I found little difficulty in pressing my body forward into the aperture until extending at full length the picture settled noiselessly back into place against the wall, excluding all light. Inch by inch silently I worked forward, anxiously expecting for the break in the floor, which I knew to be only a few feet beyond. Ever then it reached it unaware of its proximity, experiencing a sudden unpleasant shock as my extended hand groped about, touching nothing tangible.

I remained there for some time debating the exact nature of what was before me. There were no stairs, nor did any shafts of a ladder protrude above the floor level. Only as I lay flat and felt cautiously across from wall to wall could I determine what lay below. All was black as a well, as noiseless as a grave, yet there was a ladder exactly fitting the space spiked solidly into the flooring. My groping fingers could reach two of the rungs, and they felt sound and strong. With face outward I trusted myself to their support and began the descent slowly, pausing between each step to listen and gripping the side bars tightly. The blackness and silence, combined with what I anticipated discovering somewhere in those depths below, set my nerves tingling, yet I felt cool and determined to press on. Especially did I yearn to learn something definite about Philip Henley. This to me was now the one matter of importance—to be assured that he was living or dead.

I counted twelve rungs going down and then felt stone flags beneath my feet, although the walls on either side, as I explored them with my hands, were still of closely matched wood. The passage, now high enough to permit of my standing erect, led toward the rear of the house, presenting no obstacle other than darkness, until I came up suddenly against a heavy wooden door, completely barring further progress. As near as I could figure I must be already directly beneath the kitchen and close in against the south wall. No sound reached me, however, from above, nor could I, with ear against the slight crack, distinguish any movement beyond the barrier. Cautious fingering revealed closely matched hard wood, studded thickly with nail heads, but no keyhole or latch. Secure in the feeling that no one else could be in this outer passage, and completely baffled, I ventured to strike a match. The tiny yellow flame, as it quickly flickered out in some mysterious draft, revealed an iron band to the left of the door, with slight protuberance, resembling the button of an electric bell.

Almost convinced that the pressure of my finger would ring an electric bell I pressed the metal button. To my surprise and relief the only thing to occur was the slow opening of the door inward, a dim gleam of light becoming visible through the widening crack. I peered anxiously into the dimly revealed interior. It was a basement room, half the width of the kitchen overhead, I should judge; the walls of crude masonry, the floor of brick, the ceiling, festooned by cobwebs, of rough hewn beams. The light, flickering and dim, came from a half burned candle in an iron holder screwed against the wall, revealing a small table, two chairs, one without a back, and four narrow sleeping berths made of rough boards. This was all, except a coat dangling from a beam and a small hand hatchet lying on the floor. There was, in the instant I had to view these things, no semblance of movement or suggestion of human presence. Assured of this, although holding myself alert and ready, I slipped through the opening. Even as I stood there, uncertain and staring about, a sharp draft of air extinguished the candle, and I heard the snap of the lock as the door behind blew back into position. About me was the black silence of a grave.

I backed against the wall, crouching low, weapon in hand, scarcely venturing to breathe, listening intently for the slightest sound to break the intense silence. There must be another opening into this underground den—one leading to the outer air—judging from that sudden and powerful suction. The very atmosphere I breathed had a freshness to it, inconceivable in such a place otherwise. That sudden sweep of air could only have originated in the opening of some other barrier—a door, no doubt, leading directly to the outside. I had seen no occupant of the room. Without question it was deserted at my entrance. Yet some one had been there, and not long before, as was evidenced by the burning candle. Nor, by that same token, did this same mysterious party expect to be absent for any length of time. Apparently I had intruded at the very moment of his departure. Wherever that second passage might be, the former occupant of this underground den had evidently entered it previous to my opening the inner door. Still unaware of my presence, he had unfastened some other barrier, and the resultant draft had extinguished the candle and blown shut the door at my back. This seemed so clearly the truth that I laughed grimly behind clinched teeth. The solution was easy. I had but to discover the extinguished candle, relight it, search out the second passage and waylay the fellow when he returned unsuspicious of danger.

My groping search for the candle was finally rewarded by touch of the iron brace. I could clearly trace the form of the bracket and determine how it was fastened into place, yet to my astonishment, there was no remnant of candle remaining in the empty socket. Grease, still warm to the touch, proved conclusively that I had strained the right spot in my search, yet the candle itself had disappeared. Beyond doubt the draft of air had been sufficiently strong to dislodge it from the shallow socket, and it had fallen to the floor. I felt about on hands and knees, but without result, and finally, in sheer desperation, struck my last match. The tiny flare was sufficient to reveal the entire floor space as well as the wall, but there was no remnant of candle visible. I held the mirror of wood, until the flame scorched my fingers, starting about in bewilderment. Then the intense darkness shut me in.

I crouched back to the wall, pistol in hand, and it seemed as though the blood in my veins had ceased to flow. How could the candle have vanished so completely? There was but one way to account for this occurrence—some human, aware of my presence, had removed the candle, and stolen through the pitch darkness silently and as swiftly disappeared. I was locked in, trapped, and not alone.

I confess for an instant I was panic stricken, shrinking back from the horror of the black unknown which enveloped me. I could see and hear nothing, yet I seemed to feel a ghastly presence skulking behind that impenetrable veil. My first inclination was to creep back to the door and escape into the outer passage. Yet pride restrained me, pride quickly supplemented by a return of courage. I straightened up and advanced slowly, testing the wall with my hand, every muscle stiffened for action, listening for the slightest sound. I encountered nothing, heard nothing, until my groping fingers touched the rough plank of a sleeping berth. I explored this cautiously, lifting the edge of a coarse blanket and reaching up to make sure the one above was also unoccupied. Satisfied that both were empty, I worked my way blindly along to the second tier. As I reached into the lower of the two bunks my finger came in contact with some substance that left the impression of a human body beneath the blanket. I jerked away, startled, expecting my light touch would arouse the occupant. There was no movement, however, nor could I distinguish any sound of breathing.

Convinced I had been mistaken, I reached in once more to assure myself of the truth, and my hand touched cold, clammy flesh. The shock of discovery sent me reeling backward. It was not the dead body so much as the black gloom which robbed me of manhood. I could not see where to go, how to escape. At whatever cost I must procure light. Shaking as with palsy, yet with teeth clinched, I reached forward, groping my way back to the side of the bunk. I touched the edge of the blanket and thrust it away, feeling the body. The man was fully dressed, lying upon his back, and I experienced no difficulty in attaining the pockets of his coat. In the third I found what I sought—a box of matches.

I struck one and as the phosphorus cord burst into flame stared about the vacant room and then down into the dead face within the bunk. The man had been killed by the stroke of a hatchet and was almost unrecognizable. Not until the blazing match had burned to my finger tips was I sure of his identity. Then, to my added horror, I recognized Coombs. I grasped the full significance of the man's death, the probable reason for his being stricken down. Whoever had been hidden behind that picture, crouching in the passage, had overheard his confession to me. This was vengeance wreaked upon a traitor, the executed death sentence of desperate men. And it had just been carried out—within the hour. The murderers might be even now lurking within the shadows watching my every motion.

Again a slender match flared into tiny flame, casting about a dim radius of light, partially reassuring me that I was alone. Before it flickered out into darkness my eyes made two discoveries—the opening of a dark passage to the left of the bunks and a ghastly hand protruding from the upper berth.

Above the murdered Coombs, hidden beneath blankets, was the body of the strange man shot in the upper room. The place was a charnel house, a spot to be shunned. I crept back from that ghastly scene of death as though invisible hands gripped my throat. I fairly choked with the unutterable horror which overcame me. And yet I knew I must act, must go on to the end. Even as I crouched there, trembling and unmanned, seeing visions in the darkness, imagining imaginary sounds, my thought leaped back to the girl upstairs. I could feel the courage returning, the leap of hot blood through my veins as I straightened up.

I struck one more match to make certain of the opening through the wall, dimly glimpsed beyond the berths. My eyes were not deceived. Here was a second wood supported passage; unblocked so far I could perceive, but black as pitch. I took the remaining matches, carefully secreting the few fast there revealed, but as it sputtered out, the pit and dropping to the floor I [illegible] confidence that I was alone, unobserved. Whoever those assassins might be, they had departed, leaving only the helpless dead behind. No doubt they would come again to remove the bodies, to seek refuge in this hidden hole. But for the moment I was there undiscovered and must utilize each precious instant for discoveries and escape. Wild recklessness, a desire to break away from those gruesome surroundings, overcame all caution. Swiftly as I dared in the dense blackness I crept forward, feeling the smooth wall with eager fingers, my right hand still nervously gripping the pistol butt. Then I came to the door, similar to the other, although no groping about would reveal the catch or enable me to force it open.

Again I struck a match, guarding the infant flame with both hands against a slight draft which threatened its extinction. I caught a glimpse of a shadow on the wall and made one swift, automatic effort to leap aside, dropping the fatal match. The movement was too late. Something descended crashing upon my head, and I pitched forward into unconsciousness.

It must be I lay there practically dead for some time. I had no knowledge of being approached or handled, and yet every pocket was rifled, the pistol jerked from my hand and my coat ripped from my body. Like so much carrion the fellows had dung me back against the wall so as to make room for the swinging open of the door. Little by little, silently, comprehending now what had occurred and warned by the sound of voices not far away, I changed posture slightly, straightening out cramped and aching limbs and so turning my head as to enable me to see along the passage, where a ray of light streamed.

I lay twenty feet from the entrance to this habitation underground, thrust into the black shadow behind the door, which stood partially ajar. My position precluded any possibility of observing what was beyond that wooden barrier, but I could plainly view the entire north portion of the interior, although the only light radiated from a flickering candle. One edge of the table came within my vision, a man sitting beside it, his back turned toward me. He was smoking a short stemmed pipe and conversed himself with a growling, indistinct utterance when addressed. Opposite, however, was a man of a different type, slender and active, his hair very dark and inclined to curl, a rather long face, slightly olive hued, with a small mustache waxed at the ends. His black, sparkling eyes attracted me first, and then his long, shapely hands. These grasped a sheet of paper, and I noticed others, including several unopened envelopes, lying before him on the table. He laughed a bit unpleasantly, a row of white teeth visible beneath the dark mustache.

"It's just as I thought, Herman," he said genially. "The fellow is a mere adventurer. There will be no one to take his disappearance seriously."

"But some one knows he come here."

"Only the two who sent him, and they'll never dare tell, and the woman. She is safe enough. Nigger Pete drove them out here, and we can close his mouth easily enough. It's been easy, Herman, and now with these two settled it leaves me a clear field."

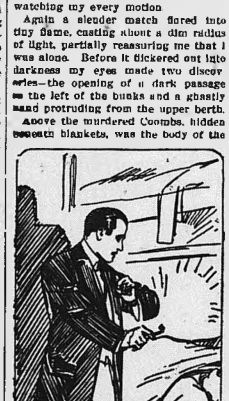
"Maybe so—yes. But vat you think it all mean? I would know how eet vas dey come."

The younger man shuffled the papers restlessly, his eyes on the face of the other.

"I confess there are some details missing, Herman," he said slowly, "but, in the main, it is clear enough. I take it this man Neale is a rascal. He went north to find the heir, discovered that he was either dead or had disappeared, ran into some scamp of the same kidney as himself and, between them, determined to cop the coin. That's my guess. Then they picked up this penniless soldier, who, by the way, resembles the missing son a bit, and sent him down here to play the part."

"Vell, maybe so. But vat about the girl, hey?"

"Some one they picked off the streets. He's told to do it in this letter. They thought it best to prove their man married and so had to procure a woman. We won't have any trouble with her."



"Vat you do to be sure?"

"Turn her loose in New Orleans with a few dollars," carelessly. "All she knows about the affair can't hurt us if she does squeal. There are plenty of ways to shut her mouth. I'll know better how to handle her case right when I see her. Broussard is a long time at his job."

"Perhaps she fight heem—hey?"

"The worse for her—that creole is a wildcat. But I wish he would hurry, so we can get through the Gut on the flood time; that boat draws more water than is comfortable in this lagoon."

"You need not worry," said the German, placidly looking at his watch. "I take eet through safe. She good sea boat, an' where I come in I can go out. Ach, 'tis the fellow come now?"

To My Added Horror I Recognized Coombs.

CHAPTER X.

Taken Prisoner.

THE newcomer passed so close beside me I could feel his foot touch mine. The door remained ajar and, if escape was possible, now was the time. With head reeling dizzily, I crept through the opening, my feet on the floor, guided by the first faint words within.

"Well, Broussard, what is it?"

"All safe on the island."

"The bodies are planted, then?"

"The job's getting to that."

"Vat you mean?"

"Oh her way; there was no trouble. Sallie and her doped, sir."

"I expected she would. Then that

Made The Supreme Sacrifice

Archibald Joseph Hill

Mr William T. Hill, of Keppel, had three sons who had enlisted. Thomas belongs to the Bruce battalion. David to the 119th battalion and is now at Niagara. He enlisted at Thessalon. The other son Archibald Joseph is not for he was killed in action on June 4th, and this sad dispatch brought sorrow to his Keppel home last week. This young man, who gave his life, lived in this town a number of years ago when he worked as a barber with George Drinkwalter. About nine years ago he went West and enlisted at Stonewall, Man. Last September he sailed for England and ate his New Years dinner in France. When a family give three sons to the cause of freedom they have nobly done their bit for the Empire.

Rob Simmie Wounded.

When the word came that Rob Simmie was seriously wounded in the abdomen it sent a wave of sorrow through the town and the whole district. A better boy, a finer type of physical manhood, a young man with a cleaner life and higher ideals never went from these parts. It was only natural that he should enlist, and having enlisted it was safe to say he would be in the fighting. It will be remembered that he enlisted some time ago, and secured his commission as lieutenant. He had his work well up and those who were at the Fall Fair last year will remember how well he put the men through the drill. Not long afterwards he went to England and was there quite a few months. He saw that he would have to take a further course there in order to hold his commission so he went to the front as a private for he could not be kept away from the firing line. Although his home is in Clavering yet he was always regarded as a Wiarton boy, because of his long connection with the hockey team. It is to be hoped that the next news about him will be hopeful.

Ernest Bolton Killed in Action

The call came to Ernest Bolton in Calgary last October to offer his life for his country he enlisted with the first Canadian Pioneer Battalion and on Monday June 12th he was "killed in action". He made the sumpreme sacrifice and made it willingly. At the age of 28 he had succeeded well in life. He was a Dominion Land Surveyor, and had taken one year of his course as a civil engineer, a promising career was evidently before him, but he preferred duty to pleasure, and to lose his life in order that he might find it again. He was the second son of Mrs. Bolton of this town his father, who was a Minster of the Congregational church, died a few years ago. Besides being at the front himself his brother Frank is there, as well as a brother-in-law, who has been wounded. His sorrowing mother will have the sympathy of all the people of the town in her bereavement.

Corp. W. Bennett Wounded.

News reached town of the wounding of Corp. William Bennett on June 6th, gun shot wound head and hands. W. Bennett, came to Canada May 1913 to his uncle E.F.Daws and answered the call of his King and Country in Oct. 1914. He enlisted in the 18th Battalion and went overseas April 1915 and was sent to the front in September 1915. He was twice promoted while in France. Corp. W. Bennett was of a soldier family. his father having fought under the late General Gordon. Besides himself he has all three of his brothers serving their country, George and John in the 71st and Albert Victor in the 160th Bruce, all of them are volunteers from Wiarton. Corp. Bennett has also a sister in Woodstock. We all wish Corp. Bennett a speedy recovery. Friends are anxiously awaiting further news

A man without a country is one who lives in town.

War Comes Home to Cape Croker

Last week Pte. Samuel Martin was reported seriously wounded in the head, wrist and shoulder. No spot has given more men to the war than Cape Croker, and now her glory through suffering has begun.

The Wet Spring

Crops suitable for late sowing in Ontario and Quebec

In some parts of Ontario the continued wet weather that has characterized this season up to the present has prevented the sowing of some of the usual crops at the usual time and has had a teodency to discourage the farmer. Such however should not be the feeling since the possibility of producing crops on land not yet sown are practically as good as provided the weather improves a bit and the right crops be sown in the right way and properly looked after.

Among crops sure of proving satisfactory even at this late date are barley for grain, peas and oats for forage, buckwheat, millet, hungarian grass, corn for forage or ensilage, swedes, white or flat turnip and rape.

BARLEY would likely do well even yet on fairly well drained land. Sow about 2 bushels per acre.

PEAS and OATS sow 3 bu. oats and 1 bu. peas per acre to be cut green for hay he may expected to give profitable returns if sown anywhere before June 25.

MILLETS and HUNGARIAN GRASS have wounderful possibilities as forage produces and even for seed for poultry or swine if sown before July 10.

BUCKWHEAT may be sown up to July 10 with certainty of profitable returns on almost any kind of land where water does not stand. CORN for FORAGE. Early on Flint varieties (Longfellow, Comptons Early, etc.) should be chosen. Sow thinly up to June 25.

SWEDES thrives in such a season as we are having and may be expected to give good returns if sown anywhere before the end of June.

FLAT TURNIPS or WHITE TURNIPS while not so satisfactory as swedes for most purposes do well if sown even as late as the end of July and are most excellent cattle feed, being particularly suitable for dairy cows. They do not keep as well as swedes.

RAPE for pasturage is of a great value for swine, sheep or beef cattle.

With late seeding most thorough preparations of the seed bed is absolutely necessary if success is to be hoped for. If land has to be ploughed turn a shallow furrow and in case land is grassy it will be much better to plough again even if already ploughed last fall or early this spring After ploughing roll, disc two or three times and harrow before seeding. After seeding roll again if surface is very dry.

In any case get the seed in well and what is quite as important in the case of hoed crops above mentioned see to it that they are kept absolutely free from weeds for the next two months. Neglect in this important detail means failure when crops are sown late. If a choice of crops is possible sow corn, buckwheat, turnips and hungarian grass on the lighter soil and other crops on other kinds of soil, that is clay loam, peaty or mucky soil, etc. but any one of these crops will do quite well on almost any kind of land.

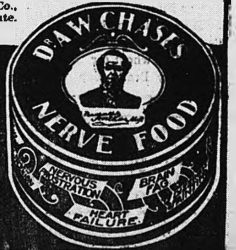
A DEAD NERVE CELL CAN NEVER BE REPLACED

The human body is composed of millions of tiny cells of various kinds. With the single exception of the brain and nerve cells, there is a system of dividing up of cells to form new ones. In this way the blood cells, the tissue cells, the cells of the stomach, liver, kidneys and other vital organs may be increased so as to make up for loss or injury. But not so with the cells of the nervous system. You have a certain number at birth, but never any more. A feeble, poisoned nerve cell may be restored, but a dead cell can never be replaced.

For this reason complete paralysis can never be cured, but the person who is partially paralyzed may be greatly benefited by restorative treatment such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which nourishes the feeble, wasted nerve cells back to health and vigor.



This, undoubtedly, is the strongest reason why everybody should be familiar with the symptoms which tell of exhaustion of the nerve cells and know the best means of restoring the vitality of the nerves before they become dead to all treatment.

Sleeplessness, restlessness, irritability, nervous headaches, nervous indigestion, loss of energy and ambition, feelings of discouragement and inability to concentrate the mind are among the most common warnings. Later developments are known as nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

It is easy to neglect treatment in the early stages, but that is the time when a few boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do wonders for you. Preventive treatment, which is so good in all ailments, is practically the only method to be applied to diseases of the nerves, because of the fact that a dead nerve cell can never be replaced, whereas a feeble, wasted nerve cell can be restored by such nourishing medication as is afforded by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Should you desire further particulars about this great food cure, kindly write for booklet.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

The Annual Congregational meeting of the Methodist Church was held Wednesday evening and was quite well attended. The reports for the year were most gratifying. While there was a slight decrease in membership, finances showed a healthy development the Missionaay givings show an increase of almost 50%. In spite of a change in the ending of the year the current income for the local church showed an $100 increase in eleven months as against twelve months of last year.

The indebtedness of a number of towns is as follow,

Chesley $110,000; Kincardine $141.000, Wiarton $182,000; Hanover $121,000; Meaford $226,000; Owen Sound $1,156,000; Clinton $177,000; Goderich $560.000; Seaforth $231,000; Wingham $186,000; Walkerton $43,000.

It will be seen that the markets show an upward tendency this week. Butter remains stationary at 22 cents but eggs go up a notch and are now 23 cents a price sky high for this season, and unwashed wool is 35 cents per. pound. The hog is on the up grade again and sold Monday at $10.25.

Though for the past few years Dougald has been a resident of Wiarton, he was one of Bentick's boys, and his friends were pleased to look into his face once more.

Now that the bowling season has begun the bowlers are after the trophies and last week they took a trip to Owen Sound and brought back the P and P Trophy. Two rinks went over, viz Messrs Baines, Kastner, Sutherby and Allan, Siemon Reekie, Symon and Lane, and won by 6 on the round. The trophy will stay here now until an off day when some one will come and take it away. That off day came Tuesday and the trophy is now in Chesley.

Last Wednesday afternoon fire damaged the dry kiln and contents of the Canada Furniture Manufactures Plant here. The Table Factory, to a slight extent. Just how the fire originated is a mystery as the doors were shut, but it is generally thought that it was due to spontaneous combustion. The kiln was considerably injured and there was a large quantity of lumber inside which was damaged by water. However the fire did not stop operations for the next day all hands were at work as usual. The brigade was promptly on hand and although they had only one hose to work with they soon had the fire under control. The Cheif has informed us that water was turned on three minutes after the whistle blew and within an hour the reels were back to the hall.

Councillor Hurlbut keeps a strict tab on the rain fall. He never issues probabilities, but can tell past events with accuracy, and he says that on last Friday that 4½ inches of rain fell within 10 hours This is the greatest rain fall ever known on the Bruce Peninsula, and probably is only surpassed in the days of the flood. In 4 hours it rained 3 inches, simply poured down. This long wet season has undoubtedly injured crops particularly on lowlands but the hay crop will be O.K. And, by the way, Jupiter Pluvius upon this occasion has put us to considerable expense. The water ran down the hills in the town in streams resembling creeks particularly on Division Street, and made a trench far quicker than could have been done with a large number of men provided with picks and spades. It will take say from $200 to $300 to repair the damages done to the streets.

Action Dismissed Plaintiff Pays Cost

(Owen Sound Sun)

The non-jury sittings opened at the Court House here at two o'clock before Mr Justice Sutherland, of Toronto. The only case on the docket was that of Reekin vs Kent. in which the plaintiff, Charles Reekin, of Wiarton, brought action for $1,000 against David A. Kent, of Oxenden, for alleged damage to his property by water from a mill-dam erected by him in 1897, for the purpose of operating a stone grist mill of which he is the owner.

A large number of witnesses were examined on both sides, some of whom are land owners in the vicinity of defendant's property. Mr. David Robertson, of Walkerton, acted for the plaintiff and Mr. W. S. Middlebro for the defendant.

Mr. Reekin, the plaintiff to the suit, is the owner of a grist mill at Wiarton which has a capacity for turning out 200 barrels of flour a day. He is also the owner of 120 acres of land above the Oxenden river dam, in the township of Keppel about three miles from Wiarton. which is occupied by his son, who works the land for his own benefit. The evidence for the prosecution went to show that the river in some places is only a few feet lower than the level of the land. Before the dam was built grain crops could be grown quite successfully, but since then, and especially since the dam raised, it has been impossible to grow anything except field grass which is relatively of no value for feeding purposes. The land is assessed for $650. and the plaintiff admitted that the assessment had been raised since the dam was built, a fact which Mr. Middlebro pointed out as proof that the property could not have been very seriously damaged by water. Despite the contention, however, one witness for the prosecution estimated the damage to property along the river front at $2 an acre. This witness declared that the dam at Kent's mill caused the water to overflow the land in low places with the result that it was rendered unfit for grain growing of any description It was further claimed that the dam was raised two and one-half feet, and that this had made conditions even worse than they were before. Plaintiff's son swore that he had raised only barley and oats on the land and a fair crop of vegetables. but that the land was so wet last year he was unable to grow anything. He put in a crop of barley in July as an experiment, but nothing came of it. Robert McDowal C. E., deposed that the height of the dam was 5 feet, 6 inches, with a drop of 8 feet.

For the defence it was claimed that work on the dam was started in the fall of 1897 and finished in the summer of 1898. The defendant, Kent, denied emphatically that the dam was ever raised a single inch after it was erected, though admitting that he had put up boards under the spill—boards to keep the water from flowing onto the land. He said the average width of the river was 18 feet. He admitted that the water in some places ran onto the land and then found its level in the river again. but attributed this fact to the presence of logs and other obstacles in the river bed. He swore positively that Reekin told him on one occasion that the water at the dam was causing no damage to his (Reekin's) property. He declared the dam was six feet five inches high.

In cross-examination the plaintiff was obliged to admit that the bed of the river is not large enogh to carry the water away, especially in the time of freshets, the result being that it backs up and overflows the land. Asked why he did not register a complaint when the dam was raised, he declared he did not think at the time that it would do him any harm.

Justice Sutherland dismissed the action, the plaintiff to pay all costs of the court

Death of J. W. Jermyn

In the early life of Wiarton Mr. J.W.Jermyn filled a most important part, and until the last year or two he was a familiar figure on the streets. Throughout all these years he was a kind hearted, honourable gentleman in the best sense of the word, and his death which occurred in June 19th, at the residence of his son, near Saskatoon is regretted here by a very large circle of friends.

The deceased was born in the township of Biddulph, county of Middlesex in the year 1845 and came to keppel in 1866, after farming a few years on the 21st con. on the lot lately owned by Mr. John Armstrong he moved to the infant village of Wiarton, and engaged in the mercantile business. He was of an enterprising turn and associating himself with the late Mr. W. Symon and the late Joseph Roberson, he assisted in the erection of the Union Block, on Berford street, and afterwards he erected the Block which was used for many years by Mr. G. W. Ames as a banking office In this way he showed his faith in the future of the town. He took his share of the work and sat at the Board of the village council for a number of years. In 1885 he received the appointment of Indian Agent at Cape Croker, a position which he most worthily filled, and held until 1896. After this date he spent some time in farming and lumbering, and later was appointed Game Warden and Fishery Inspector by the Provincial Government, a pasition he held until he became incapacitated due to a nervous breakdown. It is worthy of mention that although he was a most vigilant official and made many seizures yet he always had the repect of those who broke the law. Last September he went West to live with his sons, and he died on the date already mentioned. In politics he was a Conservative, in religion an Anglecan, and it may be mentioned that he was one of the charter members of the L. O. F. No. 1143. Since writing the above The Echo has learned that the deceased accidentally fell in the Saskatchewan river and was drowned and so far his body has not been recovered.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

If your work is tiring; if your nerves are excitable; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions.

It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.

Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. Try it.

Grey and Bruce Counties

CLIPPED FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES.

Walkerton

Bruce County leads all the Counties of Canada in recruiting. This interesting bit of information was brought back from Toronto on Friday by Judge Klein who was in the City attending the Annual Meeting of the National Service League. The Judge was informed by Dr. Abbott, secretary of the League, that Brigadier-General Hodgins had made the statement that Bruce heads all the Counties.

A very pleasant event was celebrated at the home of Mrs Margaret Rogers, 9 Spruceside Ave., Hamilton, on Monday when her youngest daughter, Miss M., late superintendent of the Berlin Hospital, was united in marriage to Dr. Herbert H. Sinclair of Walkerton, only son of the late Dr. Lachlin Sinclair of this town. After a wedding tour of St. Catharines, Chicago and other points they will take up their abode in Mrs McKillop's large brick residence on Jackson street here.

While in Walkerton attending the Bruce County W. C. T. U. convention, Mrs Geo. Grant of Paisley strolled to the Bond on Friday afternoon to see the trenches, and from there found her way to the C. P. R. station house, where instead of opening the door leading to the waiting room, she mistakingly grasped the knob of the door that leads to the cellar, with the result that in stepping forward she fell down the stair-way, a distance of about eight feet, and landed with terrific force on the cement floor, badly bruising and disfiguring the right side of her face, besides spraining her ankle and wrist. She was removed to the home of Mrs E. M. Stauffer, where she had been billeted for the Convention, and a doctor summoned, who has started her on the road to recovery again.

Walkerton Telescope

The 160th Battalion entrained yesterday for London Camp. The town took a half holiday to see them off, and a great throng, their hearts touched at once with pride and sadness saw our stalwart soldier boys, the pride of Bruce, march to the G. T. R. station and start on the initial stage of the journey which may soon land them on the battle ground of Europe

Everything went like clock work. The baggage cars had been loaded the previous day and practically all the men had to do was to march to the station and board the train. At 8.30 to the tick the battalion left the Armoury grounds followed by scores of autos and a crowd that numbered several thousands. At the station two special trains of twenty-six coaches in all, awaited them and by 9.30 the first train was loaded and away.

The leave-taking began really on Sunday morning, when the battalion drawn up on the Armoury lawn heard a parting message from clergymen of the town. On Tuesday afternoon again on the same grounds, the soldiers were given an official farewell by the citizens of the town and county, Major John Henderson, chairman of the Military Demonstration Committee, who has been fifty years a soldier, presided, and after a few appropriate words of introduction, in which he lauded the 160th Batt. as the finest body of men he ever knew in his experience read the address of appreciation published below while Mr. K M. Taylor, on behalf of the Twenty-Fourth Celebration Committee handed Lt-Col. Weir a cheque for $1400, to provide mess-tents and a recreation tent for the Battalion In replying Col. Weir expressed the grateful appreciation of himself, officers, non-coms, and men of the 160th for assistance and many kindnesses shown them by the Twenty-Fourth committee, the War Auxiliary, Daughters of the Empire, the Town Churches, Ministers, individual citizens and all who helped, He believed he was taking away the finest body of men that would leave Canada, and expressed to the wives, and mothers a keen sense of responsibility for the physical and moral well-being of the men, Mr. John Rowland presented to the two bands a purse of $210 which he had collected during the afternoon. A number of brief but excellent speeches were made by leading citizens for which space will permit only the publication of the speakers' names. These included Rev Fr. Cummings, Rev, Thos. Wilson, Rev. D. A. Walker B. A., Rev. G. C. Rook; M. A. Halliday, C. J. Mickle, K. C. of Chesley; Reeve Douglas of Tara; W. D. Cargill, M L. A. of Cargill; J. J. Hunter of Kincardine and others.

Tara

A bad accident happened near Spence's swamp on Monday afternoon when the automobile in which were Mr and Mrs Sas. Chapman, of Port Elgin, Rev. E. J. Harris of Southampton and Rev. Barker, of Port Elgin, skidded and turned turtle in the ditch. Mrs Chapman was pinned underneath the car but escaped injury, while the three men were thrown clear of the auto, and all escaped injury except Mr Chapman, who had his collar bone broken. The injured man was brought to Tara where he was given medical attention, later being taken to his home in Port Elgin. The automobile was badly damaged.

The Annual Decoration Service of Sauble Lodge No 227, I. O.O. F. was held on Sunday afternoon The lodge, augmented by a number of brethren from Port Elgin, assembled at their lodge rooms at 2.30 o'clock and headed by the Tara band, which was assisted by four players from Port Elgin, proceeded to the cemetery where a large crowd gathered from the town and surrounding country. After the graves of the departed brethren had been decorated a service was held in the open, when Rev. W. S. Daniels delivered a very appropriate address. The band played a few sacred selections during the service. Afterwards the procession reformed and marched back to the lodge rooms, which brought to a close one of the most successful decoration services the lodge has ever held.

Chesley

Only a fair-sized crowd attended the circus in Chesley last Wednesday The wild beast part of the show was no wonderful collection, but the acrobatic performances were much above the average. The sea lions, trapeze work and performances of the elephants were splendid exhibitions. The town council imposed a fee of $70 for license and rent of Victoria Park and it was none too much for the tramping up of the park. The circus manager says he lost money in Chesley. Evidently people are not as anxious to see wild beasts, performing animals and acrobatic stunts as in the days when David Harum's eyes fairly bulged out with astonishment when he was given the price to enter the circus.

The grants from Bruce County to the five High Schools in this country based on the attendance of students outside the II. S. Districts for the year 1915 are as follows: Kincardine $ 2,885.33, Walkerton $1,812.63, Wiarton $1668.48, Port Elgin $1,393, 67, Chesley $1,347,56.

We had a call last Friday from Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture in Alberta, who was in this locality purchasing thoroughbred stock for his big 800 acre farm at Olds. At Bognar in Sydenham Tp., Grey County, Mr Marshall bought a bull for which he paid the sum of $1,000. His ranch is about eight miles from Olds and he keeps three men all the year. As a practical farmer and stock-raiser Hon. Duncan Marshall has brought Alberta to the front and his department is so well managed that in other provinces of Canada, Alta., with its Demonstration farms is a leader in the science of husbandry. On enquiring as to how Elderslie boys were getting along in Alberta, Mr Marshall said that as usual they were making good. Jas. Clements is now assistant superintendent of fairs in the Alberta dept of Agriculture and is doing excellent work. Mr Marshall says he is one of the best livestock lecturers in the West and as a compliment to his ability as a judge at exhibitions he has been selected to judge draft horses at the Washington State Fair to be held in Seattle in August of this year. For the last two years he has done a great deal of this work in Alberta. Donald McEachern, he says is doing his work in the same efficient conscientious way that he always did everything that came to his hand and is second man in charge of the game branch of the department. Speaking of John Blue he says that John has given a great deal of his time to the patriotic Fund association and as Hon. Secretary of N. Alberta has done a great amount of work for the fund both in the office and on the platform and in this cause is one of the most sought after speakers in the province.

SLAVS HOLD BUKOWINA

Entire Crownland in Possession of Russian Forces.

General Brussiloff's Forces Now Occupy Kimpolung and the Capture of 60 Officers and 2,000 Men is Reported—Austrians Have Fallen Back to Defend the Mountain Passes—Southern Advance Slackening.

LONDON, June 26.—The occupation by the Russians of the whole of the Austrian Crown land of Bukowina, rendered inevitable early last Friday by the capture of three vital railway intersections in the northwest, centre and south of the province, became actually complete the same night with the fall of Kimpolung, in the hilly region of the southwest of the Crown lands, not officially announced, however, until Sunday night. With the city and railway station the victors captured 60 officers and 2,000 men, the largest number of prisoners taken by Gen. Brussiloff for some days.

The Russian official report reads: "On the evening of June 23 the town of Kimpolung was taken after intense fighting. Sixty officers and 2,000 men were made prisoner. In the railway station whole trains were captured. With the capture of the towns of Kimpolung and Kuty we took possession of the whole of Bukowina."

The entire north-western frontier of Roumania is now lined with Russian troops. The Austro-Hungarian forces, whose positions in the Bukowina became untenable with the fall of Czernowitz, under the screen of stubborn rearguard fighting, have gradually retreated westward, and are now well in the thick of the Carpathian mountains once more face to face with Muscovite onslaughts against the mountain passes that form the doors to Hungary. The Russian drive toward these passes has already been set under way, with the Czernowitz-Kolomea and Czernowitz-Kuty lines as bases of operation. West of Shtatyn, on the former railway, the Russians Sunday took two small villages, Kilikhof, and Toulokhof.

Gen. Brussiloff's advance in the south is slackening considerably, however, pending the outcome of the battle in Volhynia and Galicia. In neither theatre have his forces been able to resume their advance which carried them far toward Kovel and Brody respectively. On the whole Volhynian and Galician front the battle which began with the Austro-German counter attacks a week ago, is still raging without either side making any substantial gains. Nor have the Teutons succeeded in developing to any noticeable degree the flanking movement heralded by the press of the central empires as the "doom" of General Brussiloff's southern wing.

Russians Make Gains.

LONDON, June 26.—The Petrograd report on operations on the Caucasus front says:

"In the Trebizond sector, in the region of Madouritret Tepe the Turks at dawn on Thursday took the offensive, which our advance guard repulsed with heavy enemy losses, many prisoners being left in our hands. Our aeroplanes successfully bombarded Mamakhatum."

The Constantinople War Office issues this report:

"Caucasian front: On the left wing our troops on June 22, after a bayonet assault captured the greater part of the Russian points of support over a distance of 2,000 yards on the mountain chain north of the Chorokh River. The enemy for some time had stroyed great activity and had fortified this section strongly.

"We also improved our position further to the south. The Russians made great efforts to capture the lost positions, but were repulsed with heavy losses. We captured 500 prisoners and took a great number of tents and quantities of breadstuffs."

Sunday's Petrograd official says:

"We repulsed the Turks Friday night west of Platana. The same night they dislodged us from a convent in the region of Djivizlyk, but finally by our counter-attack they were driven out, and all subsequent attacks by the enemy were repulsed with heavy losses. We also repulsed all Turkish attacks south-east of Dwivizlyk, where we captured a great quantity of arms."

WARSHIPS TORPEDOED.

Italian and French Craft Sunk in Straits of Otranto.

PARIS, June 26.—The Ministry of Marine announces that the Italian auxiliary cruiser Citta di Messina and the French torpedo boat destroyer Fourche have been torpedoed in the Strait of Otranto, at the entrance to the Adriatic.

The Citta di Massina, which was being escorted by the Fourche, was the first victim of the submarine. The Fourche later attacked the underwater boat, which submerged and disappeared. Shortly afterwards the Fourche herself was torpedoed. Almost all her crew was saved.

The Citti di Messina was a vessel of 3,500 tons. She was built in 1910, and carried two 12-centimetre guns and six 7.5-centimetre rapid firers. Before the war the Citta di Messina was a merchantman, but belonged to the Italian naval reserve.

Kitchen Feeding in Berlin.

AMSTERDAM, June 26.—The Lokal Anzeiger says that the municipality of Berlin decided Friday on communal feeding of the population. Preparations for the daily distribution of food to all the people of Berlin have been made, and the first public kitchen will be opened on July 7. It is stated that the whole plan will cost the municipality about $500,000.

ULTIMATUM TO CARRANZA.

Break Between U. S. and Mexico is Now Imminent.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Full responsibility for the attack on the United States troopers by Mexicans at Carrizal has been assumed by the Carranza Government.

Demand for the immediate release of the United States troopers captured in the engagement has been made by the United States Government, with a further demand for an early statement from Carranza as to the course of action he has determined upon.

These are the outstanding features of communications exchanged between the two Governments within the past 24 hours and made public Sunday afternoon by Secretary of State Lansing.

At the White House Sunday night President Wilson was in conference with Chairman Wm. J. Stone, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Representative Flood, of the House Committee on Foreign Relations.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was present at the conference Sunday night by invitation of the President.

The conference lasted an hour. The President told the members of Congress of the contents of the communication received from Carranza Saturday and the Government's reply, and indicated that the situation was serious, and might require him within the next day or two to lay the matter before Congress. Everything, the President indicated, depends now on Carranza's reply to the demand for the immediate release of the American prisoners.

"My personal opinion," said Senator Stone as he left the White House, "is that the situation is extremely serious. For myself, I do not see how we can avoid trouble. I am convinced that Carranza had determined to force the issue, and if that is the case the situation created is extremely acute. I feel now, as I have felt for five years, that the only way the Mexican situation will be solved is for the American army to go in and clean up."

ROBBERS HOLD UP TOWN.

Armed Men Try to Rob Bank at Ville Marie, Que.

HAILEYBURY, Ont., June 26.—A desperate attempt to hold up and terrify a village, wreck and rob a bank in true Jesse James style was attempted at midnight Saturday in Ville Marie, a small village on the Quebec side of Lake Timiskaming, 25 miles south of Haileybury. The attempt was made by seven men, who were masked and one o'clock broke into the Ville Marie branch of the Quebec Bank, shattered the door of the vault and attempted to dynamite and blow open the safe. Two young clerks named Dumonte and Chenier were sleeping over the bank and made their escape in their night clothes. Rushing into the village hotel the Bayview, they gave the alarm. The proprietor, accompanied by two guests all unarmed, on going out in the street found that five men armed with rifles and revolvers were on guard outside, while two others on the inside were making desperate efforts to crack open the safe. Henry De Marche, the manager, lived next door to the bank and on making his appearance with his wife and child was threatened with instant death. A woman putting her head out of a window in an adjoining house was ordered to put out the light, having first been shot at.

With the second explosion in the attempt to blow it open, the safe was blown out of the bank building into a small shed in the rear. Following this explosion flames burst out, and fearing that the light of the burning building would disclose their identity, the robbers left, some say on horseback and others by foot. A little boy twelve years old named Marlow got too close, however, to the robbers who shot him down twice. Both bullets hit him in the ankle and his leg is so badly shattered that amputation may be necessary.

The safe had not been broken open, so the robbers got no booty. The robbers are still at large.

MAY STARVE PRISONERS.

Germany Plans a Systematic Course of Reprisal.

LONDON, June 26.—That Germany is determined immediately to institute the systematic starvation of British prisoners in reprisal for the British blockade is the alarming information reaching here on unimpeachable authority.

The correspondent brought the information to Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, Sunday afternoon. Lord Robert said that he had been greatly impressed by the continued reports of the scarcity of food in Germany and that he trusted that this would not be made the excuse for further attempts to cut down the necessary supply of food for prisoners of war.

"If that should happen," he said, "it would arouse such a storm of indignation as to add terrifically to the bitterness of this the bitterest struggle the world has ever seen.

To Prohibit Meat Consumption.

LONDON, June 26.—According to a despatch from Berne, given out by the wireless press Sunday, Adolph von Batocki, president of the German Food Regulation Board, threatens to make Germany a vegetarian nation until September. He announced on Friday, the despatch says, that he was seriously considering a prohibition upon the consumption of meat for two or three months, and he probably will adopt that course.

German newspapers, it is added, were allowed to report Herr von Batocki's statement, but were forbidden to comment upon it.

FRENCH REGAIN GROUND

They Have Pushed Verdun Lines Back to Thiaumont.

Another German Attack on Le Mort Homme Has Been Repulsed—British Section of Line is Now Point of Interest Where Sir Douglas Haig Reports a Heavy Bombardment Which May Indicate a Drive.

LONDON, June 26.—Some of the ground lost to the Germans in the big assault on Friday was retaken by the French, who have pushed their lines up to the Thiaumont work, west of the Meuse and in the region of Verdun. The Germans penetrated into some houses in the outskirts of Fleury, but the French made some progress against the enemy in the outskirts of this village. The French also repulsed an attack of the enemy in the region of Le Mort Homme.

The Germans intensely bombarded the French lines in the sector of Hill 321, north-east of Forges and Regnieville, and in the Chapitre and Chenois woods.

Throughout the day no infantry action was fought in the Verdun region.

LONDON, June 26.—The British have developed pronounced artillery activity along the part of the Franco-Belgian front they hold from La Bassee canal to the Somme, the Berlin War Office announced Sunday. The British fire continued uninterruptedly all Saturday night.

The report reads: "In the region from south of La Bassee canal to beyond the Somme the enemy developed and continued day and night unbroken, lively activity. He also bombarded Lens and its neighborhood with heavy fire and discharged gas without success over our lines in the region of Beaumont Hamel, north of Albert."

Sunday night's despatch from Sir Douglas Haig does not indicate that the bombardment referred to in the German official report has any especial significance. It merely reports that the artillery has continued to be very active along the whole front and that mutual artillery actions have taken place at many points.

CANADIANS HONORED.

Military Cross and D.S.O.'s Awarded for Gallantry.

LONDON, June 26.—A number of additional Canadians have been singled out for honors. Lieut. Henry Hobbs has been given the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry on many occasions, notably, when after working half an hour under heavy shell fire, he rescued a man from a blown-in dugout. He has since been wounded. Others who secured the Military Cross were: Capt. John Arthur Callum, of the Medicals, attached to the 28th Battalion; Captain Albert Peter Miller, of the 21st Battalion; Lieut. James Auld, of the 16th Artillery; Lieut. Peter Brown, of the 22nd Battalion; Lieut. John Arnold Hackson, of the 29th Battalion; Robert Powell, of the 4th Engineers, and Lieut. George Speer, of the 21st Battalion.

The Distinguished Service Order has been awarded to the following:

Lieut.-Col. Griesbach, 49th Battalion, for conspicuous gallantry and skill in handling his battalion during a heavy bombardment and subsequent attack by the enemy; on another occasion by prompt action and his fine example he was largely responsible for the rescue of several men buried by shell fire.

Captain Evelyn William Uniacke, King Edward's Horse, when a party of the enemy penetrated an unoccupied portion of our trench the captain organized bombing parties, one of which he led himself, though twice severely wounded, he continued fighting till the enemy was driven out.

H. A. Craig, of the Patricias, picked up an enemy bomb which had fallen in the middle of four bombers and threw it over the parapet, where it immediately exploded. He thereby saved many casualties.

Company Sergeant-Major Miles, 49th Battalion, during a heavy bombardment by the enemy, moved from place to place over the open under heavy fire, directing and encouraging the men and rescuing buried men. He has frequently been brought to notice for his bravery.

ANOTHER U-BOAT JOURNEY.

German Submarine on Way to New York, Says Spanish Despatch.

LONDON, June 26.—The mysterious visit of the German submarine U-35 to the Spanish port of Cartagena last week is described by the Madrid correspondent to Lloyds' Weekly News as having as its object the delivery of an autograph letter from the Kaiser to King Alfonso, conveying proposals for peace.

The correspondent also sends an unconfirmed report that another U-boat is on the way to New York with "a peace letter" for President Wilson.

"Spanish papers," the despatch says, "publish a telegram from Cadiz saying an important personage states that another boat is on its way to New York bearing an autograph letter from the Kaiser to President Wilson, and that it is expected there on Monday."

Greece Has Accepted Allies' Demands.

PARIS, June 26.—The Entente powers have been formally notified by the Greek Government of its compliance with their demands. Premier Zaimis, says a Havas despatch from Athens Sunday, has delivered a note to representatives of the Entente, reciting the terms of the ultimatum, and concluding:

"The Greek Government, taking account of their final declaration, hereby agrees to execute integrally the foregoing demands."

NINE-TENTHS of the taxes of Owen Sound are absorbed in uncontrollable expenditure.

SIR Sam Hughes has intimated that most of the soldiers training in London will be taken to Camp Borden.

CHEESE worth $48.382 were boarded at the last meeting of the Listowel Dairymen's Exchange.

IN Kincardine if the water rates are paid in advance there is a discount of 10 per cent allowed, This sounds like business.

SIR Sam Hughes says that Bruce County with its big population should raise three battalions. He may be right. but we are of the opinion that it would be difficult to raise one half of another battalion in this county without conscription.

JULY 1st 1867—1916. There is a whole lot of Canadian history between these two dates. Then there were only four Provinces, now there are nine, we are a nation, prosperous in the highest degree, with national ideals second to none, and no country upon the earth has a greater promise.

THE Rev.W. Ottewell, Springford writes "I think The Canadian Echo is a credit to Wiarton." We are much obliged to our good friend for this boquet. It has been our aim to put The Echo to the front as a Canadian weekly.

Mr W. S. Middlebro M.P. for North Grey has received the unanimous nomination as the next Conservative candidate for that riding.

WHILE in very many parts of Ontario the farmers are not yet through with the seeding, and while in many other parts the heavy rains have destroyed considerable of the seeding that was done, yet in this district, where the land is high and stoney, there has been very little injury. In fact the rains have been the life of the crops and every prospect pleases.

THE Rev. J. A. Barker, Baptist Clergyman at Port Elgin, who was an applicant for the Chaplaincy of the Bruce battalion and failed, has enlisted as a private. Hats off to this gentleman.

THE consumer must be just. He must not kick against the high prices as if the middleman or merchant was holding him up. The merchant is not making the same margin of profit as he made under lower prices. He simply finds that he has to pay a greatly increased price for his goods, and even at this price the goods are difficult to obtain. In order to obtain a living profit he has to charge a price that seems a little stunning.

MR. John Miller, gonler at Owen Sound has resigned. He has held that position fifty-four years, which must surely establish a record.

WE do not think that we are either dying or dead, but it is evident that we are not able to put on a day. However the Fall Fair will be here in due time.

The Echo is anxious to obtain a number of letters descriptive of farm life in the pioneers days. These letters which we would like to see written in a series, to deal with different phases of pioneers life as the hardships, the social life of the early days how the young obtained a education, the church services, etc. This note will no doubt be read by some who can contribute just what we want, and we would be glad to hear from them.

CARD OF THANKS

The Officers and Members of C. O. F. Court Wiarton, No 160.

Gentlemen:

We desire to express to you our gratitude and sincere appreciation of your kindness toward us during our bereavement and to thank you for your beautiful floral offering, also the kindly words of sympathy in your letter of condolence.

Very sincerely,
(Mrs) P. H. Cheadle

We Were Pleased To Do It

EDITOR OF THE ECHO

Dear Sir:

The generous treatment of the Northern Summer School in your issue of last week deserves special thanks from the Summer School management. As Secretary permit me to speak for my colleagues our sincere appreciation of the enterprising announcement given to our school.

From the complimentary remarks that have come to my hearing of your front page I am sure the school will reap the benefit. Already large-minded citizens have been making offers of assistance and showing commendable readiness to co-operate in practical ways to entertain the company we hope to have with us next week. I have every ground for saying that Wiarton will give the Northern Summer School a right royal welcome and that no small share of the credit will be due to the special issue of the Canadian Echo.

Yours truly.
W. W. Prudham

Rev. Mr Drew Honored

At Purple Valley picnic on Wednesday June 14, Mr Drew was presented with a purse of money. The following address was read by Mr Jno Lemckie.

Mr Drew:

Having learned recently that you are about to depart from us, we your friends of Purple Valley and McIver, have taken this opportunity of expressing our sincere regret at your leaving us. We feel that we cannot let you depart with out some small token of remembrance, so ask you to accept this purse of money, not for its intrinsic value, but as a reminder of your friends and of the many good times spent together

Signed on behalf of friends and neighbors.

Mr Drew made a very suitable reply, although taken completely by surprise.

The McLaughlin Buggy

Editor of the Echo.

As I understand a great many misleading statements are being made use of in this vicinity by certain dealers in reference to the McLaughlin Buggy, the following extract of a letter will furnish them as well as the general public with the necessary information.

Sir—

We understand that statements are being made to the effect that there is no difference between the Canada Carriage Co. buggy and the McLaughlin job etc.

We beg to advise you that there is the same difference between these two buggies as there was when the McLaughlin buggy was made in Oshawa. We not only purchased all the material from the McLaughlin Co. both manufactured and unmanufactured, but we took all their contracts as well, and on purchasing the identical material that they would have purchased had they been in business. We appreciate the fact that if we are to retain the McLaughlin trade we must duplicate in every detail the product as sent out formerly from Oshawa,

If you have a customer who doubts this we would be glad if you would give us their names as we can prove to them absolutely that they are getting as strictly a McLaughlin buggy from Brockville as they ever received from Oshawa.

The Late Mrs Morris

There passed away an old resident of the town on June 14 1916 in the person of Mrs Joe Morris, whose maiden name was Rosena Adlaid Godkin. The deceased, who was 76 years of age was born in Leeds County. She was married at the age of 21 to Joseph Morris. She lived on the old farm of her childhood, until 32 years ago, when the family moved to Amabel, and have lived in the town of Wiarton for 23 years. She was an active member of the Methodist Church, and like Dorcas a friend to the poor. Her husband survives her at the age of 83, also 3 children Harmon of Presque Isle, Mrs. F. Buckland of Amabel and Mrs W. J. Root, with whom she has lived for the past three years. She was laid to rest on Sunday in Bay View Cemetery.

To Go On Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Because They Did Her Good

ROCHON, P. Q., JAN. 14th, 1915.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I had frequent dizzy spells and became greatly run down. A neighbor advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve, and he advised me to go on with "Fruit-a-tives".

I consider that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives" and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches—"try Fruit-a-tives' and you will get well". CORINE GAUDREAU.

Gordon Craig

finishes our job here, Herman, and the quicker we are off the better. We got the fellow after you left, Broussard; hit him a bit too hard, it seems, but no one will ever investigate, so it's just as well. Adventurer named Craig, just discharged from the army."

"Where is he?"

"Lying there in the passage behind the door. Have Peters and Sam bury him along with the others and then join us. We'll go aboard."

I shut the door and started down the passage. For a dozen steps it was black as night. Then there was a sharp swerve to the right and a gleam of daylight in the far distance. Already they were at the barrier, and I ran forward recklessly, eager to escape into the open. The way was clear, the floor rising slightly, yet without obstructions. I could hear voices, the pounding of feet behind, and I made desperate effort to outdistance my pursuers. That they were merciless I knew, and my only hope lay in attaining some hiding place in the weeds before they could emerge into the daylight. I thought of nothing else. But as I burst, straining and breathless, into the open hands gripped me from both sides. An instant I struggled to break free, fighting with a mad ferocity, which nearly accomplished the purpose. But they were too many for me. So Broussard's belt was strapped tightly, binding my hands helplessly to my sides, and I was hurled over so that I stared up blindly into the face of the fellow in command. His black eyes were sneering, while the unpleasant smile revealed a row of white teeth.

"Great God, man!" he exclaimed. "You must have the skull of an elephant. Are you actually alive?"

"Very much so," I gasped, defiant still.

"Maybe I finish heem monsieur," questioned Broussard, with knee still planted on my chest. "Then he not talk, hey?"

The leader laughed, with a wave of the hand.

"You take the fellow far too seriously. Let him up. I'll find a way to close his mouth if it ever be necessary. Besides, he knows nothing to do any harm."

Out of the depth of despair and defeat there had come an animating ray of hope—they were going to take me with them. Even as a prisoner I should be near her, would yet be able to dig out the truth.

"You take heem along, monsieur?" It was Broussard's voice. "Zat vat you mean?"

"Certainly. Why not? There's plenty of work for another hand on board. Trust me to break him in. Come! Hustle the lad along, boys. I'll be with you in a minute."

They drove me forward roughly enough. We emerged into an open space, from which I saw the chimneys of the old house far away to our left. The path led onward into another weed patch beyond, down a steep ravine, and then before us stretched the lonely waters of the bayou. Hidden under the drooping foliage of the bank was a small boat, a negro in the stern.

I was thrust in unceremoniously, the three others following, each man ahipping an oar into the row locks. Herman alone remained on shore, scattering the embers of a small fire and staring back toward the house. A few moments we waited in silence; then the slender figure of the one who seemed the leading spirit emerged from out the cane. Herman joined us, the latter taking the tiller, the former pushing off and springing alertly into the bow.

Lying between the thwarts, face turned upward, all I could see distinctly was the black carnauas, although occasionally, when he leaned forward, I caught glimpses of the fellow I believed to be the captain of the strange craft. Our boat skirted the shore, PENDING close within the concealing [illegible] evidenced by overhanging trees. Twenty minutes elapsed ere we were scraping along the side of a vessel of some size.

I was hustled roughly to my feet and bundled aboard. My head still reeled dizzily, and the two men gripping my arms hurried me over the rail so swiftly my first impressions were extremely vague. I knew the sides of the vessel were painted a dull grey, as nearly an invisible color as could be conceived. I recall the sharp sheer of her bow, the clearness of her lines and the low sweep of her rail. Less than 1,000 tons burden, I thought, and then as my eyes swept aloft, and along the decks I knew her for either a private yacht, or tropic fruit steamer.

"First stateroom, second cabin," said a new voice sharply. "Lively now."

"Shall we unloose the ropes, sir?"

"Yes. Fasten the door and leave a guard. Stow away the boat, Broussard. Everything ready, captain."

I went down a broad stairway, shining brass rails on either side, which led to a spacious after cabin. A table extended its full length, already set for a meal, and a round faced negro in white serving jacket grinned at me as the men pressed me between them into a narrow passage leading forward. A moment later I was unceremoniously thrust into a small apartment on my right, the ropes about my wrists loosened and the door shut and locked behind me. For perhaps five minutes I lay where I had been so unceremoniously dropped, weakened by loss of blood and dazed by the rapidity of events. I found it hard to adjust my faculties to this new situation, but I thought it might yet be my privilege to foil these villains and rescue Mrs. Henley. It was my belief she was also on board this vessel. I had no reason to assume this except the wording of Broussard's report, which I had, overheard. But she was a prisoner, and this vessel would be the most likely place for her to be confined. I sat up, my flesh burning, and stared about. The light shining through the single closed port was dim, convincing me the sun had already set. As I got to my feet I could feel a faint throb of the engine and realized we were moving slowly through the water. The glass of the porthole was thick, but clear. I knelt on the berth and looked out, dimly perceiving the shore line slipping past, with an ever broadening stretch of water intervening. Then I sat down helplessly on the stool and waited for something to occur. Escape was impossible.

The man who appeared to be the chief had said he would turn the girl free in New Orleans, where she could do them no harm. New Orleans, then, was doubtless the port for which we sailed. It was clear they meant no personal harm to her, and they would never have brought me on board alive if they had deemed it necessary to otherwise dispose of me. These considerations were, in the main, reassuring, and as I turned them over in my mind I drifted into better humor. Besides, my head ceased to ache.

It was fully an hour after the coming of darkness before I was disturbed. Then the door opened, and the entering gleam of a light swinging in the passage revealed the grinning negro steward bearing a well filled tray. This he deposited in the berth, while applying a match to the lamp overhead. I saw no shadow of any guard outside, but the fellow made no effort to close the door, and I did not move, confident he was not alone.

"Say, George, what boat is this?" I asked.

"Mah name is Louis, sah."

"All right, Louis, then; what's the name of this vessel?"

"She am de Sea Gull, an' a mighty fin' boat, sah."

"So I judge. What is she, fruiter or private yacht?"

"I reckon I don't just know," said he grinned.

"Perhaps then you will inform me where we are bound. I suppose you know that?"

"No, sah; de captain he nebber done tol' me, sah, nothin' 'bout his personal plans. All he done said was for me to bustle eam grub in pans."

The shadow of a man blocked the doorway. He was one of those who had been in the small boat, and I noticed a revolver at his belt.

"That's enough, boy. Come, now, out with you!" he commanded gruffly.

"Never you mind the door. I'll attend to that."

He pulled the door to after the retreating form of the negro, and I heard the sharp click of the latch and then his voice, muffled by intervening wood, ordering the steward aft. There was no appearance of any lock on the door. Probably there was none, as otherwise it would not have been necessary to post a guard. However, this was clearly no time to experiment, and I was hungry enough to forget all else in the appetizing fragrance of the meal waiting. I fell to eagerly, convinced there was a good cook on board and enjoying every morsel. This did not look as though I was destined to suffer, and merely being confined in these narrow quarters for a few hours was no great hardship. Probably the girl was receiving very similar treatment, and as soon as the Sea Gull made whatever port was aimed at we would both be put ashore and left to proceed as we thought best. These people were lawless enough without doubt—the murders already committed were evidence of that—but all they desired, so far as we were personally concerned, was to get us safely out of the way, where we could no longer interfere with their plans. What those plans might be I could merely conjecture, with little enough to guide my guessing. They might be filibusters connected with some revolution along the Central American coast, smugglers or marauders of even less respectability, using the Henley place for a rendezvous. These fellows were doubtless the ghosts which haunted the place and had given it so uncanny a reputation throughout the neighborhood. They would naturally resent any interference, any change in ownership or control. Possibly if they were thieves, as I more than half suspected, they had loot buried near by and were anxious to get us out of the way long enough to remove it unobserved. This appealed to me as by far the most probable explanation. The door opened again, and the guard stood revealed before me in the glare of light.

"The old man wants you," he explained brusquely, waving his hand aft as though specifying the direction. "Come on, now."

I preceded him along the narrow passage. The cabin was unoccupied, the table swung up against the beams of the upper deck, the heavy chairs moved back, leaving a wide open space. The furnishings were rich, in excellent taste. It was a yachtsman's interior. There was but one door, evidence that a single cabin occupied the entire space astern, and I stopped before it, my companion applying his knuckles to the wood, but without removing his watchful eyes from me. A muffled voice asked who was there, and at the response replied:

"Open the door and show him in, Peters, and remain where you are within call."

I entered and found myself upon a plain, uncarpeted deck, the white walls and ceiling undecorated. On one side was a double tier of berths, lockers were between the ports, and heavy curtains draped the two windows aft. Opposite the berths was an arm rack, containing a variety of weapons, and the only floor covering was a small rug beneath a desk near the center of the apartment. This latter was littered with papers, among them a map or two, on which courses had been pricked. Beyond these all the room contained was a small bookcase, crowded with volumes, and a few chairs, only one upholstered. The only person present occupied this, and was seated at the desk, watching me, a cigarette smoking between his fingers. It was the olive hued man of the cellar, the one I had picked as leader, and his teeth gleamed white in an effort to smile. In spite of his skin and dark eyes, I could not guess at his nationality, but felt an instinctive dislike to him, more deeply rooted than before, now that I comprehended how completely I was in his power.

"Take a seat, Craig," he said, speaking with a faint accent barely perceptible. "The second chair will be found the more comfortable. Now we can talk easily. May I offer you a cigarette?"

I accepted it more to exhibit my own coolness than from any desire to smoke, but without other response.

"I trust you have been fairly comfortable since coming on board the Sea Gull."

"As much so as a prisoner could naturally expect to be," I replied indifferently. "This vessel, then, is the Sea Gull?"

"At present—yes. The name is immaterial, so long as it sounds well and conforms to the manifest. However, just now the register reads Sea Gull, Henley, master; 850 tons, schooner rigged yacht."

"You are under steam?"

"Exactly—auxiliary steam power."

"In what trade?"

"Operated for pleasure exclusively," a slight tone of mockery in the soft voice. "A rather expensive luxury, of course, but available all the year around in this latitude."

"I failed to catch the captain's name—yours, I presume?"

He laughed, pausing to light another cigarette.

"Still, it is one you seem fairly familiar with—Henley, Philip Henley."

This statement of his identity, spoken calmly and smilingly, was a surprise.

"You see, Craig," he continued quietly, apparently comprehending my state of mind, "your little game is up. Not a bad plan originally—something of a criminal genius that fellow Neale—but he failed to count on the fact that I was very much alive and fully capable of attending to my own affairs. By the way, what part did the girl play in this little conspiracy? Merely a friend of yours who came along for company?"

"Certainly not!" I replied indignantly. "Have you seen her?"

"Not yet. I preferred coming to an understanding with you first."

"A condition you may not find as easy as you anticipate," I retorted, angered at his cool insolence. "If you are Philip Henley, then the way you are holding prisoner is your wife."

He laughed, leaning back again in his chair.

"Well, hardly. Permit me to state, my dear sir, that I possess no such encumbrance."

"It happens," I contended coldly, "that I have seen the marriage certificate."

"Oh, you have! As much a forgery as some of these other precious documents. You will certainly grant that I ought to know whether I am married or not."

"I made no assertion relative to that."

"What did you assert?"

"That Philip Henley was married and that his wife or widow, as the case may be, is the lady who accompanied me to Carrollton."

CHAPTER XI.

I Change Front.

HE leaned forward, both arms on the desk, his black eyes narrowed into mere slits.

"Oh, I see," finally. "Driven out of one position, like a good general, you have another in reserve. Am I also to understand that you are prepared to submit proof of the death of Philip Henley? By the saints, I am becoming interested."

"Naturally if you claim to be the man. I have not said he was dead, for I do not know. I came down here believing him alive. His wife is almost convinced otherwise. All I am actually certain about now is that you are not the man."

"You are extremely free spoken for a fellow in your condition. You will at least confess that I am master on board this ship, that my word here is law and you are in my power."

"Yes."

"Then why expose yourself and that young woman to unnecessary danger? To be frank, Craig, I sent for you just now in a friendly spirit. You can be decidedly useful to me, and I can afford to pay well for services rendered. Now, wait. Don't break in until I am through. I know who you are and how you originally became involved in this affair. What did Neale and that other fellow, Vail, offer you?"

"Never mind the sum," I said soberly. "I am not altogether mercenary, although I need money. I'll say this, however, and you can take it for what it may be worth. I originally came into this game believing I was doing a kindness to a helpless man who was being defrauded of his rights. There is no necessity of my going into details, but Neale told me an apparently straight story and convinced me my part was a mere form. Later I learned different and promptly quit. I haven't cent in it by way of report to my employer."

"What convinced you of the fraud?"

"A conversation with Mrs. Henley."

"Oh, the woman, hey?" his tone again sarcastic. "Good Lord, Craig, don't be a wooden headed fool. This girl is a mere adventuress."

"You claim still to be Henley?" I asked, stifling my indignation.

"Not only claim, but am. My identity is already firmly established in court. Lawyers have the final papers ready to file."

"You do not in any way resemble the photograph shown me of the man."

At Hymen's Altar

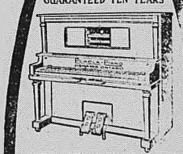
PIERCE—ASHCROFT

A quiet wedding was solemnized at high noon on Monday June twelfth at the home of Mr and Mrs Fred MacKinnon, Humboldt, Sask., when their sister Eva Grace Asheroft was united in marriage to S. Arnold Pierce of Edmonton, Alta. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Caldwell of Westminster Church.



The bride was becomingly attired in a tailored suit of sand colored serge with leghorn hat, and carried a beautiful bouquet of sweet peas and fern. She wore the groom's gift a diamond and pearl necklace set in platinum.

After the wedding breakfast Mr and Mrs Pierce left on a three months trip for Kansas City, California and Pacific Coast points. On their return they will reside in Edmonton.

Among the guests present were Sheriff and Mrs Wallace and Miss Barry of Humboldt, Mr and Mrs Terry (nee Margaret Rutherford) and Miss Winnifred Ewing of Saskatoon, Miss Alice Asheroft of Brandon and Miss Ruby Asheroft of the Provincial Board of Health, Winnipeg

Mrs Pierce is a daughter of Mr and Mrs John Asheroft of Howdenvale and has hosts of friends in Wiarton and vicinity.

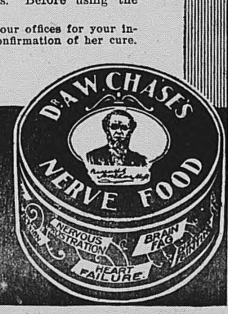
Nervous Prostration



Mrs. Conrad Schmidt, R.R. No. 1, Milverton, Ont., writes: "Two years ago last spring I was run down, had nervous prostration, and was in a terribly nervous condition. I could not sleep or eat, could scarcely count the nights that I passed without sleep, and if I did eat, had sick headaches and vomiting spells. My limbs would swell so badly that it hurt me to walk. I would jump up in bed, awakened by bad dreams. In fact, I was so bad, thought I could not live, and started to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food without much hope.

"It was not long before I began to improve under this treatment, and I can truthfully say it has done me a world of good. It took some time to get the nervous system restored, but I kept right on using the Nerve Food regularly, and gradually gained in health and strength. I have a fine baby boy now. He weighed 12 lbs. at birth, and, though my friends were anxious after the condition I was in, I got over that fine, and now weigh 120 lbs. Before using the Nerve Food I was a mere skeleton."

The original of this testimonial is on file in our offices for your inspection, or you may write to Mrs. Schmidt for confirmation of her cure.

The Niagra Fruit Growers are going to protect the fruit buying public, and their action will be generally applauded and appreciated. Housewives have long suffered from dishonest packing and careless handling and there has never been any distinguishing mark to guide her in her purchases. The Niagara Growers have adopted a label, showing a small map of Niagara Peninsula, each label bearing the number of the fruit. This little map will assure buyers that the fruit is grown in the Niagara Peninsula, and also that the grower has sufficient confidence in his product to put his own number on it. Every complaint can thus be traced. Fruit puyers will do well to profit by this protection and buy only fruit with the label.

The Town Council

Wiarton still continues to be a model town. There was not a single arrest last month. The chief reported that he had dried 350 hose, that some back yards (no names) were still in an unsightly condition, and that the dog taxes were pretty well paid. He recommended that the water be drained off the Ashcroft lot on Gould Street, and that the owners of horses etc be compelled to have the manure put in a box.

A motion was passed requesting the Globe and Mail & Empire to put their papers in sacks by themselves, so that the Postmaster here would not have to open so many sacks to find them. Messrs Schwan and O'Donnell asked the Council to reduce the pool license, they claimed that it is higher here than in other towns. Here it is $100 for the first two tables and $25 for each additional table, while in Owen Sound it is $50 for the first table and $15 for each additional table The Clerk was instructed to write to ten towns and find out what their pool licenses are.

Mr J. L. Siemon told the Council that the Canada Casket Co hoped to arrange everything satisfactory to the town within a few days.

It is probable that the poll tax this year will be $2.50.

If the parties from the Ontario city decide to come here and operate the woollen mill it is likely that the town will exempt them from taxes and give free water.

LIONS HEAD

Born—In Lions Head on June 28, 1916, to Mr. and Mrs. Wardrop, of Dyers Bay, a son.

Mr. J. N. Tuckaberry spent a few days of last week in town on business

Miss Flo Vicars, of Buffalo, attended the wedding of her cousin Mrs. Donald McMillan last week and visited her parents at Cape Chin returning to Buffalo on Saturday last.

Privates A. Rouse, J. Blake, G. Weatherhead and L. Butchart, of the 160th Bruce Batt., London, spent Saturday and Sunday at their respective homes.

Pte John McCallum, of the 160th batt, London, visited his wife and family last week at Cape Chin and also attended his sisters wedding. He returned to the city on Monday.

Mr. W. J. Simpson, of Wiarton, was in town last week on business having brought up a new auto for Mr. William Baker.

Mr. Arthur accompanied by his wife and daughter of Owen Sound, was here on Monday last

Messrs. O'Brien, C. Gatcke and W. Ellis representing their different firms were here on business last week

Mr. Burnet Butchart, of the Royal Bank staff here, spent the holiday in Port Elgin and other points.

Mr. George Butchart, of Tobermory, accompanied by friends passed through here on Monday.

Mr. Geo. Liverance, of Pike Bay, while unloading lumber in town last Friday narrowly escaped being killed when he made a mis-step falling between the horses which became frightened, made a bolt and ran down the street till Currys Corner where they ran against the wire fence which checked them until assistance arrived. When the team turned down the road, the driver who was holding on to the tongue, dropped his hold and allowed the wheel to pass on each side thus escaping injury of any account, except to the horse and harness when they were stopped.

Miss Correll, of Wiarton, is visiting her father here this week.

Lieut E. Pettigrew, of the 160th Bruce Batt., is home on a visit for a couple of weeks. He intends having a sale before going back to London.

The Northern Summer School, a great Success.

Rev. J. A. Jackson

President of the Hamilton Conference, Minister of Hanover Methodist Church, who addressed the Northern Summer School Tuesday evening.

At the present time more than fifty have registered at the Northern Summer School. There are delegates from St. Thomas, Hagersville, Hanover, Chesley, Port Elgin, Owen Sound, Mount Forest, Tara, Durham, Hepworth and the Peninsula.

One bright intelligent young lady delegate is from Alma College, St. Thomas. She was sent here to get an idea of the Summer School for it is something which may become universal.

* * *

The thought occurred to the writer that if the school was interdenominational it would have a larger constituency to draw from and its success and permanence would be immediately assured.

* * *

There is no other place so suitable for a school of this kind as a lake port. The water has a charm to those who live inland.

* * *

The delegates take recreation in the afternoons and it is a very enjoyable recreation, too, none of us would object to it. On Tuesday afternoon they visited points of interest around the town and at Oliphant; to-day they will go in bay racks and visit to Bruce's Cave; Thursday afternoon they will go in autos to Owen Sound, and Friday afternoon they hope to have a joy sail in launches on the bay. They will come back next year, sure thing.

The delegates like to be together consequently the basement of the Methodist Church has been converted into one big dinning-room and Mr. Mouck is establishing an international reputation as a caterer.

The program for the morning is always educational, for the evening it is inspirational. It would surely be a good idea for the citizens to patronize the public meetings in the evening.

* * *

The Rev. Mr. Prudham is the busy man of the School The whole work was largely upon his shoulders, he is here, there, and all over, and when it is through he will likely be ready for a vacation.

* * *

Here is wishing the delegates a happy time together and that they will return next year a hundred strong.

Court Of Appeal

TOWNSHIP OF AMABEL

His Honor Judge Klein will hold the Court of Appeal in the Council Chamber at Wiarton on Tuesday July 25 1916 at 2 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of hearing and deciding appeals against the assessment in the Township of Amabel.

All parties interested will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Allenford July 4 1916.

Walkerton

John Charles Teare, a Bell Telephone lineman of Owen Sound, and Gordon Lloyd, a liveryman of Chesley, were up before Magistrates Jos. Tolton and Robt. Richardson in Walkerton on Tuesday last for illegally selling booze in Local Option Chesley. Hearing, it seems, that a large quantity of the family disturber was being brought to Chesley in readiness for the visit of the soldiers on the Kings birthday, and suspecting that corks would be popping much too freely that day for a dry burg, some Chesleyites notified the Dept. at Toronto, with the result that two spotters were despatched to Chesley for the celebration. On the day of the big pow-wow the spotters met Lineman J. C. Teare in the office of Lloyd's livery stable and purchased a bottle apiece of Seagram's whiskey from the lineman at $1.50 a flask. While the sale was going on one spotter would stand with his back to the door to prevent others from coming in while he wistfully watched his pal purchase the tanglefoot and spring the trap on the illegal booze seller. The following day they claim to have purchased a bottle apiece from Lloyd, the liveryman, himself, and after they had secured the necessary evidence for a trial, License Inspector White was instructed to lay the charges that opened the eyes and lightened the pocket books of the booze dispensers. On the lineman being declared guilty after putting up a strenuous fight to secure acquittal in court, the liveryman threw up his hands and pleaded guilty to an illicit booze-selling charge. The minimum fine of $300 and costs was levied on each of the defendants by way of punishment for illegal dabbling into the booze game. O. E. Klein of Walkerton was the prosecuting lawyer at the trial, while Barrister Spearman of Owen Sound appeared for the defence.

A meeting of the Bruce County Children's Aid Society held here on Thursday last it was decided that the Children's Shelter, which is about to be founded in Bruce, should be established in Walkerton. The County Council at its recent June Session allotted $500 towards founding the Shelter, and will continue largely to finance the institution. Among the places that the Committee has in view as suitable for a shelter is Mrs. Joseph Schnurr's brick house on the cemetery road, which has a large adjoining garden that would help solve the problem of the food supply.

A case of criminal assault was tried before Judge Klein at the Court House, Walkerton, on Wednesday afternoon, the defendant being Charles Calhoun and the plaintiff Samuel Kingston, two Elderslie farmers. It appears that bad feeling had existed between the two parties for a considerable time, and on the first day of June the two men met on the road, Kingston driving in a buggy. Some hot words passed between them and Calhoun tried to pull Kingston out of the buggy, and failing to do so jumped into the buggy and beat up his opponent with his fists so badly that the whole left side of his face was rendered black and blue, his left eye badly discolored and the right side of his face painfully bruised. A doctor was summoned, and the man confined to the house for several days after the beating. Upon hearing the evidence the Judge found the accused guilty of the offence and assessed him $140 00 for the part he played in the affair. Crown Attorney Dixon prosecuted, and Mr. D. Robertson K. C., appeared for the defendant at the trial.

Oswald Lumley, whose father, Mr. John Lumley, is a private in the 160th (Bruce) Battalion, is bound to get to the war. Having twice applied for enlistment and been rejected on account of flat-footedness he went on Thursday last to London and succeeded in passing the medical officer and getting into the ranks of the 168th Battalion. Whatever else may be wrong with his pedal extremities, the lad at least can't be accused of the shirker's complaint—cold feet.

Southampton

A well-known and highly esteemed resident of this district, Mrs W. Swinton was smitten with a stroke of apoplexy on Monday of last week, which left her partially paralyzed on her left side Mrs Swinton has been in poor health since last winter, when she suffered from an attack of pneumonia. Many friends will hope with us that she may recover and again be restored to good health.

Mr John McIntosh of Elsinore has been at the Cottage Hospital for the last week undergoing medical treatment.

Mr Alex McNeil has been up at Golden Valley for a couple of weeks scaling lumber for the Kneehtel Furniture Co.

Mr R. B. Hillmer had expected to be home this week, but he is not recovering as rapidly as hopeful for and is still in the Western hospital, Toronto.

Tara

Preparations are under way for the big Orange celebration to be held here on the 12 of July. From all reports Tara will see one of the largest crowds in its history. Ample provision is being made for the crowd as all the churches will serve meals. The speaking will likely be held in McDougald's Grove.

A serious accident happened to Mr J. J. Fleming, of Derby Tp., on Tuesday of last week when he had the misfortune of having his left leg broken. The accident happened at the barn raising of Mr David Waddell. With several other men Mr Fleming was taking down one of the overlay timbers. It slipped through the rope and struck him on the left leg breaking it a short distance below the knee. Mr Fleming was at once removed to his home, when medical aid was summoned and the fracture reduced. We are pleased to report that Mr Fleming is progressing favorably.

Hanover

Ratepayers in Hanover will be interested to know how the recent grant by the Grey County Council of $96,000 will affect their taxes this year. Dr. Mourns, reeve of Hanover, has figured it out for The Post that the Grey County grant, the Provincial grant of one mill, the cost of recruiting, etc—in fact the cost of the war to Hanoverians this year—will mean a matter of 2 3-4 mills on our taxes.

Mr H. H. Engel and son, Mr Jack Engel, left last week for Philadelphia where they will attend the annual convention of the Associated Ad Clubs of the World. They will also visit New York, Atlantic City and other points and expect to be away about ten days.

Mr Edward Redford of Bentinck sold to Ralph Brunt, cattle king of Hanover, 4 cattle for $455. Ed. is an up-to-date farmer. He always has his goods ready at the right season to demand the high price. Mr Brunt says he has very seldom paid such a high price for four head.

Mr D. E. Weir, C. P. R. station agent here for several years, left this week for the west where he purposes spending several months. He has not been feeling well for some time, and is going west to rest and build up his health. Mr Weir has been a good man here for the C. P. R. and leaves a legion of friends who will wish him health and success in the West.

Nerves Were So Upset Could Not Endure Noise

Neuralgic Headaches and Extreme Nervousness Caused Keenest Suffering—Lasting Cure by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Once the nervous system gets run down everything seems to tend to make it worse. You worry over your condition, are unable to get the required rest and sleep, noises excite and irritate you and the future is most discouraging.

The nervous system does not get the proper nourishment from the food you eat, else you must have something also to rid you out of the run-down condition. You may find that your experience coincides with the writer of this letter and be encouraged to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test.

You will make no mistake in employing this food cure, for, acting as it does hand in hand with Nature, it is bound to do you good.

Mrs. Jas. Jensen, Gwynne, Alta., writes: "About ten years ago I was troubled with severe attacks of neuralgia and nervousness, and was for several months so bad that I could not get a night's rest. I used several medicines recommended by the druggist. My doctor also prescribed, but nothing he gave me brought any relief. Instead I got worse and worse until I could scarcely do anything or bear the least bit of noise. My nerves were all upset.

"My husband read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and got me some. Although I had no faith in it, I began its use, and after a few doses began to sleep well and the neuralgia left me entirely. I used six more boxes and have never had any troubles from neuralgia or the nerves since.

"This is to certify that I know Mrs. Jensen and believe this statement to be true and correct. Fred Freeman, J.P."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Presentation at Zion

Intended for last week

One of those pleasant little episodes which might aptly be termed the spice of life transpired here last Saturday evening when about fifty neighbors and friends gathered at the late home of Mrs Edward Hodgins and family to pay a farewell visit.

After the usual greetings and comparing of views on various topics the company came to order and one of the visitors being asked to give a short address spoke as follows—

Mrs Hodgins and Daughters

We your neighbors and friends have gathered at your home this evening to spend a social hour and say farewell. Your long residence in our midst has offered us many opportunities of witnessing your unstinted hospitality and kind consideration for those with whom you came in contact. We thank you all for this and feel glad that, although you are removing from our immediate neighborhood you are not going so far away that we cannot sometimes meet you and revive old acquaintanceship On behalf of the friends I ask you Mrs Hodgins to accept the present of this easy chair and it is the sincere wish of your friends that a kind Providence may long spare your life to enjoy many hours of restful comfort in its spacious recess. And you young ladies please accept these broaches as a slight token of the esteem and respect we all have for you.

The presentation of the chair to Mrs Hodgins was made by Bobt Evans and the broaches to the three daughters by Miss Minnie Kennedy.

The recipients rose and in suitable words thanked their friends for the gifts Next came a most delicious lunch to which all present did ample justice.

A song was now called for and Alex McCoag responded to the call with "Tho Poor Old wornout Sailor" and as an encore came back with "The Irish Jubill". Artistic touches on the sweet voiced violin in the skilful hands of Thos Stephens still further enlivened the proceedings. As the dawn of the Sabbath was nigh at hand the company rose and sang the National Anthem, said good night and went home

HONOURED BEFROE LEAVING HOME

The Orangemen of Hope Bay availed themselves of the occasion to honour their brother, Mr. George Vogt who is now a member of the Bruce Battalion baud.

Hope-Bay, June 15th. 1916.

George Vogt, Esq.
Adamsville.

Dear Sir and Brother.

On learning of your offering yourself to duty for His Majesty, the King, we, your brother Orangemen, felt a desire to in some way compliment you on taking such a noble stand.

The part that music has played in war in times gone by shows us what a great factor it is. The thrilling strains of martial music have led many onto victory, and we know your part will be nobly done.

The present war is the outcome of wrong teaching, whereiu the Germans have been taught that might is right and that militarism should dominate the world, thus innocent people to-day are at war, not knowing that even their own manhood and liberty is being destroyed. We therefore congratulate you and all British subjects who go forward manfully to uphold the glorious principles of our Empire. may the war soon come to an end but may that mean an honorable peace and and ensure for posterity that peace which will uplift and endure. and if you will kindly except this wristwatch as a token and esteem in which you are held by the brethren of the 693. To Bro. Private Geo. Vogt Signed on behalf of the lodge Fred Weaver W. M.
Geo. Thompson R. S.

Discontinued Its Weekly Edition

After 44 years of publication, the Weekly Mail and Empire has ceased publication. Subscribers to the Weekly will receive the Daily Mail and Empire instead of the Weekly, to the extent of the value they have paid for. In its notice to the public the Weekly Mail and Empire states that since the establishment of the Rural Mail Delivery so many former readers of the weekly have transferred to the Daily that the management did not consider it longer advisable to continue the Weekly edition. It will be remembered that the Globe and London Advertiser cut out their weeklies more than a year ago.

SADLER'S CORNERS

Mr. Michael Sadler Post Master here left here on Monday for a week's visit among friends down south he will visit his once adopted daughter Miss Ida Sadler who is in a home near Chatsworth before he comes back.

Mr. Frank Moore and a party of friends from Lions Head autoed to Mr Tom Robins on Tuesday.

Mrs Philip Adams and son Percy and Grandma Cleveland Adams called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Martins on their way to Spry.

Mr. S. C. Weatherhead made a business trip to Lions Head on Monday.

Mr J. T. Rouse and daughter and Mrs. William Gibson were over to Lions Head on Tuesday,

The people at Miller Lake don't know why we should be asked to pay any part of a drainage Law suit we have no ditch quarrel and the said ditch does us no good.

Mrs. John Rouse of McNairs Corners and Mrs. R. Gibson of Lions Head were visitors at the home of J. T. Rouses on Friday.

Mr. Geo. Butchart of Tobermory, called at Marians on Friday on his way to Lions Head with his auto, Geo. came down to bring his wife, who has been at the head for two weeks under Dr. Hacketts care home with him, as she is about well again.

Most of the parents of the school children here are sorry that the teacher Miss Brackin will not be coming back after the holidays as she is the teacher we have had here for years.

Letter From Scott Davidson

Airdire June 22nd 1916

Dear Echo and Friend

I find my subscription about exhausted, I am sending along enclosed bill $2. to square up again. We look eager to the Tuesday night that brings the Echo out to this district, and we devour all the home news including the report of the old school with it's roll of new scholars. We were well pleased to see the number of lads and a few old chums who enlisted for act of service, also I admire the stand of the Echo concerning the Bi-lingual schools. soon may such folly be wiped out and English be taught in all our public schools, throughout the Dominion. The spring here was very wet and backward, with cold north winds, but since June came in the weather has been ideal, and the crops are coming on fine, at present writing wheat and clover are about a foot high, and as we drove to church Sunday I noticed that most of the fall sown grain was coming out in head, the earlier grain is the better here as we always risk on earlier frost as soon as September sets in, and at all times we risk a pounding hail storm that will usualy demolish the grain on several thousand acres in ten or twenty minutes, (as a neighbour remarked to me after he was hailed out last summer that for bossing the job that hail storm had either German militarism or American capitalism headed right of, just before it hailed he had concluded he was worth about three thousand in grain and a hundred in chickens after it had hailed fifteen minutes he was worth ten dollars in chickens and no grain to feed them) but such is life, and we continually have people moving in and out but few people realize that the country needs us, being settled as it is by foreigners and Yankees it takes all of us few Eastner settlers and the old English men to hold the Province together for either British peace or patriotism and often we feel like writing to you Eastern people as Paul wrote to his fellow disciples to come out and help us. With best wishes for the Echo, and staff and readers.

Scott Davidson.

Good boy Scott, glad to see you are still going to church.—Ed. Echo.

Ethel—Mama seems to like Jack I wonder why?

Fanny—He mistook her for you one night!

TREASURER'S SALE OF LANDS IN ARREARS FOR TAXES.

COUNTY OF BRUCE, TO WIT:

By virtue of a warrant issued under the hand of the Warden of the County of Bruce and the Seal of the said County, bearing date the 24th day of June, A.D. 1916, and to me directed, commanding me to levy upon the several parcels of land hereinafter described for the arrears of taxes respectively due thereon, together with all costs incurred, I hereby give notice that pursuant to the Assessment Act, R.S.O., and By-law 357 of the County of Bruce, designated "A By-law to divide the County of Bruce into three Districts for the purpose of tax sale of lands," I shall, unless such arrears of taxes and charges are sooner paid, proceed to sell by public auction so much of the said lands as may be necessary for the payment of the said arrears of taxes, costs and charges thereon, at the following mentioned time and place for each of the several districts mentioned in the aforesaid By-law:—

Editorial

Many taxes safe will be 35 mills, there are others.

The temperance forces have organized to enforce Prohibition in North Grey.

The County assessment of Keppel $1,108,885, and of Owen Sound $4,000,000.

Southampton is indignant at the Grand Trunk because they could not obtain a special for the 12th of July.

The Board of Education, Listowel advertised for two teachers for the high school and had seventy-seven applications.

THE loyal subjects of Canada are about tired of reading what Armand Lavergne says about the war. If the government would give him a hint to shut his mouth, or be prepared to answer charges that surely can be preferred against him, their course would be approved by the Canadian people.

How about your boulevard, is the grass cut yet, are the weeds flourishing on it? Now when you read this to night, just take a look out your window, and if the grass and weeds are still standing then have some pride in your property and in the appearance of the town, take a scythe and a hoe, and you will sleep more comfortable.

CANADIANS have not had as many opportunities to cheer during this war as they have wished, but it now looks as if these times are coming. In the first five days 5,000,000 shells were dropped on the enemys lines, which cost $125,000,000. This shows the gigantic task ahead of the allies, and we can now understand why two years have been spent in preparations.

EASTNOR COUNCIL

The seventh session of the Eastnor Council met in the town hall Lions Head on Friday June 30th 1916 at 10 a. m.

Reeve in the chair members all present.

Hewton and Landon that the minutes now read be adopted as correct.

Communications and bills were taken up and disposed of.

Speare and Hewton that council adjourn one hour for dinner.

Council resumed business at 1 p.m.

A Deputation from Hope Bay waited on the council re the readjustment of school sections 3, 4, 7, considerable discussion took place and the matter was apparently left to be settled by arbitration.

Landon and Hepburn that W. Juck be instructed to clean out drain on north side of 15th side road from 2nd con., west and north to 1st con. west

A petition was presented by the rate payers in Fern creek and angle ditch schemes under by-law 417 to 418 re an audit of these schemes and and the matter was referred to the township solicitor.

Landon and Hepburn that we ask the township solicitor's advice re-audit on Fern creek and angle ditch schemes.

A number of rate payers waited on the council as to obtain relief from the water lying on their lands and the situation was looked into with the object of something being done.

Hepburn and Landon that orders to the amount of $397.25 be issued on treasurer and paid.

Speirs and Hewton that this council now adjourn to meet again on August 4th at 10 a. m.

Masons Attend Service

"The Power of an Ideal" was the theme of a most brilliant sermon preached in the Presbyterian Church, Hepworth, Sunday, by the Rev. Mr. Mathieson, Allenford, who had consented to preach to the Masons on that day. By kind invitation from the lodge in Hepworth quite a number from Wiarton and Tara were present and joined with them in the service. Of Mr Mathieson's sermon there was only one opinion, it was most appropriate and certainly one of the most thoughtful the members of the craft have ever had the pleasure of hearing, and the residents of Allenford can congratulate themselves upon having one of the best pulpit men in Ontario.

The Strawberry Festival held Dominion Day under the auspices of the Ladies Aid was a success in every way, The large crowd gathered from Purple Valley, Adamsville, Wiarton, Oxendon and other places went in for a good time. Mr. H. Lemcko took 28 on the launch from Oxendon and back. The sports were very amusing. The Ladies base-ball match was 8 to 4 in favor of the unmarried ladies Mr. Robt. Gatis of Oxendon umpired the game and as he is unmarried and attractive no one wondered at his decisions. Some of the races were specially good. Soda Biscuit contest, Wheel-barrow, 3 legged, obstacle, and c. Every "Jack had his Jean", Proceeds $128 00, Mr. and Mrs. Carlile's beatiful lawn was an ideal place for such a gatherig.

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema—and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning — as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

Gordon Craig

"A fake picture. We have known something of Neale's plans from the first."

"Is the woman on board?" I questioned. He hesitated just an instant.

"Yes."

"Will you have her brought here?"

He walked across the cabin twice, turning the proposition over in his mind. Apparently concluding that the ordeal might as well be over with first as last, he opened the door and gave an order to Peters. Then he returned to his seat at the desk.

We both arose to our feet as she entered, glancing about her curiously at the rather strange surroundings, then stopping irresolutely, apparently recognizing neither of us. Suddenly the light of recognition leaped into her eyes and she took a quick step forward.

"Mr. Craig—you here? Why, I can hardly understand. Were you made prisoner also?"

"I suppose that to be my status, although I hardly know," I answered, yet unable to refrain from accepting the extended hand. "I presume you know this person?"

She swept my face with a swift, questioning glance and then looked beyond me at the man standing beside the desk.

"No, I do not," slowly. "I have no remembrance of ever seeing him before."

"Is that not rather strange," I asked, steeling myself to the task, "after

"You'll learn yet what the Sea Gull is."

asserting that he was your husband? He is the owner of this vessel—Philip Henley."

"You are not Philip Henley," she said firmly. "He is my husband."

The smile widened, revealing the cruel, white teeth.

"I expected heroics. It was hardly to be supposed that you would confess your fraud at once and—before your lover."

She shrunk back, her hands still extended.

"My—my lover"—

"Now stop!" I broke in, every nerve tingling as I stepped between them. "Another insinuation like that and you will learn what I can do. You may be captain of this boat, but you are alone with us now, and I can kill you before you could utter a cry. I will if you dare insult her again."

He reeled back against the desk, although I do not think I touched him, and his hand sought an open drawer. I knew him instantly for a coward and gripped his wrist, hurling him from me half across the room. He gasped a bit, rubbing his bruised wrist, his eyes shifting to the closed door as though contemplating an alarm.

"There is no use going off at half cock, Craig!" he snarled. "I didn't mean any insult. And I'll get you for that some time. You'll learn yet what the Sea Gull is."

"No doubt." I coincided, tired of his threats and awakened to the fact that this quarrel was not likely to help our chances. "But for a few minutes it will be worth your while to listen to me. I am not defending this woman from anything but unnecessary insults. If she has deceived me I want to find it out. If you are Philip Henley, as you claim to be, you must have evidence to prove it. Convince me that her assertions are false and you will not find me unreasonable."

"Gordon Craig, do you mean"—

I turned to her, steeling myself to look into her appealing eyes.

"I have been honest with you from the beginning," I interrupted abruptly. "Now, if I discover that your statements are false, the inducements are all the other way. I am a soldier of fortune."

Henley laughed, the sound grating harshly on my nerves, yet I made no movement of protest as he stepped silently back to his desk. I was no longer afraid of the fellow, even although he might have a weapon concealed in one of the drawers, for I knew I had unwon his fangs. This open avowal on my part was sufficient to convince him of his error that I was concerned only with my own interests. His words confirmed my judgment.

"Well said, my man. Now we begin to understand each other. Of course I have the proofs. I would be a fool to sit in such a game without a winning hand. Sit down, both of you, while we talk this over. There is no reason why the three of us should not be friends, provided you are sensible."

"But—but I am his wife," she panted to me indignantly. "Philip Henley's wife. I—I showed you our certificate."

"A fake, a forgery," asserted the other roughly, before I could find voice. "You had it framed up all right, if you had never run across me. Show me the paper."

"I cannot, for it is not here. I placed it in my valise back at that house." She stepped forward with hands held out toward me. "But you know—Gordon Craig, you know. I could not have forged that. I had not time; no information which would have led to such an act. You tell him so."

"I hardly think he will, madam," returned the captain shortly, evidently feeling it better not to let me speak. "And there is no use going on with this any farther. Answer me a question of two, that is all. When did you first tell Craig you were Philip Henley's wife?"

I clinched my hands at the bewildered embarrassment in her eyes.

"It was after we came here, when I was frightened, and felt that I must confess the truth. I—I had begun to trust him."

"Oh, indeed, and you failed to tell him at first because you did not trust him."

"Partially that—yes. Although I do not think the name Henley was even mentioned during our first interview. I am sure I did not realize it was my husband's father who was dead until later."

"Exactly; you picked up a strange man on the street, agreed to go off on a criminal mission with him, and now expect us to believe you perfectly innocent of any wrong intent."

"That will be enough," I interrupted, unable to remain quiet any longer "The motives of the woman and how we chanced to meet are no concern of yours. If you are Philip Henley, prove it, and let it go at that. I have told you plainly enough where I stand."

"Just as you say, Craig," affecting an easy good nature. "That is perfectly agreeable to me. However, as it makes no difference what the late Mrs. Henley thinks, we will dismiss her from the case and settle the affair quietly between ourselves. I have got a proposition which will interest you." He touched a button, and I heard the sharp tingle of a bell outside. Almost instantly the door in the cabin opened. "That you, Peters? Conduct the woman back to her stateroom, lock the door and bring me the key."

He bent forward, searching for something in a pigeonhole to his right, and I caught her eyes, touching my lips with my fingers to signal silence, while an inclination of the head told her to go without resistance. The swift change of expression on her face proved her instant comprehension, as, without uttering a word of protest, she turned and disappeared. Peters returned with the key. Henley dropped it into his pocket.

"That will be all," he said. "You can go."

As the door closed again behind Peters, the fellow rose to his feet and held out his hand. "You are the kind I like, Craig," he said cordially. "At first I had my doubts about you and no doubt have been harsh. Did you see her face when you first sided in with me? She wilted completely. Well, that will make the rest easy. Sit down again, and I will explain what I want you for. The legal papers which absolutely establish my identity as Philip Henley are in the hands of lawyers who represent me at Carrollton. The case will not come up for adjudication for several weeks yet," speaking slowly and with careful choice of words, "but my contention as heir to the property is thoroughly established. It had to be, for, as you know, the judge's son had been away from this neighborhood for years, practically ever since boyhood. He was almost unknown to the local inhabitants, even to the servants. He was even reported as being dead. This state of affairs made identification the most important thing to be considered. Consequently all documents bearing directly on that point are at present out of my reach. You understand?"

"Yes; only you must have retained something to substantiate your word."

"Precisely. I was coming to that. I have letters from my father which should be sufficient. You have seen Judge Henley's writing?" and he handed me a half dozen missives. They were without envelopes, each beginning simply, "My Dear Son," relating principally to local conditions on the plantation, and occasionally expressing a desire for the wanderer to return and assume the burden of management. That they were in the crabbed and peculiar handwriting of the old judge was beyond all question, and the dates covered several years. I read them through carefully, puzzled by their contents.

"There are no envelopes?"

"No; I never keep them—why?"

"Only that no name is mentioned; they begin all alike. 'My Dear Son.'"

"I never thought of that," he admitted, simulating surprise, "but can supplement by showing you this picture, taken three years ago at Mobile. Of course you will recognize myself, but may never have seen a photograph of Judge Henley."

"I never have."

"Well, that is his likeness, and there are those on board who will identify it. Does this satisfy you that I am what I claim to be?"

In truth it did not, for I would have believed nothing in opposition to the positive statement of the woman that he was not Philip Henley. Yet under other conditions—divorced from what I knew—the letters would be conclusive. Were they really addressed to him or had he stolen them? If the latter, then how had he succeeded in getting his picture on the same plate with Judge Henley's? Aware that even the slightest hesitancy might awaken suspicion, I answered quickly

"It would seem to be unanswerable. What hurts my pride is to have been made such a fool of."

"That's nothing, Craig. We have all had that experience. I stand ready to give you a chance now on the winning side. There will be more money in it for us both. What do you say?"

"I should prefer to know more about your proposition."

"It has nothing whatever to do with the Henley matter. That is practically settled already, so you will not be further involved with the girl."

"You would oblige me by leaving her name out of the discussion then," I interposed coldly.

He chuckled, well satisfied with his diplomacy.

"We cannot obliterate her entirely. Pretty enough to be useful, too, I imagine, if she can ever be brought to view this affair from the right angle." I gazed directly into his eyes, barely able to keep from throttling him.

"Drop it," I said sternly. "The girl is to be left alone if I have any part in your scheme. Now I want to know what is expected of me. May I ask questions?"

"Certainly. Fire away."

"Where are we bound?"

"Spanish Honduras," lazily, but spreading out a map and tapping it with his finger. "Puerto Cortes, if we can make that port safely; if not, then somewhere along the coast between there and Truplilo. There will be signals."

I leaned forward, startled out of my self restraint.

"Honduras! Good Lord! What are you—a filibuster?"

"Hardly," with a short laugh. "That is too dangerous a job and not money enough in it. I prefer to do my revolting through others and cop the swag. That's the safe end of the game. It happens to be Honduras just now; I have been equally interested in other downtrodden countries. In truth, friend, I am a patriot for revenue only."

"You mean you furnish arms?"

"For a suitable consideration, yes. In strict confidence I will state that securely packed away in the hold of the Sea Gull, largely in boxes labeled machinery, are 20,000 rifles, six rapid fire guns and a sufficiency of ammunition for a small army. Once safely landed, the profits of the voyage will total $150,000 gold."

"You mean to retain the lady on board?"

"Unless she prefers to jump overboard."

"And what have I to do with all this? You said you had use for me—what use?"

CHAPTER XII.

I Join the Sea Gull.

"YOU chance to be the very sort of man I need. The devil could not have sent me a better," he said, with some earnestness. "You are an American soldier, the best drilled men in the world for irregular service. You can understand that [illegible] I can keep those fellows down there fighting. The more I will sell. Good; that is part of my business. And the better they are drilled the longer they will keep it up. That is what I want you for—to help make that mob of rags into an army. You can do it, and I am willing to pay the price."

"I perceive your point," I said at last, facing him. "But what is there in it for me?"

"A good round sum," he replied. "More than you ever made before, I warrant, not excepting the promises made you in this Henley will case. We'll talk the details over later."

"Who is responsible for my pay?"

"See here, Craig, the case stands like this. The revolutionists down there asked me to find them a competent drill master, and they will pay royally. They've got the money, too, seads of it. There will be no trouble on that score. Besides, I need a reliable man ashore to look after shipments. We have to land our goods in a hurry, you understand, at night, without checking up. I can afford to hand you something pretty nice on the side to assure myself a square deal."

"It looks good," I confessed, but still hesitating. "Only I shall have to have it in writing and more in detail."

"We'll talk that over in the morn-

"I perceive your point," I said at last.

ing; it's late now. Take the third stateroom, starboard; it's all ready for you."

"Then I am no longer to consider myself a prisoner on board?"

"Certainly not. Practically, you are one of us."

"And I have the freedom of the deck?"

He smiled grimly, gazing intently at me.

"That is safe enough, I reckon, even if I questioned your interest in this adventure. There must be ten miles of water already between us and the coast. There are no limits on your liberty, but I wouldn't advise your going forward at present, not until the men understand the situation. They're a hard lot."

"Revolutionists?"

"No; plain New Orleans wharf rats, the scouring of the seven seas."

"Who is first mate—the German?"

"Yes; Herman; a fine sailor. Was with the Hamburg people until he had a wreck. The creole Broussard is second, and two of them together could tame a cargo of wildcats."

I took his hand, feeling the sinewy grip of his lean, brown fingers, and turned to the door. The single lamp in the main cabin was turned low, only faintly illuminating the interior. In the quiet I could feel the movement of the vessel and realized there was some sea on, although the engines were being operated only at half speed. This seemed odd if speed was desirable, as I supposed it must be on a voyage of this nature. I was not in the least sleepy and sank down in the first chair to think, my eyes on the captain's door.

What Henley meant to do with the girl was problematical—I had not thought to ask—but he either intended putting her ashore in Honduras or else holding her prisoner on board until the Sea Gull returned north. Either contingency was bad enough, and the suspicion flashed suddenly across me that the final decision would depend on how kindly she might receive the attentions of the captain. Nor did I question the result. I had not known the lady long, but in that brief time our relations had been sufficiently intimate to yield me a good insight into her womanly character. There would be no yielding, no compromise.

I felt my teeth lock, my hands clinch in sudden anger.

I may have remained there for a quarter of an hour, motionless, thinking over every incident. No one disturbed me. The captain was still in his stateroom, where once or twice I imagined I heard him pacing the floor. The steward had apparently retired for the night, although it was not late, as a glance at my watch proved. My eyes traced the doors on either side, ten altogether, each plainly numbered, and I opened the one assigned to me and glanced within. Except that it was more commodious and contained a washstand at one corner, it did not differ greatly from the other forward where I had been held [illegible].

I wondered which of those others might be him and passed silently from door to door, vaguely hoping for some sign of guidance. They were all tightly closed, and I dare not try the locks, as I was certain one, at least, of the under officers would be sleeping below.

Big Victory Has Been Won on Western Front.

Battle of the Somme Extending Over a Front of Twenty-five Miles Has Resulted So Far in the Capture of 50 Square Miles of Territory, 10,000 Prisoners, and Twelve Towns and Villages.

LONDON, July 3.—A great Allied offensive was inaugurated Saturday morning on both sides of the River Somme. British and French launched their assaults simultaneously on a front of about 25 miles and captured the first line of German positions on the entire front attacked.

The net result is as follows:

|---|---|
| Prisoners captured..... | 10,000 |
| Villages captured..... | 12 |
| Terrain captured, sq. miles.. | 50 |

The Battle of the Somme marks the opening of the Franco-British offensive, long expected as a critical if not the decisive stage of the war.

The Entente allied forces are sweeping forward along a 25-mile front. The French already have taken about 6,000 prisoners, and the British over 4,000, while the allied lines have enveloped within the last 24 hours nine villages and 50 square miles of French territory held until now by the Germans.

The intense bombardment of the last four days was the signal for an advance over these level fields, beginning at 7.30 o'clock yesterday morning. The Allied artillery then lengthened the range so as to shut off all communication between the first German line and the German reserves in the rear. This made it impossible for the Teutons to utilize their perfect organization for the shifting of troops and for the bringing up of reinforcements. It is thought by French military observers that the Germans miscalculated the intentions of the Entente Allies and expected the attacks further to the north.

The villages which the French captured in the first sweep include Dompierre, Becquincourt, Bussus, and Fay, and these and towns taken by the British—Fricourt, Montauban, and Mametz—were all found to have been strongly fortified by the Germans.

The Allies, profiting from their experience in the war, quickly threw up strong earthworks around the villages thus taken in order to protect them against counter-attacks. It was not before night, however, that the Germans were able to deliver any counter-attack. This was centred against the French position on the outskirts of Hardecourt, and it was repulsed with heavy losses.

South of the Somme the French have forced their way into the second line of German entrenchments at a number of places and have captured the village of Frise and the Meresu-court wood, according to an official statement issued by the French War Office Sunday night.

The War Office gave out the following statement Saturday night:

"An attack was launched north of the River Somme Saturday morning at 7.30 o'clock in conjunction with the French. British troops have broken into the German forward system of defences on a front of 16 miles.

"The French attack on our immediate right is proceeding equally satisfactorily.

"Heavy fighting continued all day between the Rivers Somme and Ancre, and north of Ancre to Gommecourt, inclusive. The fight on the whole of this front still continues with intensity.

"On the right of our attack we have captured a German labyrinth of trenches on a front of seven miles to a depth of 1,000 yards, and have stormed and occupied the strongly-fortified villages of Montauban and Mametz.

"In the centre of our attack on a front of four miles we have gained many strong points, while at others the enemy is still holding out, and the struggle on this front is still severe.

"North of the Ancre valley to Bommecourt, inclusive, the battle is equally violent, and in this area we have been unable to retain portions of the ground gained in our first attacks, while other portions remain in our possession.

"Up to the present over two thousand German prisoners have passed through our collecting stations, including two regimental commanders and the whole of one regimental staff.

"Yesterday, in spite of a high wind, a large amount of successful work was done in the air. An important railway depot was attacked with powerful bombs. A large number of other bombs were dropped on depots, railway junctions, batteries, trenches, and other points of military importance in the enemy's lines.

"Considerable aerial activity occurred to-day during the battle, but full details have not yet been collected. Our machines attacked a railway train on the line between Douai and Cambrai. One of our airmen descended to below 900 feet, and succeeded in dropping a bomb on trucks, which exploded. Other pilots saw the whole train in flames, and heard further explosions."

Sunday night's report reads:

"Heavy fighting has taken place to-day in the area between the Ancre and the Somme, especially about Fricourt nd La Boisselle.

"Fricourt was captured by our troops about 2 p.m., and remains in our hands, and some progress has been made east of the village.

"In the neighborhood of La Boisselle the enemy is offering stubborn resistance, but our troops are making satisfactory progress. A considerable quantity of war material has fallen into our hands, but details are not available.

Several Towns Have Fallen Into Their Hands Near Kolomea.

Nearly Fifteen Thousand More Prisoners Have Been Captured, and Advance on Lemberg is Proceeding With Great Rapidity—Russians Are Aiming to Take Town of Stanislau.

LONDON, July 3.—The Russian offensive continues to make progress in Galicia. Petrograd claims the capture of several towns south of Kolomea, the important railway junction, which is the key to Lemberg. It also reports the occupation of fortified posts in the foothills of the Carpathians following the repulse of an Austrian counter-attack north-west of Kimpolung. The capture of 14,574 more prisoners is recorded, bringing the total number now up to 217,000.

Berlin claims that the battle in progress west of Lutsk for the last week is now developing favorably for the Germans. The capture of Russian positions on the Styr south-west of Sogul is also claimed. Troops of Cossacks already harassing the flank of General von Bothmer's army have been repulsed.

Semi-official reports from Vienna deny indignantly the Russian claims of the capture of 214,000 men and great numbers of cannon. They point out that had the losses been as Petrograd claims the Austrians would not have a single man left on the Galician front; death and wounds would have accounted for the rest.

Instead, it is claimed that the Austrian losses amounted to between 10 and 20 per cent. instead of the 25 per cent., which has been not an unusual figure in other operations of the war.

The advance of the Russians from Obertyn, which was captured Friday, indicates that their plan is to capture the important town of Stanislau, about fifteen miles west and slightly north of Thumacz, and well behind the present Austro-German centre front on the Strypa. The capture of Stanislau would mean that this army must either retreat rapidly or be surrounded when the Russians push northward, cutting it off from its supports in the rear.

The fierceness of the Russian attacks near Thumacz indicate that their objective is to force the retreat or secure the capture of this army, which has effectively barred the progress of the Russian forces further north toward Lemberg.

Further Russian repulses in the region of Lutsk, south-east of Kovel, are reported in the official German statement.

HURLED OVER PRECIPICE.

Turks Are Bayoneted by Russians in Rear Attack.

PETROGRAD, July 3.—The Russian official of Sunday reports succeeding on the Caucasus front. East of Plantana a chain of mountains which had been strongly fortified by the Turks was captured in a brilliant attack. The Russians also drove the enemy beyond the River Sameoon Darassi. The abandoned positions were found full of Turk corpses.

In the direction of Gumischlor the Turks in an attempt to advance to the north were repulsed and driven back to their trenches. In the direction of Baiburt the Russian advance guards took the Turks in the rear during the night on a height in the region of Vartanis, and in a bayonet attack hurled them over a precipice. The Russians returned safely.

Pressure by important enemy forces is recorded in the Kering region in the direction of Bagdad.

Barnardo Youth Killed Farmer.

SIMCOE, July 3.—Robert Henry Beecher, a Barnardo boy, 16 years of age, is in jail here on a charge of killing John Simmons, a farmer at Forestville, 18 miles south-west of Simcoe, Sunday afternoon. The youth has lived for seven years with Miss Ida Carr, who owns a farm at Forestville. Miss Carr had engaged John Simmons to work the farm for her. Sunday afternoon after returning from church Simmons and young Beecher went out to practice shooting with a 22 rifle. Miss Carr declares that an altercation arose between the two and that Simmons was shot when he attempted to take the rifle from the boy. He died instantly.

LONDON PAPERS WARY.

They Are Not Sure That Battle of Somme is the "Big Push."

LONDON, July 3.—The London papers in their editorials deal with the situation on the British front in somewhat reserved fashion, some of them pointing out that it is not yet known whether this is really the long-awaited "big push" or only another feint in greater force than any of the previous attacks.

The Graphic remarks: "Our bombardment is still being maintained along the whole front, and the enemy does not know whether we may not at any moment rush another stretch of line. The necessity of sending adequate reinforcements to cope with the situation may necessitate the Germans abandoning the enterprise against Verdun."

The Express says: "The war has entered a fresh and probably the last phase. Our hopes may well be high, but our patience must continue."

The Daily News says: "The fact that Germany has lost the offensive does not mean that she is not still a formidable foe. We cannot tell what her temper may be under the shadow of defeat—whether she will fight to the last ditch, or seek to save the utmost from the wreckage."

It should be encouraging to learn that parties who have been driving autos over different parts of this province, say that the roads in this district are the best that they strike, during the past few years there has been considerable money spent on the roads on the Peninsula and the result apparently are the most satisfactory.

FRUIT PROSPECTS—An official circular says; In the Georgian Bay district apple trees are in a good condition. The fruit has set well and the weather is favourable. There is some danger of the trees being over loaded and the Fruit consequently small. This danger may be offset by a heavy drop in the near future. Very little spraying is being done In Western Ontario considerable scab is showing and there is a prospect of much damage from this source. The crop will be good whore spraying has been thorough. Between Toronto and Hamilton there will not be more than a fifty per. cent crop. Baldwins give best promise; spies and greenings light, scab is prevalent. Some well drained orchards promise a fair crop.

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich the blood, it changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong and active.

Bruce Batt Has Them All Guessing.

Bruce Herald

News from London states that the 160th (Bruce) Battalion has all the other forces on the grounds guessing, not only for the fact that it is the only one over strength of the eleven battalions comprising military district No 1, but also that it has the most complete equipment in every way of any force at camp, thus showing that Bruce not only sent the largest number of men to London, but that she has provided her boys with more comforts and conveniences than any other county in Western Ontario. Bruce is sure getting some fine compliments down here, and Col. Weir is acting Brigadier for the Brigade composed of Bruce Lambton, Kent and Oxford. The Bruce camp is located about a quarter of a mile from Wolseley Barracks, and is known as Grosvenor Camp. The grounds are up on a slight elevation, and, with good soil, makes a dry camp. The messing tents, purchased by the Walkerton 24th of May Committee, are all in a row, and after them is the cook house which is the admiration and envy of all other camps. This cooking station is 80ft x 20ft, with cement floors, taps and sinks, and has fifteen up-to-date ranges of the hotel-kitchen type, All cooking is done by gas furnished by the London Gas Co. The convenience of the cook's quarters must be seen to be appreciated and will be always remembered as the gift of the people of Chesley. Close by is the bath house, where the boys can get a hot or cold bath, or shower at any time day or night. The Quartermaster's stores are situated adjoining the messing stations, and anything required from him can be obtained on a moment's notice. The busy spot, of course, is the canteen, a dry one at that, but when a whole camp is under quarantine for measles, ice cream, watermelon, or any other variation is a welcome change. The camp is situated within a quarter of a mile from the street car lines, which makes it easy to go to and from the city. Generally speaking there is no time for the soldiers to go down town except in the evenings, and as baseball, football and lacrosse occupy their attention, a good percentage of the boys are in camp all the time. The hotel regulations in London are now the same as they were in Walkerton, no sales of anything except beer or wine between 2 and 8 p. m. The Daylight Saving bug is in force in London and the hotel clocks were pushed ahead one hour, making the time from 6 to 9.

The Northern Summer School

Sunday was "the great day of the feast" It was the big day for the Northern Summer School, an institution which has assumed life in a very vigorous manner, and has come to stay. There is every reason to suppose that next summer the attendance will be easily one hundred On Sunday evening the Rev. Mr. Prudham wished to thank all who had contributed to the enjoyment of those attending the school and who had assisted in making it a success. First he thanked The Canadian Echo for its special page in a recent issue, which had greatly assisted them, the farmers who had driven them to Oxendeu where they had seen Bruce's Cave, Mayor Baines and the other auto owners who had taken them to Owen Sound, those who had taken them down the bay in launches, Mr McNeil whose rose gardens they had visited, and all the homes where they had been entertained, and the post office for courtesies. It is not every day said Mr. Prudham, that we have one of the big men of the church with us and he took pleasure in introducing the Rev. Dr. Albert Moore, the head of the Moral and Social Reform movement in connection with the Methodist Church. His theme was carrying religion into daily life and he held the close attention of his audience for upwards of an hour. His sermon was replete with illustrations, and as he has had a wide experence these illustrations were most interesting when he told how a boot black had given his shoes a good shine in New York and had done his job well because he was a Christian and how attending a Summer School had stopped two girls from quarrelling when they washed dishes. This was carrying religion into life.

North Keppel Man Wounded

OWEN SOUND

Rev. Robt, Barclay pastor of the Spring Bay Baptist church, has enlisted as a private in the 227th Battalion for overseas service. A special appeal was being made throughout the Manitoulin Island by Major Hurill second in command of the 227th and Mr. Barclay realizing the urgent need of men offered for service. He has several times before offered for service in any capacity, but had been refused on account of poor eyesight, A few years ago Mr. Barclay was a resident of Sydenham and later was a member of the Owen Sound Baptist church. His church has granted him leave of absence and it is expected that Mrs. Barclay will remain at Spring Bay to carry on the work there.

A cable yesterday to Mrs. Malone, announces the fact that Capt. Willard P. Malone has been promoted to the rank of Major and is now second in command of the 15th Battalion. The recommendation went through some time ago, but the appointment was not officially made known until a few days ago. The appointment will be received with a great deal of satisfaction by the citizens of Owen Sound, who are proud of the splendid service Major Malone has given the Empire. He was one of the first in Owen Sound to join the first contingent, and his self sacrifice has been an inspiration to many who followed.

One of Owen Sound's earliest residents passed away at his home in St. Catharines on Monday last, in the person of Sergt.-Major James C. Flower, Deceased had been in very poor health for about four years and succumbed as a result of old age, being in his seventy-ninth year. Early in life he lived just above the Cemetery Hill in Owen Sound the southern part of the Cemetery having been purchased by the town from his people, Mr. Flower was an active member of the Anglican Church He was a very able Royal Engineer, having seen service under the late Lord Kitchener in Soudan, Khartoum, and Egyptian Campaigns as Sergt.-Major of the 18th Company Royal Engineers. He also saw service in the Crimean war. and was actively engaged on the determination of the Canada-United States boundary line. He engineered the building of the Military Works at Halifax N. S. Besides a sorrowing widow, he leaves to mourn his loss, a son, Sergt. Major Flower of the Welland Canal and Niagara Frontier Protective Force. and one daughter Mrs. Glassco of Flint, Michigan. The body was brought to Owen Sound on the late G. T. R, train Tuesday night. Service took place a 2,30 p. m, Wednesday, in R. Brecken ridge's Undertaking rooms, the funeral leaving for Greenwood Cemetery at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Canon Ardill officiated.

There was a deer hunt on Wednesday afternoon in the adjoining township of Sydenham. During the day word was phoned in from Mr. John Gordon that the fine young doe sent here from Rondeau Park, and which jumped the enclosure fences day or so after it reached here was out at his place A number of gentlemen including Secretary Creeper, went out but in the meantime the animal had disappeared, and after a hunt for sometime the effort to catch it was given up. The park's commission will appreciate any effort to capture the animal as she would make a splendid addition to the small herd at Harrison Park

Acting on information received from Ottawa, the local police on Thursday afternoon arrested John Kuhar. a Hungarian, a moulder by trade, who arrived in town from Brampton about three weeks ago and who has since been working at the Malleable Iron Works. The authorities at Ottawa had been following Kuhar's movements for some time and finally discovered from letters written by him to different persons in the States that he was trying to get out of Canada. The man was brought before Magistrate Creasor the same afternoon and committed to the Stanley Barracks Detention Camp in Toronto to which place he was taken on Thursday afternoon in charge of Constable P. C. Bone. Acting Chief of Police Thompson, in speaking of Kuhar, said the man appeared to have an intense hatred of Canada and that his movements went to show that he was planning to get to his native land for the purpose of assisting the German cause.

Don't Endure Itching Skin

We urge all skin sufferers who have sought relief in vain, to try this liquid wash, the D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema. All skin diseases yield instantly to its soothing oils. Its ingredients, oil of wintergreen, thymol and glycerince, have been used by doctors for years in the cure of the skin. The liquid form carries these healing ingredients down through the pores to the root of the disease.

Come to us and we will tell you more about this remarkable remedy. Your money back unless the first bottle relieves you-D.D.D. Soap keeps your skin healthy. Ask about it.

R. W. SAWYER, Druggist, Wiarton

A case which will be watched with a great deal of interest throughout the County received its preliminary hearing at Flesherton on Wednesday last when Edward Graham was charged with having uttered seditious language, publically in a store at Eugenia Falls on May 11th last. The hearing took place before J. L. McMullan. J. P. and Graham was committed for trial, bail being accepted. It is alleged that Graham made a statemnnt which in effect was as follows: "That the war will not be over for six years. That our next fight would be with the Russians and that if he had to go to war the first man he would shoot would be a Breton." A witness was on hand to swear that Graham made this statement. He is also reported to have said that "Britain is only getting what she deserves." Graham denies the charge and it is expected that when he appears in Owen Sound the trial will be quite an extended and interesting session. T. H. Dyre, County Crown Attorney, of Owen Sound, appeared as Crown Prosecutor, and Mr. Patrick McCullough, of Markdale, appeared for the accused. There have been rumours of considerable disloyal talk throughout the County of Grey and the authorities are taking steps to put a stop to it. Graham is the first to appear under a charge of this kind in the history of the County and the cause should be a warning to those who have been engaging in loose talk of this kind.

PILES ENTIRELY CURED

Mr. Wm. Woodell, 107 St. John St. Carlton, St. John, N. B., writes;—"I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching, bleeding piles, and as a result have been entirely cured. For years I was a great sufferer from this distressing ailment and can say that three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. You may use this letter for the benefit of others

Tara

The Leader.

One of the pioneer settlers of Amabel township passed away at his home in Allenford on Saturday morning in the person of Mr. Adam Aiken, at the age of 66 years and 11 months. Deceased had been in poor health for several years and consequently the end was not unexpected Anaemia was the cause of death. The late Mr. Aiken was born in Pettigo, Fermanagh Ireland, and came to Canada when only two years of age, living with his sisters in the township of Cavan, Durham County. There he remained until he reached his eighteenth year, when he came to Derby township and bought land Some three or four years later he sold his holdings in Derby, and took up land in Amabel township, where he hewed out a home for himself from the unbroken forest. About twenty years ago he moved to a farm near Allenford where he remained until last fall, when he moved into the village of Allenford. As an Orangeman Mr. Aiken will be greatly missed, he being one of the most active members in the county of Bruce. He held many office in the Order, including County and District Master and County Treasurer. He was also a very ardent worker in the Methodist Church and was a trustee at one time, In politics he was a staunch Conservative. Nearly thirty-nine years he was married to his now sorrowing widow, who was a Miss Mary Cook. Besides his widow he leaves to mourn the loss of a kind and loving father, seven children, six sons, Thomas J., Moffat W. Albert H., and Wesley J., all of Allenford, and Milton J. and Harvey H., of the 160th Bruce Overseas Batt., and one daughter Mrs. D. J. Bates, Owen Sound. The funeral took place under the auspices of the Orange Order from his late residence, on Monday afternoon to Tara cemetery, and was largely attended.

Mr. Jacob Lowes, of con. 6 Arran, sold, pig the other day to Jas, Thompson and Son, of Dobbinton, for $18 25, The pig weighed 630 lbs and was purchased at $10 50 per cwt. Who dare say there is not heaps of money in pigs!

An automobile accident which fortunately did not terminate seriously happened on Saturday night about ten o'clock A Mr. Mitchell was driving Mr. John Henderson's car, in which were also Mr. Henderson and two Chatsworth girls when at Hay's corner (County Line) the car took to the ditch and turned turtle, throwing the occupants into a bog hole, Fortunately no one was badly hurt but they all received a drenching in the muddy water. The car was righted and it was found that only the wind shield was broken.

Southampton

At the annual meeting of the share holders of the Bowling Club held some weeks ago it was decided to hold a tournament this year on Tuesday and Wednesday August 1st and 2nd. Since that time there has been some doubt expressed by different members as to the advisability of holding it this year owing to the unusual conditions on account of the war and back ward season.

Last Friday evening a meeting was held at the club house to decide whether to go ahead with the tournament. It was finally decided that if a guarantee fund of $100 could be raised we would hold it but not otherwise. Messers Brock McAulay and W. C. Cone were appointed a committee to conduct a canvas in town to get the amount of guarantee.

Mr. E. E. Short was elected as secreacty in place of R. B. Hillmer who is still ill.

Rev. W. H. Storrie, formerly pastor in the Methodist church here who asked to be without a charge a year ago on account of throat trouble, has been appointed manager of the Edmonton branch of Beatty Bros. implement business. His wife and two children went out to him last week.

Tis said that it is the custom of reverend gentlemen to hand over to the "better half" the emolument they receive when they make two people one. The records show that the different ministers wives in this town will not find it troublesome to spend the amount they receive. For the first half of this year there has only been ONE marriage in town, During that time there has been 26 births, and 11 deaths. The doctors fare better than the preacher.

Children Must Be Protected

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to the taste. So much so the children delight to take it on this account as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

The Racking Pains of Sciatic Rheumatism

Were Well-nigh Unbearable—After Five Years of Suffering Cure Was Effected by Dr. Chase's Medicines.

For dof aright excruciating pain few ailments can be compared to sciatic rheumatism. Since this condition of the sciatic nerve denotes exhaustion of the nervous system, the logical cure is found in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to nourish the starved nerves back to health and vigor.

Reports are continually coming in to us regarding the splendid results obtained in the treatment of sciatic rheumatism by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after each meal and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally as a means of arousing the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby keeping the system freed of pain causing poisonous impurities.

Mr. W. J. Talbot, Edenwold, Sask., writes:—"It is a great pleasure for me to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food as a cure for Sciatic Rheumatism. The pain I have suffered has been well-nigh unbearable. It would start in the hips and run down the legs to the toes, gradually getting worse. The nerves contract until one is practically useless. My doctor tried many different treatments, but could only afford relief for a time.

"For about five years I was subject to this trouble with severe attacks which would last about two months. The last attack I had was shortened to two weeks by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. This treatment was continued until I was satisfied that the cure was lasting."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. H. E. Wooley, J.P.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, or 5 for $2.50. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

HERE IS ANOTHER CHANCE

A new, and doubtless one of the most interesting types of battalions, has just received authorization to recruit in this military district, and this is the 238th Forestry Battalion, under command of Lieut. Col. W. R. Smyth, M. P., of Algoma. Col. Smyth has sent out the call for a special type of men, as those most suited to his purposes are the experienced bushmen, loggers, drivers, lumbermen, or those who are accustomed to the woods. At the same time, his headquarters reports that they have plenty or openings for young farmers or any men used to handling horses.

Col. Smyth is out for a whirlwind campaign to raise his 1,200 men, and seeing that he has the whole area from the eastern boundary of Ontario to the Pacific Coast in which to recruit, he will doubtless live up to his hopes of filling the unit in six weeks. The offer which this battalion holds out to men who wish to get into khaki is a bright one, as their chief duties will be to cut down the forests of Great Britain, and perhaps of Southern France, in order to supply the men at the front with the necessary material for building trenches. The military training will not be heavy, and at the same time this unit will gratify any person who wishes to get overseas quickly. It is expected that the battalion will leave some time in September and will immediately be engaged in lumbering.

In raising his battalion, Col Smyth has adopted the plan of opening recruiting depots all over the western section of Canada. Many of his officers are scattered through Ontario in charge of depots, but any person who wishes information regarding the unit may apply at this office.

Port McNicol Suffers From Real Estate Boom

Owen Sound Sun

Port McNicoll with its thousands of valueless building lots, on hundreds of which the taxes remain unpaid is getting to be a serious burden on the Township of Tay, of which it forms a part. The Port is now suffering from the effects of the ridiculous real estate boom of three years ago when worthless property for miles around was unloaded on the public by Toronto real estate people. Some facts of the situation were brought out in a discussion in the Simcoe County Council recently when the representatives of Tay endeavored to have the County assessment reduced. The following extract from the proceedings is reproduced from the Barrie Gazette—Mr Dutton of Tay made the somewhat startling statement that Port McNicoll was assessed for $517,000, and out of that they had been compelled to pay $800 to redeem certain lots to protect the township.

The matter was deferred for further consideration and on Friday night the question came up again when Captain Finlayson addressed the Council. He said that if any legal proceedings could be instituted to dump Port McNicoll into the bay, the Township of Tay would be thousands of dollars to the good. Last fall an effort had been made to separate Port McNicol from the Township or allow subdivided lots upon which taxes had been paid, to revert to the original owners or to be put up in blocks for sale so that they might be redeemed by the township. The Attorney General did not approve of that method, as if any one purchaser had paid his taxes then he should get the benefit of roads and improvements. In the palmy days of Port McNichol about forty or forty-five plans had been registered upon which there were 11,000 lots but not more than 600 of these are any value now. There were a few in the centre of the village, but they did not total ten per cent of the whole so far as assessment was concerned. The township had to advertise them at a cost of $2.00 per lot and if they were redeemed as fast as possible it would take at least twenty years for the township to get control of the whole property. If Tay would pay $10,000 for Port McNichol the township would be ahead, but not withstanding this the county was raising the rate by $150,000, which seems a great injustice. Next year they might have to pay $1500 for advertising the tax sale but it apparently could not be avoided and they have to pay out $15,000 or $20,000 before getting the title. The township had also built a four-roomed school at a cost of $25,000 but there were not enough children to fill two rooms. The debentures, however, would amount to $50,000 in twenty years. Tanner's mill and settlement had also disappeared thus reducing the assessment by another $150,000. Fesserton and Waubashene were going backward and Victoria Harbor had only two mills running instead of three as formerly. The C. P. R. was not overcrowding Port McNichol with manufactures, but perhaps the reverse, but the residents of that village were always after something from the Township Council. He believed that if the County Council could appreciate the conditions in Port McNichol they would strike off $100,000 from Tay's assessment instead of increasing it.

Mr Stafford tried to get Tay's assessment equalized at $1,650,000 instead of $1,708,750. This meant that Port McNichol would be assessed at $106,000 or an increase of $200,000 by the township.

Mr Bennett recalled the fact that when Port McNichol was aspiring to be the Chicago of Canada no one from that village came down to ask the County to raise the assesament.

Chesley

H. Willoughby, principal of Walkerton public school, is taking a special Art course at the summer school in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Heiserman and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Cruickshank spent the holiday with friends in Owen Sound.

Chesley's rate of taxation has been fixed at the same as last year and notices are out for us to render unto the Caesar once more. There were a few hundred dollars to spare in 1915 on a 20 mill rate and the balance of funds in the treasury for current year will not reach the three figures unless the streets are not put in as good shape as they should be.

Samuel Bruegeman, our south-end grocer, went up to Tobermory last week with a traveller named Hale. When some 12 miles from the Tab they sighted a bear on the road ahead of them. The traveller drove his auto at a lively pace through the swamp road but brain kept ahead till he got a good jumping off place. No fewer than 24 bears have been killed in the vicinity of Tobermory this year. They also ran over a rattlesnake about 6 feet long with 8 rattles and finished the venomous reptile when he took to the side of the road. As a proof that he was a rattle-snake killer Sam brought home the hide. It was quite an experience for one day. On Saturday Mr. B. went down to London to see his soldier son who is ill in the military hospital with a boaling ear

Editorial

It is said that if the war continues that there will soon be a linen famine.

The Bell Telephone are placing the wire underground that serve the main street in Clinton.

A number of our local cotems are taking a week off, and hers is hoping that they will have a good time.

WITH this issue The Echo enters upon its 38th year. This paper is one of the pioneers and like John Brown's soul—"it goes marching on."

It all amounts to the same thing whether it is the Russians, the French or the British who defeat the Germans, but all the same we want to see the hardest blow struck by the British.

THE Walkerton Telescope is the authority that so far no Chaplain has yet been appointed for the Bruce battalion. One thing is sure the appointment should go to a Clergyman, either a native of Bruce County, or at present a resident in the County.

Positively the first article of diet known to drop in price in recent years has been strawberries, this season wild strawberries have been plentiful, also the cultivated variety, and as sugar is high and fruit perishable the growers could not hold out for prices, consequently the sales have been easily 3 for 25cts; just a box more for the quarter than for many years.

IT amply repaid the citizens to extend courtesies to the students at the Northern Summer School last week. Their acts of kindness were appreciated, and the fact that this institution will meet here next year, with probably a far greater attendance, is a thing worth being proud of The town is splendidly suited for a school of this kind, and the citizens did well to encourage it.

From speculation in sub-divisions it has developed into speculations in stock. The boys on the farm have the craze, they buy a calf, yearling, on what ever they can get hold of, keep it for a time to sell at a higher price. So great is the demand for stock, and so high are the prices paid for the same, that the boys never lose no matter how much they paid, for there is some one who will pay higher for the same animal.

(Crowded Out Last Week.)

Last Thursday afternoon the people of this section gathered together on the last day of school to celebrate their annual picnic held under the auspices of the Mother's Club. The sports began with a game of baseball for the school, followed by a game of footboll for all, by this time quite a large crowd had gathered and the races were called. There were sack races, potato races, three-legged races and many others, but the most popular were the nail-driving race for the girls and the button-sewing for the boys. When the prizes were listed it was found that the two grand champions were Zetta Wright and Mervin Ward. The ladies then began to spread the tables while the men and boys chose up for an exciting game of baseball, after this all proceded to enjoy the bounteous repast which was provided. The gathering then broke up with best wishes for the Mother's Club and hoping for another picnic next year.

PIKE BAY

Letter from the Front

Somewhere in Belgium.

Dear Mr. Lemcke,

I will answer your welcomed letter which I received yesterday, and was glad to hear you folks were all well, as it leaves me the same, I guess you will be pretty near through seeding by the time this letter reaches you, the crops look fine out here. Things will be pretty in Canada, everything nice and green. I am in the trenches now for 6 days. I tore a couple of sheets of paper out of my note book so I could drop you a line, I am sending you a rose in this letter that I got up at Ypres about 3 days ago, things are pretty lively up here these times. the Germans shell Ypres every day. there is not one building left standing in the city. I think Belgium was a pretty place before the war well I think I have told you all the news, so I will close wishing you all the best of luck, so good-bye.

Your Friend

W. J. Pruder.

The above letter was given to The Echo for publication by Mr. J. C. Lemcke, Purple Valley.

At Hymen's Altar

Loney—Pollock

A quite wedding took place on Monday July 3rd at ten o'clock a. m., when Miss Pearl Pollock daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pollock became the bride of Pte. Roy Loney of Oxenden.

The house was beatifully decorated with orange blosoms and pink carnations, and the ceremony which was performed by Rev. E. J. McEwen, took place under a bell of white peonas and snowballs. During the ceremony, wedding music was played by Miss Eva Fielding, cousin of the bride. The bride wore a becoming cream suit with hat to match, and carried a boquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful sun-burst of pearls, and to the pianist a pearl crescent. After a short stay in Toronto, the young couple will reside in London. until Pte. Loney's departure for overseas.

ADAMS—HUNTER

On Tuesday July 4 the marriage took place at the home of Mr and Mrs Samuel Adams, Mar, Ont., of their youngest daughter Eleanor Austin to Rev. Lawrence I Hunter B. A. of Alma. Rev. H. Lemon, brother-in-law of the bride, assisted by Mr Brady, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Mar, officiated at the ceremony. At the hour of seven p. m. to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Mrs S. Weir, the bridal party, following a path strewn with daisies, took their places under a tastefully decorated arch of evergreens on the lawn.

Little Miss Eleanor Lemon, neice of the bride, dressed in white silk embroidered in rose with rose trimmings, carrying a shower basket of pansies and daisies, was followed by the matron of honon Mrs. H. Lemon sister of the bride in African brown silk and natural leghorn hat trimmed to match her suit with corsage of pale pink sweet peas and wearing the groom's gift, a handsome pearl brooch, preceeded the bride who came leaning on the arm of her father. The bride was beautifully and becomingly attired in a saxe blue silk travelling suit, blue voil bodice trimmed with shadow lace, and natural leghorn hat to match the suit, her corsage was of lilies of the valley and white roses, her only ornament a pendant set with pearls and diamonds, the gift of the groom.

A dainty supper was served to a large number of guests who wer gathered to witness the nuptials and all wish the bride and groom a happy journey through life. The happy couple left for a short wedding tour to Niagara, Olcott and other places, and after their return will take up residence at the manse at Alma. The tour will not be so extended as planned on account of the groom's ill health, the result of his having sustained a severe electric shock by which he was rendered unconscious for some time during service in his church at Alma on Sunday July 2.

Among the handsome and costly gifts received by the bride were a hand carved oak tea tray covered with glass on a folding stand presented to Miss Adams by her former charges on her resignation as probation officer in the juvenile court Toronto; also a Clock presented by the members and former members of the Presbyterian church of which she was a valued member. Some of the guests who attended from a distance were Mrs. and Miss Hunter of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Lemon, of Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. Weir and Mr. and Mrs. Campbell of Colpoys, Mr. and Mrs. Adams, and Mr and Mrs. Campbell of Adamsville. Hearty congratulations were received by Mr. Hunter over the phone from his Session at Alma.

"Well, Peleg, how do you find the encyclopaedia the feller left on approval?"

"Seems to be alright. Ain't no errors in it so fur as I kin see."—Louisville Courier Journal.

Farm Laborers Wanted

The Western Province of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of Farm Laborers for Spring Seeding and Summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada moreover, it was always necessary to bring from twenty five to thirty thousand Laborers from Eastern Points for the Harvest Season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy, and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the Lines of the Canadian Northern Railway on account of the difficulty experinsed in obtaining Labor which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C. N. R.

CROSS STOKHOD RIVER

Russian Forces Are Now Nearing City of Kovel.

One Wave After Another of General Brussiloff's Armies Breaks on Teuton Defenders of Hungary—Austrians Admit Abandonment of Lines Along the Styr—Enemy Threatened on Two Sides by Crossing of River.

LONDON, July 10.—The Russian offensive on the lower Stokhod River is developing with a rapidity and strength which has almost paralyzed the German armies. Before the Teuton forces can recover from the shock of one assault General Brussiloff sweeps forward again with his forces intact. Saturday the Austro-German forces were compelled to abandon their lines along the Styr and to take up less easily defended positions on the Stokhod.

Admission of the withdrawal of the Austro-German lines along the Styr River was made in the official statement issued in Vienna Sunday. The Austrian forces were ordered to retreat, according to this statement, because their advanced lines were exposed to a double flanking movement from "hostile forces which have increased from threefold to fivefold superiority."

No less than eight important villages along both sides of the railway from Sarny to Kovel were captured by the swiftly-moving Russian armies, and more than 2,000 prisoners were bagged.

The fall of strategic positions north and south of the railway paved the way for a cavalry rush in the centre which swept everything before it and made the Russians masters of the whole triangle comprising Kolki, Rafalowka and Manevitchie.

Sunday the irresistible advance of the Russians forced them across the stream at one vital point and enveloped two more villages south of the Sarny-Kovel railway. The Teutons Sunday night were in disorderly flight along the whole front in this sector, and the Russians are moving forward from a point only 24 miles from Kovel.

The crossing by the Russians of the Stokhod River near Ugli and Janovka, which are reported in flames, seriously threatens the Austro-German forces from two sides. Ugli is about half-way between the two railways running into Kovel from Rovno and Sarny. The Teutonic salient eating its way into the front at the centre exposes both groups to a flank attack, and opens the way for the capture by the Muscovite armies of the life-lines of the enemy.

Two-days' fighting between the Styr and the Stokhod has resulted in the capture of 12,000 unwounded men.

Sunday night's Russian communication reports the enemy forces in this region retiring in great disorder, and adds that the Russians have occupied Hulevichi, which is about 24 miles to the east of Kovel, while apparently the Russians are already across the Stokhod River somewhere in the region of Janovka.

German possession of Baranovichi and Kovel are absolutely essential if she is to retain her hold over the invaded parts of Poland and Lithuania, but it is considered likely that it is only a matter of a few days before the Russians will be in possession of Kovel, which would compel von Linsingen's retirement from the Lutsk salient.

German official and unofficial despatches reflect anxiety over the Russian advances as being greater than over the Anglo-French offensive, which the German military critics contend will not interfere with the operations against Verdun. Major Moraht and other German critics express surprise at the extent and persistence of the Russian offensive and the endless resources of ammunition.

It is reported from Rome that at a recent council of German and Austrian marshals, von Hindenburg declared that it would be impossible to attempt a new offensive on a large scale without reinforcements of at least a quarter of a million men.

Meanwhile the successes of the Russians in Galicia are preparing the way for a great victory in that sector. Saturday Gen. Letchitzky captured the important railroad junction of Delatyn, west of Kolomea, and in the same stroke cut off Gen. von Bothmer from his principal base of supplies. A vast amount of booty fell into the Russians' hands with the capture of the city.

In Southern Bukowina the Austrians have rallied and pressed across the Moldava River, according to Vienna.

Germans Repulsed by New Zealanders

LONDON, July 10.—Sir Douglas Haig, in his report from headquarters, reports a brush between the Germans and New Zealanders. The report reads: "Near Givenchy we successfully sprang three mines. Further north, after heavy bombardment of a portion of the sector held by New Zealanders, a strong local attack succeeded in entering our trenches at one point. After half an hour's fighting the enemy was ejected by the New Zealanders, leaving many German dead in our trenches."

Aeroplane Raid on British Coast.

LONDON, July 10.—Hostile aeroplanes have dropped bombs on the English coast, but so far as is known did no damage. An official statement issued this morning says:

"Shortly before midnight Sunday enemy aeroplanes visited the southeast coast of England. From the information available, about five bombs were dropped. No damage is reported so far. Anti-aircraft guns engaged the raiding machines. No further details have been received."

War Will End The British Way.

Mail and Empire

Lord Derby, Under-Secretary for War, deprecates the tendency to underrate the quality of the Germans as soldiers. He says that there is a long, hard task ahead of the Allies, and he will not admit that the present offensive along the western front is the "grand offensive" in this war. Nevertheless, he says that, while the British progress will be slow, it will be certain, and slow because it will be permanent. He does not expect German counter-attacks to win back any of the ground that has been lost to the enemy; nor does he expect the war to be decided by any spectacular action. "The war will end," he says in an interview with a representative of the Brooklyn Eagle, "in the British way." And it will be fought in that way The gains will be small and slow for awhile; it will be the cumulative effects of an offensive on three fronts that will wear down the Germans. He looks for no whirlwind campaign.

A War Against Soldiers

In answer to the question if the present offensive is the "great push" of the Allies, Lord Derby would only answer that any movement that put a large number of German troops out of action might well be called the great push. That is to say, the Battle of Verdun might be described as a "great push" or a great success for the French. In the present operations on the Somme the object of the French and British is not necessarily to capture so much territory which was in the hands of the Germans when the offensive began, but to reduce the man-power of Germany. Sometimes this can be done more effectively on the defensive than on the offensive, as Verdun bears witness. Sometimes an offensive will cost the defenders more than a defensive action. This is what is happening on the Somme. The British and French will pay for their advance; but the Germans will pay more highly for resisting it. That is the way Lord Derby looks at the battle now raging.

Perfect Preparations

The Under-Secretary for War made no secret of the fact that the British were perfectly prepared for the Somme battle. To the last detail the British are prepared, he says. For months a surplus supply of ammunition was accumulated the result of strenuous, nation-wide endeavor, and unprecedented bombardment was made possible. Every other branch of the army was turned on for the great effort and every emergency has been provided for." Nothing that will happen can find the British unprepared. Lord Derby does not expect any swift advance. The Germans were aware that the British contemplated an offensive; indeed it was almost officially announced. They did not know the plans of General Foch. Therefore, it happened that while they had made all preparations possible to resist the British, the French were able to them by surprise, and the French advances were therefore swifter than those of the British.

Great Ambulance Work

Lord Derby said:

"The battle of the Allies on the Somme has emphatically demonstrated that the British organization is markedly superior in one very important respect to that of Germany—our hospital arrangements are superb I believe that the work of the Royal Army Medical Corps is unsurpassed by that in any war we ever fought. Our soldiers, wounded one morning on the front in France, tweuty-four hours later receive medical attention in London hospitals. Such a feat, is unparalleled and I think may be taken as a fair indication of the new armies. Wounded men are transported rapidly for long distances along the roads, while the railways are carrying large quantities of munitions food and medical supplies toward the fighting fines. The new steel helmet has completely vindicated its adoption. I have heard unofficially that minor casualties in the Somme have been reduced considerably by the use of this device. Minor head wounds are extremely rare."

TheCasualties

Up to the present no official lists of casualties have been given out by either the British or the Germans, They will be heavy on both sides. It is to be remembered, however that on the British side every soldier who passes through a dressing station no matter if his wound is so slight that he is able to report next day, is counted a casualty. But heavy losses are to be expected; probably no offensive that is launched until the war is over will entail heavier losses. The British public has been well prepared for what it ought to expect. Yet it seems likely that the casualties will be much lighter than we had been prepared for. The wonderful work of the British artillery has made it easier for the infantry to advance than has been possible in any other engagement; and the corresponding failure of the German guns to hold their own in counter-attacks will reduce the British list of mourning. No men have been wasted; this is a battle not for positions, but to inflict the maximum losses upon the enemy for the minimum losses upon the British and French. Not only a foot of ground, but a German soldier will have been gained for every loss among the French and British.

Gordon Craig

manipulating the rope, managed to make them sound with clear insistence. I repeated the effort several times before there was any response. Then the port seemed to be opened cautiously, although no gleam of light shot forth. She had evidently extinguished her lamp before venturing to answer the signal, but I felt her grasp on the cord. Then it was left dangling against the closed port, leaving me to infer that she was reading the hasty note.

My line was again hauled taut, but as I straightened up, prepared to haul up the returning message, I saw the shadow of a man passing across the cabin below. He was already at the foot of the companion stairs; in another minute he would be on deck. There was no time to do otherwise, and I released my grasp of the rope, letting it drop silently into the water. I had barely turned my back to the rail when Henley emerged within six feet of me.

"Who is this? Oh, you, Craig?" he questioned sharply. "Not asleep yet?"

"Not even drowsy," I said, pretending an ease I was far from feeling.

"You think favorably of my plan, I hope."

"I see no reason to refuse, if the pay is all right."

"It will be, trust me for that. A beautiful night this—the air as soft as June. I was about to turn in, but decided to take a whiff on deck first."

"Rather a captain's duty, is it not?"

"I believe so, in regular service, but this is decidedly irregular. The fact is, that while I am the owner of this vessel and technically in command, I am no navigator. I merely give my general orders and trust the seamanship to Herman. He is perfectly trustworthy and capable, and I never interfere. The last voyage I doubt if I was on deck twice, although, of course," he added soberly, "my word goes if I should care to exercise authority."

"What are those lights off yonder?" I asked, pointing.

"Shore lights."

"Then we are steering east?"

"A bit south of east, yes; odd course for Honduras, you think?"

I nodded, willing enough to let him talk.

"We are playing the game safe, Craig; that's all," he explained, both hands gripping the rail. "You see, we cleared for Santiago and are not anxious to be seen and reported by any westbound ships. Tomorrow we will be hidden among the islands off the west Florida coast. Then, as soon as it is dark we will shoot out under full steam into the gulf. The chances are we'll cross the lane unobserved. If we should intercept a liner, she won't identify us in the dark as we burn no lights. By daylight we'll be well beyond their lookouts and can steer a straight course."

The proximity of the man irritated me. I wanted to be alone, where I could think out some feasible scheme of escape.

"I have had enough for tonight," I said finally, "and am going to turn in."

"Best thing you can do," he coincided, but without looking toward me. "Will follow suit as soon as I smoke a cigarette. See you tomorrow."

When I awoke the sun was shining through the glass of my porthole, and, glancing forth, I caught the dazzle of the water. The vessel was motionless, apparently riding at anchor, the sea barely rippled by a gentle breeze. The breakfast table was set for one, and the black steward was lolling lazily in a chair. At sight of me he got to his feet.

"Ah suah thought you wasn't nebber goin' ter wake up, sah," he said genially, showing his teeth. "Ah bin waitin' fer yer more'n two hours, Ah reckon."

"For me! Have the others eaten then?"

"Mostly, sah, mostly. De captain he nebber eat no breakfast. He say et ain't good for his libber. Yaw, yaw! But de mates dey both bin down."

"What time is it?"

"Most 10, sah."

"Has Mrs. Henley breakfasted yet?" I asked.

"Who, sah?"

"The lady you have on board."

He scratched the wool on his head vigorously, glancing behind the mast as though uncertain what he had best answer.

"Ah suah nebber know'd dat wus her name, sah. No, sah, Ah nebber done suspected it. Yes, sah; she had her breakfast, but Ah reckon she didn't eat much."

"You served her here at the table?"

"No, sah; in her room, sah," his voice low. "De captain he unlock de doah an' then lock it agin. You like sugah in your coffee, sah?"

I found the after deck entirely deserted, and there was no one visible on the bridge. Two or three sailors, the anchor watch, were forward engaged in some service about the capstan, and a fellow was swabbing the deck amidship. I heard Broussard's voice at a distance, but could not locate him. However, no one paid the slightest attention to me as I stood smoking and gazing curiously around. Everything appeared peaceful enough. We were lying in a small harbor within a hundred feet of the shore. I sauntered forward toward the bridge, aiming to exchange greetings with the creole mate. Broussard was not a man to expect favors from, and I had hated him with the first glimpse of his face, yet he possessed his racial characteristic of impulsive speech and was thus far more approachable than the gruff German first officer. Perhaps if he believed me an accomplice he might be led to talk.

"How you com' on ze deck, m'sieur?" he asked, his eyes threatening. "I thought you down below, locked in all tight," and he waved an expressive hand aft.

CHAPTER XIII.

Tables Turned.

I LAUGHED, but without paying him the compliment of looking at him.

"I've changed allegiance, that's all, Broussard. The captain turned me loose last night."

"You wif us? You go volunteer?"

"Well, something like that. I'm to be drillmaster or general for those tattered battalions down in the jungles. What do you think of the job?"

He shrugged his shoulders and then grinned.

"What ze diff" and he swept his hands about in expressive gesture. "Sea—land, if only one gets the price, m'sieur. But, for me, I like to go, to move—not lie still an' rot."

"Of course," failing into his mood, "that's in your blood, I reckon. But the captain said we were only to hide here for a day."

"Maybe day, maybe week. No one knows how long. We wait till ze sea is clear. Bah! The man 'fraid of shadow. He give me sheep, an' I show beem. He no sailor, m'sieur. I know beem long while."

"How long?"

"Oh, seek, eight year."

"Then you can tell me if he is really Judge Henley's son?"

"Oui, m'sieur; 'tis sure I can. I hav' been with beem there," his brown hand outstretched landward, "where we got you, hey, many the time; besides, the judge he been on zis sheep. Of course he was son; why you think not?"

"I am beginning to believe I do not know very much about it, Broussard," I explained briefly, moving aside to the rail. "I came down south with another story pumped into me, that's all."

"And ze young woman," he persisted, following me closely, "why she come?"

"For the same reason I did."

"More like 'cause she love you, hey! Sacre! She was due lookin' girl, but"—shrugging his shoulders—"'tis the capitaine, not ze mate, who may admire. He is ze capitaine; nobody tell him but on ze Sea Gull."

I left him and walked aft, aware as I turned of the sneer on his face. Yet even then, although burning with anger, I knew better than to remain. I dare not speak the bitter words on my tongue, feeling certain that whatever I said would be repeated to Henley. I knew men well enough to understand the character of the Sea Gull's captain. With unlimited power in his hands he was not an antagonist to be despised. Nor did I doubt his purpose. Now that he had seemingly won me over to his scheme he would turn his attention to her, feeling secure from interference. And he was Judge Henley's son or, at least so these men believed who had been associated with him for years. The situation grew more and more complicated; it was no longer merely her word against his, and yet I could not doubt the truth of any statement she had made to me.

Broussard stared in my direction for a moment, but made no effort to follow, and finally disappeared forward. There was nothing on sea or land to distract my attention, and I felt that I would be nearer to her below in the cabin than on deck. The skylight was closed, although even then it gave me a partial view, and, as I gazed through the clouded glass I perceived a shadow pass. The next instant the negro steward emerged from the companion. Some swift impulse led me to crouch instantly out of sight, until the sound of his feet on the deck convinced me the fellow was going forward. I watched him cautiously. He stopped twice to glance back, but, perceiving nothing, finally vanished into the forecastle.

The negro's going forward left the captain, and Viola Henley alone below. I crept to the door of the companion and then down the stairs.

The main cabin was vacant, but the door of No. 5 stateroom stood slightly ajar. Assured I should find it empty, my heart already beating furiously, I took a swift glance within. It in no way differed from the room which had been assigned me opposite, and everything was in perfect order. Evidently the girl had departed without a struggle, and with full expectation of an early return. Her small handbag lay on the berth unlatched, and a handkerchief, together with a pair of gloves, were upon the chair. That she had not gone on deck was a certainty, while the deserted cabin led me irresistibly to suspect the captain's quarters. He had dismissed the steward on some excuse, opened her door, and, using some pretense, or authority, had induced her to accompany him. What I could do to help her, to overcome him, was not evident. I was alone, unarmed, surrounded by men under his command.

Possibly even now I was under surveillance. The negro had left the cabin, I knew, but where was Herman? Broussard was in charge of the deck, and hence this would be the first mate's watch below. Impressed with this disconcerting thought, I emerged again into the main cabin. The stateroom doors were all closed, and I had to guess which was the German's. I was sure, however, that Broussard occupied the first on the port side. I had heard him open that door while talking to the steward, and it was highly probable the first mate had the apartment opposite. Judging from the position of the doors, these would be larger than the other staterooms, and if Herman was the real navigator of the boat he would require good quarters. I listened at the door, but heard nothing, then, rendered desperate by the delay, tried the knob cautiously. The door was unlocked, opening noiselessly. A glance convinced me the room was unoccupied, and I stepped inside.

Instantly my mind leaped to a conclusion—the first mate was not on board; he was ashore with the boat party, and Henley was entirely alone. He had taken advantage of the opportunity. But what could I do? If I broke down the door into his cabin the noise would be heard on deck, and, besides, the fellow was armed. The only result of such an effort would be my own imprisonment, leaving her in more helpless straits than before. Without knowing why I peered into the bathroom connected with Herman's stateroom. It was small, but perfect in arrangement and to my surprise, revealed a second door. In an instant I understood—this was not Herman's private bath, but was also used by the captain. That second door led to the after cabin. I was there in two strides, my ear at the crack listening. Nothing reached me but the murmur of a voice, the words indistinguishable, yet this was sufficient to convince me that I was on the right trail. The two were together, and here was an opportunity for me to reach them unobserved. Slowly, using every precaution to avoid noise, I turned the knob and opened the intervening door a scant inch. I caught a glimpse of the interior.

"You have trapped me here—you—you brute!" I heard her say.

"Well, what of it?" insinuatingly. "Why shouldn't it be me, my dear, as well as the other?"

"What do you mean? Do you connect me with Gordon Craig?"

"Of course," and he laughed. "Why shouldn't I, please? You came with him from the north, did you not—traveling as his wife? I happen to know your history."

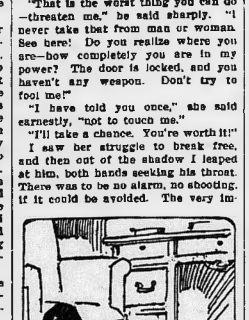
She took a deep breath, standing straight before him, her cheeks burning.

"Perhaps you think you do," she said, now in full control of herself. "But you are going to learn your mistake. I am here under unpleasant circumstances, yet I am not subject to your insult. I refuse to answer you or remain in your presence." She stepped aside, leaving free passage. "You will unlock that door."

"Hardly that," and I could see his fingers shut down on the top of the desk. "It takes more than a few words to change me. Really, I like you better than I did. You are decidedly pretty now you are angry. Besides, what have I to be afraid of? There is no one but us in this part of the ship; I fixed that up before I went after you; even your friend Craig is mooning around somewhere on deck. I'm captain of the Sea Gull, and there's not a rapscallion on board who would riot his skull to help you. Even Craig wouldn't, he even told me himself you were nothing to him."

"He—he told you that?"

"He certainly did—in this room. Come, now, what is the use of being such a cat?" He took a step forward, but she never moved.



"Don't touch me," she said in a tone that stopped him. "I am a woman, but I can defend myself."

"That is the worst thing you can do—threaten me," he said sharply. "I never take that from man or woman. See here! Do you realize where you are—how completely you are in my power? The door is locked, and you haven't any weapon. Don't try to fool me!"

"I have told you once," she said earnestly, "not to touch me."

"I'll take a chance. You're worth it!"

I saw her struggle to break free, and then out of the shadow I leaped at him, both hands seeking his throat. There was to be no alarm, no shooting, if it could be avoided. The very impetus of my rush sent him staggering and left her helpless on the deck, yet I got grip on his collar, choking back the first cry and struck him once, a half arm jolt, which would have sent him sprawling but for the cabin wall. Yet he rallied so quickly as to overcome this advantage. Judging him from his size, I had underrated his fighting ability, for he was all muscle, swift in movement as a cat, squirming out of my grasp before I could close firmly. My fingers were wrenched from his throat, yet the fellow made no outcry, realizing, doubtless, it would not be heard. His eyes blazed with hate, merciless, vindictive, and he struggled like a fiend to break free. I saw the girl, still dazed from her fall, struggling to her feet, with face uplifted, then my every consideration was riveted on my antagonist. This was to be no boy's play, no easy victory. His muscles were like iron, his movements as quick and unexpected as to put me on the defensive. I could only hold tight, braced for the strain, yet forced back, in spite of every effort, inch by inch across the floor, my feet tangled in the rug. Neither could strike nor kick. I was weaponless, and I dare not release his arms for fear he might possess a gun. But I managed to swing him sideways, the two of us tripping over the chair and coming down heavily on the deck. By some luck I landed on top and before he recovered from the shock had wrenched one arm free, locking my fingers in his throat.

He Squirmed Under Me Like an Eel.

He squirmed under me like an eel, but could not break the grip, his face purpling, until he lost all power. Fierce as the battle had been, I retained sufficient sense to loosen my death grip while the man still breathed, lifting my head sufficiently to glance about. My own breath came in sobs, and the perspiration almost blinded me.

"Bring me something to tie him with," I said brokenly. "Anything; yes, that belt will do."

She tore it from the hook on the wall and thrust it into my hands. With a single movement I had it buckled securely about his arms, and was free to sit up and stare about. A cord from the portiere curtain draping the bathroom entrance completed his lashings.

"By —, Craig," he snarled, "you'll both wish you'd killed me before you're done with this job. What chance have you got to get away?"

"That is for me to decide," I answered. "But if you open your mouth again I'll gag you. Now, stop it. The first word you utter will mean a handkerchief in your mouth."

I stooped down and dragged him to one side. As I straightened up again she was facing me.

"How did you get here?"

"I found my way through the connecting bathroom yonder."

"Then—then, we can escape in the same manner."

"I hardly think that will be necessary. I'll go through our friend's pockets for his keys." I turned him over and began the search. "Ah, a revolver! I thought probable—in protection against a woman, you cur! Here are keys; now let's see what they fit."

The third one tried unlocked the door, but even as I tried them in the lock my mind swiftly reviewed the situation. It must be open war from now on. Henceforward we could expect no mercy on board. Yet how was it possible to escape, or avoid discovery? To attempt leaving the Sea Gull before dark would be suicidal. Yet there was a chance that what had occurred in this cabin could be kept concealed for a few hours, until darkness gave us better opportunity for successful action. The memory of what Henley had said to me the evening before—that he was only technically in command; that for days at a time he never appeared on deck in person, gave me the clew. If he could be kept absolutely secure in his cabin, unable to create any alarm, we would be free to plan our escape. There were but two points of danger to be guarded against—Herman and the steward. The former, when he returned from shore, might seek him for final orders, and the latter, if he failed to appear in the cabin for the regular meal, would endeavor to learn his desires. I would have to guard against these contingencies, and, with the first in mind, I stepped across to the bathroom, and was gratified to learn that the door, leading into the mate's stateroom, could be locked on the inside. With this private approach barred, I felt confident of being able to guard the single entrance remaining.

"Well, what can we do?" she asked when I returned.

"Keep the fellow tied and wait for night," I answered soberly. "That is our only chance. The mate is ashore. We are lying in the cove of a small island off the Florida coast waiting for darkness and a chance to slip through into southern waters."

"Do you know where this boat is bound?"

"Yes; Spanish Honduras. We are loaded with munitions of war," I laughed. "I was to be a general down there. I had to play a part. But you received my note?"

"Yes, and it helped me wonderfully, although even then I scarcely comprehended why all this pretense was necessary. Surely you do not believe this man is Philip Henley, that—that I have told you a lie?"

"No, I do not." I answered earnestly. "But he has shown me evidence of his identity which would have convinced me under other circumstances—letters and pictures. I will show them to you, for I know where they are kept in the desk. No evidence would shake my faith in you, and I am certain now there is fraud here, some devilish plot concocted to steal Judge Henley's fortune."

"What letters? What pictures were they?"

"Letters from the judge to his son—intimate family letters, and a photograph of the father and this man taken together."

"And were the letters addressed to Philip?"

"The envelopes had been destroyed, and no name was mentioned, but the photograph was indorsed in the judge's handwriting."

PRISONERS TOTAL 16,000.

Week of Allied Offensive Has Shown Splendid Results.

PARIS, July 10.—The French official report says: "The operations on the Somme front from July 1 to 7 resulted in the capture by us of more than 9,500 prisoners. Among the important war materials that we took we counted up Sunday 75 cannon and several hundred machine guns.

A Reuter correspondent sends this despatch, dated Saturday, at the press camp of the British army:

"It being a week ago to-day since the British offensive developed, the occasion is opportune to review the progress made. We have pushed in the German salient between Albert and the Somme to an extreme depth at the point of our greatest advance of about three miles. We hold the villages of Montauban, Fricourt, and Mametz, and are well across the fringe of Contalmaison At various intervening points of tactical importance our line is firmly established.

"We have taken upward of 6,000 prisoners, 21 guns, 51 machine guns, a large number of automatic rifles, trench mortars, minenwerfers, search lights, and other military booty.

"The enemy is known to have suffered terrible losses. For example, the third division of the Prussian Guard, brought up as reinforcements, has been so depleted that the remnants of the corps have been withdrawn as no longer war-worthy for the time. Prisoners says that the morale of these guards is badly shaken, this applying equally to the officers.

"The heavy rains of the last two days have much impeded the operations. Nevertheless, our troops have been fighting incessantly, and in many spots have made substantial gains. The spirit of the men is wonderful. They fully realize they are now playing the part of the top dog.

"As proof of their dash it may be mentioned that in their advances there are practically no stragglers, so eager are all to get to their goal. This, under the heavy conditions of trench warfare, with no man's land often like a quagmire, is truly wonderful. There is every reason to be satisfied alike with the progress and prospects."

"THE WAR IS FINISHED."

So Say German Soldiers When Captured by French.

PARIS, July 10.—The new French front before Peronne appears to have been fortified now so as to facilitate flanking movements southward and a widening of the position already conquered. French infantry inaugurated this operation Saturday night by successful attacks in the region of Belloy-en-Santerre, where 850 Germans were made prisoners, and east of Estrees, where fifty men were left in French hands after an assault on a communicating trench.

The French had scarcely reached the first line of their adversaries when the Germans were seen climbing out of the trenches in clusters with their hands up and marching in double-quick time toward the French trenches.

"The war is finished. The war is finished," cried many of them with their faces expanding into smiles as they leaped into the French communicating trenches and filed back to the rear between lines of more French troops, waiting for the word to take their turn in the assault. The prisoners then cried for water and bread.

MERELY A PRESSURE.

Franco-British Effort Is Not Intended to Pierce German Front.

PARIS, July 10.—The Paris military critics contrast the Franco-British offensive on the Somme and the Russian offensive, but find a similarity between the former and the German effort against Verdun, where each big operation has been followed by some days of trench to trench actions.

The Franco-British effort, the critics say, is not to pierce the front, but to keep up a steady pressure. The military critic of Le Journal calls it an adaptation to field warfare of the lessons learned in the siege warfare at Verdun.

Gen. Malleterre writes: "If it is not yet a general offensive preparatory to a general assault, it is a combined progressive pressure preventing the enemy from shuffling his forces among the various fronts and thus depriving the enemy of the benefit of his central situation."

The Matin says that the cannons captured by the French and British in the last few days include French guns from Manbeuge and Russian guns captured on the eastern front in 1915.

THREE COMMANDERS TAKEN.

Russians Capture Line of Fortified Positions Near Erzerum.

LONDON, July 10.—The official statement issued by the Russian War Office regarding the operations on the Caucasus front reports continued success.

In the region south of the town of Platana the Turks made violent attacks on the night of July 6-7, but were repulsed by Russian fire.

West of the Erzerum line an entire line of fortified positions were captured by the Russian troops, and 67 officers and 799 men were made prisoners. Of the officers two were regimental commanders and one a battery commander. Seven machine guns and one cannon were also taken.

Sunday's Petrograd War Office report says:

"On Saturday in combats west of the Erzerum line one of our columns took prisoner 64 officers and 1,060 soldiers, and captured a great quantity of arms, ammunition, and engineering material."

TWO MORE TOWNS WON

Foch's Troops Are Only Short Distance From Peronne.

Towns of Hardecourt and Manieion Are Captured After an Assault Lasting Thirty-five Minutes — British Making Progress Near Ovilliers—Germans Admit That the Situation is Critical for Them.

PARIS, July 10.—Hammering relentlessly at the German lines in Picardy, which the fury of two days' assaults had crumpled in like paper, the French troops under Gen. Foch swept forward Sunday almost to within rifle fire of Peronne. By nightfall, when both sides rested on their arms for the first time in hours, the French lines had been extended on a front of two and a half miles to a depth of a mile on the average. The village of Biaches, on the outskirts of Peronne to the south-west, was carried by storm, and the whole sector lying between Flaucourt, Barleux, and Biaches was wrested from the Germans. Sunday night the French were consolidating their lines at this point and bringing up the heavy artillery with which it is intended to pave the way for the capture of the city and the railway running to Combles.

British and French forces co-operated in a vigorous stroke Saturday against the German lines just where the flanks of the Allies meet, near the village of Hardecourt, a little south-east of Montauban.

Such was the vigor and strength of the assault that in 35 minutes after the battle began Gen. Foch's men had driven the Germans out of Hardecourt and had taken the nearby village of Maniclon.

The British troops also made great gains. Following a fierce bombardment, the infantry stormed a line of trenches and gained a footing in the Bois de Trones, which lies to the east of Montauban. According to an unofficial report, the advance here amounted to fully half a mile on a considerable front.

The British troops likewise made progress at Contalmaison and are extending their hold on Ovillers.

Again Sunday the British made progress in the neighborhood of Ovillers and gained ground in Hardecourt village, the capture of which is admitted in Sunday's official statement from Berlin. At other points they delivered fierce attacks, which broke down before heavy fire from the enemy's guns.

By the capture Saturday of Hardecourt and Hill 129, and by the envelopment Sunday of Biaches and the sector immediately south-west of Peronne, the French now hold the German second line along their whole front in the Somme offensive. The possession of Hill 139 brings the troops of Gen. Foch to within three kilometres (two miles) of Combles, and at Biaches they are less than two kilometres from Peronne. Peronne on the south, Combles in the centre, and Bapaume in the north are the three main German supporting positions in the sector under attack, and all have been turned in the last twenty months into veritable fortresses. With Peronne now under their guns, however, the French have only to take Mont St. Quentin, the city's only remaining defensive position of strength, to sweep the entire sector behind their lines.

Germany Admits Position Critical.

LONDON, July 10.—The Frankfurter Zeitung, in an editorial review of the situation, according to an Amsterdam despatch, says:

"We all know now that our position is critical, and we depend more than ever on the superiority of our leadership. What is important now is the proper utilization of our forces, which calls for weighty consideration.

"The [illegible] devolving upon our staff in the west is terrible, but our fortress is firm."

Russian Hospital Ship Sunk.

PETROGRAD, July 10.—The following communication was issued by the Admiralty Sunday night:

"An enemy submarine without warning sank the hospital ship Vperiode, which carried all the distinguishing signs. Seven men lost their lives; the others were saved."

The hospital ship Vperiode was the successor to the hospital ship Portugal, also sent to the bottom by a submarine, according to the semi-official news agency.

The Portugal was sunk on March 30 while she was transporting a large number of wounded. One hundred and fifteen lives were lost, and the Russian Government sent a note of protest to all neutral Governments.

New German Undersea Freighter

BALTIMORE, July 10. — The world's first submarine merchantman, the German underwater liner Deutschland, anchored below Baltimore Sunday night, after voyaging safely across the Atlantic, passing the Allied blockading squadrons and eluding enemy cruisers watching for her off the American coast. She carries mail and a cargo of 750 tons of costly chemicals and dyestuffs and a message from Emperor William to President Wilson, and is to carry back home a cargo of nickel and crude rubber, sorely needed by the German army.

Canadian Casualties.

OTTAWA, July 10.—Seven Canadians were killed and 42 wounded at the front Saturday, according to cables received at the Militia Department. This is not a very heavy list when considered in connection with the news that the Germans have been heavily bombarding the Canadian lines. The name of but one officer appears in the list.

The Bruce Herald says—A rather complicated horse affair was aired before Judge Greig at Walkerton on Friday last when C. H. Whicher of Colpoy's Bay entered an action against Ernest Pedigrew of Lions Head to recover a horse which he purchased from an Indian. It seems that Pedigrew originally owned the horse and sold it to a Cape Croker Indian, taking a mortgage on the beast. The Indian in turn sold it to his brother, and this Indian sold it to another red skin named Elliott, Seeing the horse changing hands so often, Pedigrew decieed to reclaim it under the mortgage but learned that the last buyer, Elliott, had in the mean time been sent to gaol. It seems that the horse continued to change hands until it finally got into the possession of Mr. C. H. Whicher of Colpoy's Bay Learning of it whereabouts Pedigrew issued a warrant and had the horse seized under the mortgage. Whicher in turn came back and entered an action against Pedigrew for the recovery of the horse. After hearing a multitude of evidence pro and con on the matter, the Judge reserved decision on the affair. Robertson and McNab, for plaintiff, O.E. Klein or defendant.

Workmen at Griffiths Island Unearth Twenty Skeletons

Find Made While Digging Gravel Last Friday — The Bones Which are Burnt, are Evidently Those of Long Dead Indians.

A none too pleasant find was made at Griffith's Island last Friday by the digger-men on the gang of Mr. Rich McWilliams, who has the contract for the supply of gravel from the island to the union cement plant, when they unearthed at a depth of about two feet, a collection of partly burned skeletons, which are supposed to be the remains of Indians buried there

The skeletons were in a hole evidently dug out for the purpose. This hole was at a distance of about three hundred yards from the water line on the beach, thus doing away with the theory that the skeletons were possibly the remains of bodies washed ashore. Altogether in the pit, which was about four feet in circumference, it is estimated that there are about 20 skeletons although the bones are separated from each other and rather badly mixed up. In the bottom of the pit which is about six feet deep, are evidences of a fire and the bones found at the bottom are charred and burned. However, towards the top of the pit, the bones are bleached white. Many of the bones that are not burned are crumpled and decayed, indicating that they are of cousiderable age. Fifteen skulls were gathered up, which are more or less intact, and were placed in a box. The remaining bones which were in good condition were also gathered and placed in another box.

The find was made Friday afternoon by the men operating the digger at the island During the usual operations, the clam unearthed a pile of bones which, on investigation turned out to be human ones. The men in the vicinity investigated with shovels with the result that the pit was opened and the complete pile of bones found. When first opened the pit showed no signs that the skeletons had been placed in it in any order. Some of the frames were partly joined together but fell apart when moved. The general appearance of the pit would indicate that it had been built purposely for the reception of the skeletons and that it had been intended to burn them. There was absolutely nothing found in the pit except the bones. No clothing or stones or metal or anything of the sort usually found in the graves of Indians was unearthed

The information was first brought to Owen Sound last Friday night about ten o'clock by Capt. W. J. Long, of the tug "C. H. Boop" which tows the gravel scows from the island to the cement works. On Saturday, Mr. T. L. Dates, manager of the cement works, and Mr. R. H. McWilliams went up to the Island to investigate the find, but found nothing more than the bare bones. The bones were found 300 yards from the water's edge on the west shore of the Island, and not far from the place known as Deep Water Port.

As yet the matter has not been reported to the Ontario Department of Education, one of whose branches makes a specialty of research along these lines, and it is not known whether the find will be important historically or not. At any rate there is room for considerable conjecture as to the age of the bones and as to how they got in their peculiar burying place and when. An expert could easily ascertain these points. All that is at present known, however, are the mere facts of the find; and it remains to be discovered what importance is to be attached to them. —Owen Sound Advertiser.

Down Go Hotel Assessments

The Ontario prohibitory legislation will turn things topsy turvey for a time. It acted like a bull in a china shop in North Perth, and it has knocked a hole in the assessment of this town to the tune of $19,850, but all the same it has evidently come to stay, and the odd $750 which we will have to raise some other way must be raised and that is all there is to it, it has come at a time when we are accustomed to raise money, and pay higher prices for everything so we can handle the proposition His Honor Judge Klein president at the court of appeals, Monday, and after hearing evidence pro and con decided the land assessment of the Arlington which had been $9.600 be cut down to $7.000, the Queens from $5.000 to $2.500 the St. Albans from $7.680 to$4.920, and the Pacific from $11.650 to $7.150. The hotels had a business assessment as follows, the Arlington $2.400.00, the Queens $1.250 the St. Albans $1.250 the Pacific 1.920. By Ontario legislation, the business Assessment is wiped out. The business assessment loss plus the reduction on the land assessment, make a total reduction of $19.850. It was given in evidence that under present conditions, after allowing a reduction of 20 per cent for wear and tare, it would cost $13.780 to build the Arlington, $7.982 the St. Albans, $4.629 the Queens and $17.796 the Pacific, but this does not cut much ice, the point on which the whole thing rested was the selling value of the hotels at the present One point worth the notice of every citizen is the fact that the judge does not believe in assessing any place for more than it is worth. The assessor stated that all the property in town is assessed beyond its value, and this is done because the town must have a revenue. The Mayor admitted the same thing and said that 6x9 are 54 or 9x6 are 54 it did not make any difference whether it was a high assessment and a low rate, or a low assessment and a high rate the Judge however would not agree and maintained that assessment must be according to value.

The Echo has been informed that the hotels would have compromised with the town on a 25 per cent reduction some time ago but the Chairman of the Assessment Committee, Mr George Kempt, would not listen to the proposal. Had he listened it would have been better for the town. As things now stand our taxes will be somewhat higher, but those who believe in closing the bars will accept the situation without a murmur, but all further reductions in assessment in this town, whether upon the part of hotels, or private property, must be squarely met as we have now some taxes to pay, and it is up to everyone who lives here and does business here to pay his share and no dodging.

Death Of James T. Ward.

The public were shocked Tuesday to learn of the death of James T. Ward, Lake Charles, which occurred in the Owen Sound hospital. About a month ago, while he was apparently in good health, he went to the Owen Sound hospital to undergo an operation for tumor on the bowels, and his system never recovered from the operation. It was reported that he was getting better, but the shock was too much for his constitution. The deceased, who was in his 49th year, was a Councillor in Keppel, and was born at Lake Charles, and was a member of one of the old families of the district. He was one of the very best type of citizens and his early death will be much regretted by a large circle of friends. He is survived by a widow. The funeral services will be held at the family residence, Lake Charles, Thursday afternoon and interment will be made in Bayview cemetery.

One of Mr. D. McKechnie's happiest experiences every year is his visit to the Elderslie township picnic. Growing from a small begining, it now has practically all the Sunday Schools of the townships behind it and is an annual event which is looked forward to by the whole township There were nearly a thousand people at the picnic last week, ranging from Elderslie's grand old man, John McDermid, age 86, on whose property the picnic was held down to babes in arms. Many former Elderslie folk take advantage of the opportunity to renew acquaintances with their old-time neighbors and friends and to keep in touch with the younger generation which is coming along. The township picnic, linked up with the Sunday School or some such organization, is an idea which other communities might adopt with advantage.

Mr. David Robertson, K. C., is leaving next Saturday on a trip to the West, which will take him as far as Seattle Mrs. Robertson will accompany him to Kenora where she will visit her daughter Mrs. Roy, and Miss Marion will visit friends at Woodstock.

Mr. Ezra Briggs left Tuesday on a visit to the West. At Winnipeg he will visit a brother who will drive him by motor to North Dakota where other members of the family are located. Mr. Briggs has five brothers and two sisters in the West and he expects to give nearly all of them a call before he returns. He travelled by G. T. R. via the news transcontinental. During his absence his duties as Bailiff and High Constable will be looked after by Mr. David George

The crows are particularly bad in the corn this year. Coun. Wm Johnston of Brant had his whole corn crop captured by the crows. In putting in a second crop Mr. Johnston scattered some strychnine about, which did the job, resulting in a number of casualties among the crows.

Good Rich Blood Means Good Health

Just a Little More Rich, Red Blood Cures Most Ailments.

The lack of sufficient rich, red blood does not end merely in a pale complexion. It is much more serious. Bloodless people are tired, languid, run-down folk who do not enjoy life. Food does not nourish: there's indigestion, heart palpitation, headache, backache and nearly always nervousness. If this bloodlessness is neglected too long, a decline is sure to follow. Just a little more rich, red blood cures all these troubles. Then you have new health, new vitality and pleasure in life. To get more rich, red blood the remedy is Dr. William's Pink Pills. No other medicine increases and enriches the blood so quickly or so surely. This is not a mere claim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done this over and over again throughout why thousands of people always have a good word to say for this medicine. Miss Gertrude, Haffner, Kingston, Ont., says:—"About two years ago I was suffering greatly with anaemia, so much so that I had to give up my situation I became so weak that I could scarcely walk without help. I had no ambition, no colour, no appetite and was constantly troubled with headaches and dizzy spells I was taking medicine from the doctors, but it did not do me a particle of good. One day a friend asked me if I had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Though as the result of my condition I was greatly discouraged, I began the use of the Pills, and thanks to that friend's advice after using a few boxes I began to feel better much better, Under the continued use of the pills I gained in weight, my colour came back and I grew gradually stronger. I so much better that people would ask me what I was taking and I had no hesitation in giving the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I am so grateful for what this medicine has done for me that I will do all I can to extend its use."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from. The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OWEN SOUND

Although Mayor Little has no desire to become the manager of a matrimonial bureau, he is nevertheless willing to be the instrument of bringing together "Two hearts with but a single thought—two hearts that beat as one," if, by so doing he can bring joy and happiness to two lives that may be approaching the verge of life's eventide. His Worship desirous of having the fact publicly known that if there is any widow in Owen Sound or elsewhere willing to link her future with the writer of the following letter, which he has just received and the signature to which we are asked to withhold for the present, he will gladly furnish her with the name of the writer and do whatever else he can to bring about the consummation of the union, provided, of course, that the prospective partners to the alliance are agreeable. Here is the letter:

"Shegquindah, June 26th, 1916.

"To His Worship the Mayor of Owen Sound:—

"Dear Sir.—Having heard that a number of respectable widows have arrived at Owen Sound, seeking homes, and as I am in need of a housekeeper, having lost my wife five years ago, and having but one boy, I should like to marry a woman 45 or 55 years of age and without children and respectable. I am a farmer 65 years old, and healthy and of good character, and if you know any woman there that will answer the description, write me full particulars. Address:—Shegquindah, P. O., Ont.

"P. S.—Thanking you in anticipation of a prompt reply, I remain yours truly,—L. C."

An announcement has been made of the appointment of Miss Helen MacGregor as a deaconess in connection with the First Methodist Church, of Owen Sound for the church year 1916-17. At the last annual meeting of the Methodist Church it was decided to engage a deaconess, if possible, and now that the appointment has been made, she will be a welcome and much valued addition to the needs of this town. Miss Notter, the King's Daughters' deaconess, has had a widely extended mission field in town, and another deaconess for similar work, will certainly be welcomed here.

Recruiting in Grey County is about at a standstill since the departure of the 147th Battalion in May. It is to be regretted that the Battalion has not been brought up to full strength and there does not seem to be a very bright prospect of making up the small shortage at the present time. Perhaps, in the fall, if the men are needed, it would not prove such an arduous task; at present it would be next to impossible, according to a sizing up of the situation. It will be too bad if the Grey Battalion loses its identity by being amalgamated with other battalion Perhaps some other weak units will be utilized to bring the 147th up to full strength. In the meantime it would be well to present the Battalion with the colors donated from the people of the county, That should be done as soon as possible and a military demonstration arranged for Owen Sound if possible.

Mr. A. E. Trout, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, is paying his annual visit to foster homes in different parts of Grey County. He was in Hanover last week investigating a case of alleged ill-treatment of a girl 12 years of age by her parents. The investigation showed that the child had been ill treated and knowing that Mr. Trout had sufficient evidence to establish their guilt the parents consented to give up the child rather than run chances of exposure in the Police Court and consequent punishment for their acts of cruelty. Mr. Trout had the girl placed in a foster home, where he feels satisfied she will be well treated.

The Booth Fisheries Co., the large Chicago fish concern which does an extensive business through Owen Sound, has been granted a Dominion Charter for a Canadian Company, with an authorized capital of $1,000,000. The company will be known as the Booth Fisheries Co., of Canada, and will have its head office in Toronto. This company controls the Dominion Transportation Co., which operates the steamers Caribou and Manitou from Owen Sound.

The fine two-story brick residence of Mr. John McGregor, near Kemble was totally destroyed by fire which originated in the chimney about 1.30 p. m. yesterday. Mr McGregor had put on a fire in the kitchen stove and had gone out to do some work in one of the fields when he happened to notice the house in flames. His wife and children were away at the time, and as there was no one in the house the fire naturally got a good start before it was noticed by the neighbors. Several of the farmers hastily got out their autos and carried a number of nearby men to the rescue, but by the time they reached the spot the house was enveloped in flames, and they therefore confined their efforts to getting out the household effects. Although the men worked like Trojans they succeeded in saving only a portion of the effects' all the beds and bedding falling prey to the flames.

The house was comparatively new and was insured, as also were the contents, but for how much we are not in a position to state. Fortunately Mr. McGregor has another house, a frame cottage, near the house that was destroyed, which will serve as a place of abode pending the rebuilding of the brisk residence.

Greatest Rule of Health

With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: "Daily movement of the Bowels." Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continuously as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The induction of Rev. McDougal D. D., into his new charge of Keady and Peabody took place yesterday in the Presbyterian church at Keady and a large number of the members and friends in the Presbytery were present. The call to Mr. McDougal, who comes from Spencerville Ont., was exceptionally hearty and unanimous and the pastorate promises to be unusually prosperous and a pleasant one. Dr McDougal has served in the mission field in Honan, China. He is also the author of a much quoted book called Rural Life in Ontario and his coming to the Presbytery therefore brings a man of wide interests among the people.

At the services of induction yesterday, the Moderator, Rev. Jamieson of Thornbury, presided. Rev. Robertson of Hoath Head preached and Rev Matheson of Allenford gave the address to the minister and to the people. The ladies of the congregation served a delicious repast after the service which will be a memorable one for the people of the district.

Nervous and Almost Crazy With Pains in the Head

Clergyman Certifies to This Cure of Nervous Prostration by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

No ailment is more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. You may feel better for a day or two, only to find the next day that you have lost ground and are worse than ever. The headaches are worse, languid feelings are terribly depressing. As you lose strength you lose hope and courage and look to the future with fear and trembling.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest blessing that has ever come to the sufferer from nervous exhaustion. It is not narcotic in its influence. It does not deaden the trembling, irritated nerves, but through the medium of the blood nourishes them back to health as nothing else can.

Mrs. Alonzo R. Elmer, Elktown, Kings county, N.B., writes:—"I was very low with nervous prostration and was about discouraged, as I could not sleep nights and was almost crazy with the pain in my head. I had tried many doctors, but seemed to get little benefit from their treatments.

"A friend handed me Dr. Chase's Almanac, so that I might read about the Nerve Food. A single box of this treatment convinced me of its value, for I was better. I cannot tell how many boxes I used, but the results were so highly satisfactory that I cannot praise it too much. My health and strength have been restored so that I can do all my own work, and I recommend the Nerve Food to all who suffer from nervous prostration."

"This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. A. R. Elmer and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be true and correct."—Rev. Arthur A. Wallman.

Some patience is required in the treatment of nervous prostration, but you will not be using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food long before you begin to find your strength and good cheer returning. You will then be encouraged to continue the use of the food cure until cured. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited Toronto.

Bulgaria's Atrocities Upon The Serb

Mail and Empire

There was an intimation in a news despatch published the other day that the Teutons were withdrawing their army of occupation from Serbia in order to place it on the Eastern or Western front, where men are so badly needed. There is no hint, though, that the Bulgarian army will be withdrawn until it is forced out, and until that day comes Serbia will continue to writhe and groan under a harsher despotism than that which has afflicted either Belgium or Poland. The plight of Serbia has not been so generally understood on this continent or in England as have the sufferings of the Belgians and the Poles. Yet of all the hells created by the Central Powers that of Serbia is the deepest. Age-long hatred of the Bulgarians and the Austrians for the Serbs has found vent. The enemy that Austria desired to crush and dismember now lies in her hands. The Serbian army got away, but the Serb civil population and Serbia remains to be tortured and destroyed. Bulgaria's hatred of Serbia is even more bitter. Racial fanaticism has added to the fate of Serbia pangs that Belgium and Poland have escaped

To Destroy or Assimilate,

A London correspondent of the New York Tribune, Mr. Gordon Cordon-Smith, contributes to that paper an article on the conduct of the Austrians and Bulgarians in Serbia. The Bulgarian atrocities are the worse, because Bulgaria occupies a greater part of Serbia than Austria, and probably the Bulgars are by nature more brutal than the Austrians. Certainly, in the Balkan wars they established records of cruelty and barbarism that were only equaled by the Greeks. Their ambition is not so much to assimilate the Serbs as to exterminate them. They realize, however, that this dream is an impracticable one, and that the fraction of the Serb population which they can murder is necessarily small. Nevertheless, they "carry on" to the best of their ability, assisted by the most rigid of censorships, which has kept the world generally in deep ignorance as to what is happening in Serbia.

Indiscriminate Massacre.

Mr Gordon-Smith writes:

"The characteristic feature of the Bulgarian rule is indiscriminate massacre and robbery. In the village of Doglavantz the Bulgarians have massacred the following.

"Trajko Mirosvic, priest and six members of his family, Mircet Ristic and four members of his family, Mileuko Jankovic and six members of his family, Milan Jaunkile and six members of his family, Josip Veljkovic, Sazdan Fillpovic and three members of his family, Boza Jankovic and two members of his family, Vasiljji Markovic and nine members of his family and Stefan Ristic and two members of his family. In most of these cases the entire family was massacred. I could give the names of scores of other victims, but will content myself with merely giving a list of the villages where crimes have been committed. These are Strovja, Prilep, Vitalishte, Rapesh, Krushevo, Chonishte, Ivan, Makova, Tepava, Suhodole, Gostiraghi, Krape, Kestinatz and Rilievo. The murders were perpetrated in various ways; the victims were knifed, shot, beaten, tortured and burned alive. The murderers respected neither age nor sex. Male and female infants in the cradle and people of over seventy have been slaughtered alike. Besides this massacre, torture, mutilation, violation, kidnapping and robbery of the worst type are common.

Looting and Vandalism.

No Serbian is ever paid for anything that the Bulgarians want. Everywhere there is loot. Everything that is useful and can be carried away is taken; what is immovable and may be of use to the owner is destroyed. Private libraries have been removed wholesale, other libraries have been burned. The Bulgarians have started a number of newspapers published in the Serbian language, but edited by Bulgarians, which endeavor to work up a public opinion favorable to Serbia retiring from the war and submitting to her conquerors. The schools have been invaded, and Bulgarian teachers appointed. Insult has been added to injury by naming at least two of these schools after Kristo Botcff, a Bulgarian who had distinguished himself for his hatred of Serbia as greatly as Armand Lafergue has distinguished himself as a hater of Ontario. At the present time Teuton experts are marking a survey of Serbian's forests, no doubt with a view of presently cutting them down and sending the lumber to Bulgaria, Austria and Germany.

The Allies Deceived.

Mr. Gordon-Smith calls attention to an interview given to a Berlin paper not long ago by Mr. Radoslavoff, the Bulgarian Premier, in which he discusses a treaty made between Austria and Bulgaria before the latter entered the war, and by which Serbia was divided between them. Austria was to annex all of Northern Serbia with Belgrade and both Banks of the Morava; while Bulgaria was to have the eastern part of the kingdom, including Nish and a great part of Macedonia. What remains was to go to Montenegro, and Serbia as an independent nation was to wiped of the map. This interview furnished a sidelight upon the lamentable failure of Entente diplomancy in the Balkans. Bulgaria was already a secret partner of Austria and Germany when she pretended to be negotiating with the Allies. When the final Peace treaty is drawn up, no belligerent will receive less consideration than Bulgaria.

Editorial

THE Owen Sound papers have joined the procession and advanced their subscription rates to $1.50 per year.

THE value of a local paper may be cheap at $1.50 and very dear at $1. It all depends upon the paper.

Rumor, apparently well founded, says there is a possibility of a third party being organized in Ontario.

Walkerton will lay a mile of cement walks this year and the street committee plan to submit a permanent roads by-law in January.

The McGarry House, Lucknow, has been closed up, the lower windows boarded over and a barbed wire fence put around the premises. It looks like nothing doing.

Hepworth proposes to tax liveries $50. per season, whether the livery be by horses or motor, and the rate the liveryman can charge shall not exceed 15 cents per mile This looks like radical legislation.

THE Tara Leader referring to the recent North Perth Election says "Conservatives may well ask themselves what good end they serve in sacrificing their party to aid Liberals to get into power"

FROM a recent judgment it appears that the municipality has the power to trim or remove trees on the highway in the front of private residences, under by-law, and by giving ten days notice to the owner of the residence.

The Meaford town council will not meet during July and August. This is however no reason why the meeting of a town council cannot be held monthly, instead of twice a month. If this rule were adopted business would be transacted and useless talking eliminated.

THOSE old tree planting days were good ideas, but what we need is a "clean up" day and we need it badly right here in t town of Wiarton. The condition of scores of front yards, back yards and boulevards is not far short of disgraceful. Civic holiday should be devoted to cleaning up.

THE results of the Entrance examinations have been a surprise. In Tara, Hepworth, Lions Head, Wiarton and Chesley there has been a slaughter of the innocents. It is rather disappointing to have to spend an extra year in Senior 4th, but as a rule it is all the better for the student.

THE question, so far as this town is concerned is, who is going to pay the taxes? The hotel assessment has been greatly reduced. Some may think that they got more than they should, but what they got they will hold on to, and the rest of us must put up the loss. Just why the reduction should begin January 1st 1916 instead of September 1st 1916 is something we cannot understand. It is plain as day that we must resist every attempt at further reductions in assessments, and henceforth anyone wanting exemptions will have to put up a strong argument.

The Fruit Crop

OTTAWA, July 12, 1916:—

The following information has been received by telegram at the office of the Fruit Commissioner this morning, relative to the apple situation in Ontario,

East of Toronto the crop is very disappointing and will not exceed that of 1915. There has been very serious development of scab, and a heavy dropping of fruit in all sections. Unsprayed orchards are practically worthless on account of poor quality. There has also been some damage by hail in the Cobourg district. In western and northern parts of the province there is a medium crop, but the quality, particularly in Western Ontario, is good only in well sprayed orchards.

Every woman thinks she is a prima donna when it comes to putting A baby to sleep.

Mr Edmund Kalbfiesche and family visited at the home of Mr and Mrs Urbshott on Sunday, went by auto.

The strawberry season is over, the dry, hot weather hastening it.

Post-Master Frame has rigged up a sail-boat and is enjoying the breezes of the bay these hot days.

Death of Samuel Evans

The death occurred on the 20th con. Keppel, on Sunday of Samuel Evans, aged 80 years. The deceased was one of the pioneers of the township and came from near Kingston, where he had been engaged in lumbering. Until quite recently he was a familiar figure on the streets. He is survived by a widow, one son and three daughters. One son, now deceased, was a physican of considerable ability, the other son is a druggist. The daughters are Mrs. David Hill, Mar; Mrs B. Hodgins, Keppel and Miss Eliza Evans at home. The late Mr Evans was a most worthy citizen, and was one of nature's noblemen He was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him.

The funeral took place Tuesday and interment was made in the Oxenden cemetery.

Home for the Harvest

Wiarton got an idea Monday evening of a harvest excursion train in the West, when hundreds of laborers pour into a town looking for work. About 130 members of C. Company of the Bruce battalion arrived in town Monday evening, having obtained leave of absence for a month to assist with the farming. All told there are now about 150 members of C. Company in this vicinity.

The less honor a man has the more sensitive he is on the subject.

226th Anniversary Of Battle Of The Boyne Loyally Celebrated

The Leader

The 226th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne was right royally celebrated in Tara yesterday. The day was extremely hot and the sun shone down in all its glory. It was an ideal 12th of July day. Early in the morning the crowd commenced to gather and by noon it is estimated the number of visitors would number 5000. Several of the local lodges arrived in town before ten o'clock and the familiar sound of fife and drum was continued throughout the day. The Wiarton Band came down on the early morning train and met all excursion trains. There were four trains, one from the south and three from the north and they all brought big crowds especially from Owen Sound and Wiarton. After the morning reception, dinner was served at the Queens hotel and by the Methodist, Anglican and Presbyterian churches and all did a big business and there were ample provisions to accommodate such a large crowd of people. The town was gaily decorated with banners, flags and evergreens. About 1.30 o'clock the big procession formed and the route was down Yonge Street to River Street and then east to Main Street, then west to Yonge Street again, then north to McDougald's Grove. The procession was formed up in the following order with their banners—Desboro Lodge, Wiarton Band, Dobbinton Lodge, Tara Lodge, Chesley Band, Chesley Lodge, Williscroft Lodge, Arkwright Lodge, Hanover Lodge, Cluyering Lodge, Owen Sound Fife Band, Owen Sound Lodge (Ernescliffe) Oxenden Lodge, Owen Sound Lodge No. 2044, Owen Sound Band, Owen Sound Lodge No. 846 Owen Sound Pipe Band, Owen Sound Lodge No 1319, Rosemont Lodge, Jackson Lodge, Allenford Lodge, Purple Valley Lodge, Sarawak Lodge, Wolseley Lodge, Hope Bay Lodge, Wiarton Pipe Band, Wiarton Lodge, Saugeen Lodge, Kilsyth Lodge, Vesta Lodge, Cape Croker Lodge. The prizes were awarded as follows—Best dressed Lodge, Coronation. Owen Sound, No. 846; Lodge having largest number in procession. Arkwright; Lodge coming the longest distance, Hope Bay; Lodge with best banner, Oxenden.

County Master, Jas. Crawford, presided at the gathering at the grove. An address of welcome was made by Reeve Grant, after which inspiring addresses were made by Colonel A E. Belcher, Toronto; Sheriff D. M. Jermyn, Wiarton; Chas Green, Southampton, Wm. McDonald M.P. P., Chesley, and H. T. Potts, Tara.

The bands rendered splendid music throughout the day and their efforts were much appreciated.

The dining halls did a big business the Methodist taking in $370.00 the Anglicans $325.00 and the Presbyterians $250.00.

The booths did a great business. The Red Cross took in about $110. and the Boy Scouts nearly $100.00, all the other booths did exceptionally well also.

The Lacrosse match on the Pleasure Grounds in the afternoon drew a considerable number of people. Owen Sound won by 10-4.

The Leader endeavored to find the oldest Orangeman in the procession and as far as we could learn the honors fell to Mr Thos. Leslie, of Jackson, lodge No. 1247. Mr Leslie has been an Orangeman for 66 years and during all that time has only missed one celebration. He lived at Invermay over 50 years ago. He still enjoys good health and may he live to see many more celebrations.

The crowd was orderly and there was no disturbance and the day was also devoid of any accidents.

The Bowling Tourney

King Sol smiled pleasantly on the tourney here last week. It was the fifth under the auspices of the Club and the weather conditions were most ideal. The lawn was in excellant condition. The attendance was not quite up to previous years, due entirely to the war, but those present had a most enjoyable two days outing. The following is the score.

Douglas and Wright to play off in Owen Sound.

NOTES

In bowling a close game is not often won until the last shot. There is nothing certain, good playing can do a lot, but good luck can often do more.

In the finals, in the trophy match, the rink skipped by Mr James Symon was ahead until the last end, in fact it looked like a win for him from start to finish, but his opponent Mr. Batchelor pulled up on the last two ends, and with the last shot came out one ahead.

The Meaford bowlers have got out a very attractive announcement of their tournament.

There were 24 rinks, all told, playing on the green so 96 bowlers make quite a sight. There were three rinks from Southampton, four from Owen Sound, two from Meaford and one from each of the following places Lucknow, Chesley, Chatsworth, Kincardine, Paisley, Port Elgin, Cargil and Lions Head.

CHAPTER XIV.
The Creole's Story.

SHE sank down on a locker and hid her face in her hands. The pitiful dejection in her attitude compelled me to bend over her in quick sympathy.

She looked up into my face. "I am not afraid. Only I cannot bear the thought that you doubt me ever so little. I know I have been indiscreet, that you might justly deem me an adventuress. But I am not, Gordon Craig; I am a good woman left to fight alone, and I must have your faith or break down utterly. Do you believe me—all I have told you—that I am really the wife of Philip Henley?"

"Yes," I answered through clinched teeth, struggling to control myself.

For a moment she sat in silence, and, while I dared not look at her, I knew her eyes were upon my face.

"Then I will do whatever you say, go wherever you tell me," she promised gravely. "I cannot decide for myself. I am too confused to think clearly, but I trust you as a friend."

I drew aside the curtain draping one of the after ports and glanced out, eager for anything to distract attention. Through the clear glass I could see the curve of shore line forming the little cove. Just within the foam of the breakers a half dozen men were launching a small boat. I stared at them an instant before realizing what it meant. Then I dropped the curtain.

"The mate is coming aboard," I said swiftly. "You must go to your room; here is the key; lock yourself in and only open when you hear my voice."

"And you"—

"I must take care of myself; don't worry about me."

Without so much as a glance at our prisoner she opened the door and, with a swift look about the outer cabin, disappeared.

I must keep Henley concealed and silent until darkness rendered our escape possible. In order to accomplish this it would be necessary to prevent either the steward or the mate from entering the cabin. All peril from the negro I dismissed quickly, confident that his knowledge of my standing on board would impel him to accept any explanation I might make. But with Herman the situation was not so clear. Whether or not the captain had informed him that I was a volunteer on their lawless expedition I did not know. I had him placed as a gruff, hard fisted sea dog who would strike first and investigate later, one in dealing with whom either diplomacy or force might prove equal failures. Yet I possessed this advantage: I could deal with him alone. With but two watch officers on board only one at a time could leave the deck, and Broussard, I felt assured, had no privileges in the captain's cabin. From what I knew of Henley I doubted if even the first officer felt privileged to invade the privacy of his chief without some special reason. There was discipline on board, strict discipline. There had to be to control such a crew.

As I lifted the helpless captain into his berth, his eyes glaring at me in impotent rage, my ears could distinguish the sound of oars as the small boat rounded the stern of the Sea Gull. Much as I despised the fellow, I hated to gag him, yet our safety depended on his silence, and I dared not neglect the precaution. Even as the boat grated along the side I stepped forth into the main cabin and sat down to wait. To my surprise and relief, it was Broussard who came down the companion stairs, driving the steward before him.

"Vat for you loaf, hey?" he snapped fiercely. "By gar, I teach you! I work four—seek—hour, an' nodding to eat. You say ze captaine send you? Bah! Eet vas not so—nevaire! Vat you have, hey?"

The negro mumbled something through thick lips, and the brute mate gripped him by the collar of his jacket, shaking the fellow as he might a dog and hurling him half across the deck.

"Sacre! I keel you for 5 cent! Queek now—jump! Put all on right way, by gar, or I show you! Here, you—ze brandy furst!"

The steward slunk into the passage leading to the pantry, and the creole, turning, saw me.

"Ah, m'sieur, I saw you not. Pardon ze roughness, but I lose ze temper, m'sieur."

"That is not to be wondered at," I answered, affecting good humor. "Has the first mate been ashore?"

"Oui, m'sieur—asleep in the sun, I bet you! Bah! Any man could watch the sea from the cliff. Dat job not need ze furst officer. Sacre, but 'tis a dog's life at sea!"

I nodded my head, too busily engaged with my own thoughts to give much consideration to his troubles. Still, the situation as revealed by Broussard's complaints would afford me a respite of at least four hours. If this was the creole's watch below, then Herman would keep the deck. Even lying there at anchor those fellows would not leave the crew alone. They was too much at stake, and, besides, there must still remain a lookout ashore. However, it was a relief to know that the German had nothing of importance to communicate to Henley, no occasion even to come below, watching the frightened negro hurry back and forth. At last, satisfied that everything available had been produced, the former strode across to the table, jerked out a chair and waved his hand toward me in invitation to join him.

"The lusy dog! 'Tis likely all you will get, m'sieur. Maybe you eat with me, hey? Or would you wait for ze capitaine?"

"I'll take pot luck with you, Broussard," I agreed genially, speaking loud enough so the negro would overhear. "I've got to get accustomed to camp fare and am hungry enough to begin. Besides, Captain Henley is laid up in his berth with a sick headache and doesn't wish to be disturbed. He told me to tell you, Louis."

"Yes, sah. Shall Ah make you sum coffee, sah? Massa Broussard he don't nebber drink none."

"Yes. And, by the way, Louis, take a lunch into the lady. Fix up something neat if you can, and let me know when it is ready."

"You know ze capitaine before may-be?" Broussard asked.

"No," I answered, wondering what he could be aiming at, but willing to give him a free rein. "But he seems to be a pretty good fellow."

"You think so—hey! Maybe so while he get you with beem. Den he ze devil. I know, m'sieur. I see beem for long while on ze ocean; zat what you fin' out."

"What has he done to you?" I asked carelessly.

"By gar! What!" firing up at the recollection. "Get out o' here, yer coon!" turning fiercely upon the steward, and then leaning across the table, lowering his voice, which yet trembled with passion. "Sacre, m'sieur, it was I do his dirty work five—seek—year. He no sailor, but I sail ze sheep for him—see? Tree, four time I sail ze sheep, an' he make ze money. Vat he geef me? Maybe $100 ze month—bah! yet was to laugh. Zen he fin' zat Dutch hog, Herman, an' make of beem te furst officer. I not like eet. I tells

"It was I do his dirty work five—seek—year."

ze capitaine, an', by gar, he keep me tied up before ze port watch. You stan' zat, m'sieur?"

I shook my head, uncertain just what stand to take.

"Never!" he went on, barely pausing for breath. "I show ze half breed. You see hees mother—she mulatto. Ze dog!"

"How do you know that?" I asked, surprised.

"I listen. I hear ze talk, but I say noddings, m'sieur. Vat I care while he treat me right? But now I show beem vat I know. He not lord eet over me ven ol' Sallie vas his mother—by gar, no!"

"Sallie! You cannot mean that mulatto woman back on the plantation?"

"Sure! The ol' judge was his father."

The whole thing came to me in a flash as I stared across at the mate, who scarcely realized yet the revelation made. He was brooding over his wrongs and how he was to be avenged.

"By gar, I forget," he said softly. "You vas after ze monies, too, hey? Bah! Eet make no difference vat you know. He haf you here all right, var you keep still or"— And he drew the back of a knife across his throat. "I vonder he not keel you furst, m'sieur. Maybe he use you an' den have you shot in ze south. Out, zat be ze easy way. Why you ever cum down an' claim to be Philip Henley—hey?"

"That was all a mistake." I returned deliberately. "I came merely to look after his interest."

"Interest! Why a dead man have interest?"

"Do you mean Philip Henley is dead?"

"You pretend not know? By Gar, eet queer! Vell, I tell you, m'sieur. Ze bole back or ze picture. I lie there one night an' leesten, week, ten days ago. Ze capitaine talk with Sallie. He have letter from north, one, two sheet paper, an' eet tell beem how eet all vas. Some one write beem. I tink maybe Pierre Vonique, who want way long time. No matter. Vat be told was sat M'sieur Philip die—die queek from accident. Nevah speak, an' when zey pick beem up zar was noddin' in bees pocket. See, m'sieur! He vas robbed. Vonique he bear about eet an' fin' se body. No one know who se man is. But Vonique know. To prove eet he send se ring—ze signet ring—off ze finger. Zen he write: 'Look out! Some one has ze papers. Watch who comes!' Zat vas true, m'sieur."

"And some one did come, Broussard," I said quietly, "a fellow with a letter from Philip. Eet was sign beem name, beem handwrite, appoint beem overseer."

"And what became of him?"

The creole shrugged his shoulders.

"'Tis not my business, m'sieur. He go way somewhere queek. Maybe he not like ze place."

The dead face of the bearded man in the rear room rose before me. But Broussard went on:

"Zen you came, m'sieur, long wis se girl. Ze capitaine he laugh, eet was so easy. Why ze girl, m'sieur?"

"Philip Henley was married."

"Non, non, impossible; eet cannot be shown. 'Tis not of ze record. Ze capitaine not fraid any more. He just play wis you like ze cat wis ze mouse. He know Philip dead—he has ze proof—an' now he breaks ze will an' gets se monies. Ze dog rich now; zen he be more rich."

"Do you know an executor of the will named Neale—P. B. Neale?"

"Oui, m'sieur."

"Who is he? What does he look like?"

"He vas a planter two mile west Carrollton. I see beem maybe zes days ago—leetle short man wif bald head."

He poured out another drink of brandy, and, downing it, pushed back his chair.

"By gar, I talk too mooch, maybe," he said, yawning. "But eet make no diff. Ze capitaine he cop ze monies just ze same, an' eet better you know. Now I turn in an' sleep." He crossed the cabin to his stateroom and closed the door.

The facts were clear. Philip Henley was dead, killed while intoxicated, either accidentally, or for purposes of robbery. And he had been robbed when picked up by the police, nothing to identify him being found. Beyond doubt this half breed brother had dispatched a man north to look him up—possibly to assassinate him if necessary. The fellow had either done the job, or been anticipated in his purpose. In either case he was present to identify the body and had written at once, inclosing the signet ring as proof. That was the same ring we had found in the arbor, and which Viola had instantly recognized. And those men who had made a fool of me were the robbers. They had found papers and letters which opened before them this scheme of fraud; then, with his residence address, using his keys, they had learned everything necessary for the completion of their plans. A copy of the judge's will must have been in Henley's possession, and, no doubt, some lawyer's letter, describing the situation, received since the departure of his wife. Apparently everything two clever crooks needed to know was in their possession. All they needed to do was pull the strings, using a figurehead to represent Philip Henley. That was the part for which I was chosen. They had to construct a lie in order to interest me, yet that was comparatively easy, and there was a strong probability of success but for peculiar conditions of which they could know nothing. The half breed had never been mentioned. He was the monkey wrench thrown unexpectedly into their well oiled machine. Yet even without him, the reappearance of Philip Henley's wife was sufficient to cause disaster.

Philip Henley's wife! The magic of the words halted me. Then now, if all I had learned was true, she was his widow. What would that mean to me? The swift beating of my heart answered. I knew this—that, however sincerely she might have once supposed she loved Henley, his neglect, cruelty, dissipation, had long ago driven all sentiment from her. Before we met her girlhood affection had been utterly crushed and destroyed. Loyal she was and true to every tradition of her womanhood. It was to guard his interest, not her own, that she had accompanied me on this expedition, risking her good name in the belief that he was unable to care for his own. What would she do now? How would she feel toward me? What change would it make in the friendly relationship between us? I longed to tell her and yet shrank from the task.

The sunlight streaming in through the upper transom told me the sun was dipping into the west. If we were to get away when night came there were many things to consider first. Especially was I obsessed now with a desire to overhaul the captain's papers and secure those which would be of benefit. We must possess more proof than the garrulous talk of the second mate, and surely that proof would be discovered in the after cabin. The noise of the steward's dish washing had ceased, and cautious investigation disclosed him sound asleep, curled up like a dog, on the deck. Assured as to this, I ventured up the companion stairs and indulged in a glance forward. Except for a group of sailors doing some sail patching in the shade of the chart house, no one was visible. The vessel rocked gently, and far forward there was a sound of hammering. The mate would be there overseeing the job, whatever it might be. Surely no better opportunity than this could be given.

I stole back, silent and unobserved, listened an instant to Broussard's steady breathing, then unlocked the captain's door and entered his cabin. His wicked eyes, blazing with hate, glared at me as I approached, and, inspired by some sudden feeling of sympathy, I bent over and removed the gag from his mouth. The result was an outburst of profanity, bristling with threats. But these as instantly ceased as I picked up the cloth again.

"Do you mean to kill me?" he asked.

"Not unless I have to, but I hold some things more valuable than your life. Just at present I mean to look over your papers."

CHAPTER XV.
Under Way.

HE lay quiet, but with glaring eyes following my every movement as I threw open the drawers of the desk and began handling their contents. For some time I discovered nothing of special interest. I came upon one securely locked. I tried key after key before discovering the right one, realizing from Henley's squirming that I must be drawing near the goal. The first paper touched was a copy of the will, and a little further rummaging put me into possession of various documents which I believed from a cursory glance at their contents were of utmost value. These I hastily transferred to my coat pocket, making sure I had the original letter describing of Philip Henley's death, as well as the copy of a memorandum which the half breed had evidently drawn up for the convenience of his lawyers.

"I think I've got your number," I said finally.

"You've got to get away first," he sneered defiantly, "and you'll not find that so easy. My turn will come yet, you spy, and then you'll learn how I bite."

I laughed, feeling no mercy.

"All in good time, friend. I think you have had your inning. Now it's mine. So you are Charles Henley?"

He did not answer.

"The illegitimate son of Judge Henley and a negro mother. That's a clever forgery, that paper of legal adoption, I admit. Must have had legal advice for that. What did you pay the lawyers?"

He stared at me with compressed lips.

"Not ready to confess yet? Well, you will be. By the way, who was that Pierre who wrote telling you of Philip's death? Not Vonique, was it?"

"You devil!" he burst forth, tortured beyond resistance. His teeth ground together savagely, and he burst into a string of oaths.

"That's enough." And I got to my feet. "I see I'll have to gag you again."

I replaced the gag and took a survey of the cabin to make sure all was secure. Nothing had occurred in the outer cabin during my absence, but the growing shadows evidenced the approach of twilight. In those waters night came quickly. Locking the captain's door, I entered my own stateroom and sat down on the lower berth to wait, leaving my door slightly ajar. The cabin grew constantly darker, although outside, through the open port, I could still distinguish glennis of light along the water surface and the heights of the island. Herman came down and entered his stateroom, but without closing the door. He remained but a moment or two and then hurried back on deck. Suddenly a gust of wind blew in through the port, and it began to rain gently, but in huge drops. Far away was the rumble of thunder, echoing across the open sea. The storm was evidently coming up slowly from the east, as all the western sky was clear and streaked with golden red.

Then a sailor came down the companion stairs, his oilskins rustling, and pounded on the second mate's door.

"All hands, Mr. Broussard!"

There was a muffled response, and the creole, buttoning his jacket as he passed, followed the other on deck. A moment later I heard the slow throb of the engines and glanced out to note the shore line slipping past into the gloom. The Sea Gull was under way.

It would be some time yet—fifteen or twenty minutes at the best—before I dared attempt to carry out my plan of escape. In spite of the overspreading cloud and steady rainfall daylight lingered in the west, and a spectral glow hung above the ocean. There were preliminaries to be attended to, and I was eager to be busy.

The steward had aroused from his nap, and I watched him lower the table, and spread it with a white cloth. Now the distant clutter of dishes proved him to be in the pantry. He could be dealt with there even to better advantage than in the cabin, and, noncombatant as he undoubtedly was, I felt it safer to place him beyond power to create any alarm. The task confronting me was far too serious to leave our rear unguarded. I slipped silently along the short passageway, and, watching his back closely, investigated the lock of the pantry door. It was of the spring variety, easily set to fasten, and could not be opened from the inside. As I pressed in the catch there was a clicking sound, which caused the negro to turn around, the whites of his eyes gleaming oddly.

"Oh, my lordy! I nebber heard you, Massa Craig. By golly, sah, dis yere niggah sure thought he was shot."

"Not yet, Louis," I replied quietly, standing in the opening, one hand still on the latch. "But it is just as well for you to be serious about it—I've got the weapon all right—see," and I pushed the revolver butt forward into his range of vision. "I don't mean to hurt you so long as you keep still."

"What—what you a-goin' fer to do, sah?"

"Get away from this ship if I can, and you are going to help by remaining right where you are, boy. First, what's in the small boat, hung to davits astern—provisions, I mean?"

"That's a breaker of fresh water, an'—an' a package o' sea biscuit, sah. Ah—Ah reckon that's all."

"Good! Do you happen to know how far we are away from the main coast?"

"A-bout thirty-five mile, sah."

"Florida?"

"Yes, sah."

"Can you tell me the compass point?"

He scratched his head, his confidence that he was not going to be hurt returning as I questioned him.

"Waal, sah, I ain't no sailorman myself—no, sah—but de second mate

NOW AT THIRD LINE

British Have Pierced Second Series of German Trenches.

For First Time Since Siege Warfare Began the British Have Made a Cavalry Charge—Part of Fauroauv Wood Has Been Captured in Rear of German Third Line of Defences—Four Miles Advance in Two Weeks.

LONDON, July 17.—Fighting with dashes here and there of the picturesque, resulted in further extensive gains Saturday for General Haig's troops in Picardy.

The village of Longueval, which Friday night marked the apex of the British salient, has been left behind, while north of Bazentin le Grand British troops broke through the German third line of defence and took part of the powerfully fortified Fauroauv Wood.

To the north, pushing forward from the direction of Ovillers, the British are fighting in the outskirts of Pozieres, junction point of two military roads and main obstacle to an advance on the Heights of Martinpuich, which commands the surrounding battleground.

In the Bazentin le Petit sector, extending their gains of the previous day, the British have won control of the entire forest, which takes its name from the village. Here a Bavarian high officer with the whole of his staff fell prisoners.

The advance of the British is marked by fighting unlike anything before seen in western Europe during this war. The romance of other days is being renewed. For instance, against a position strongly held by the Germans armed with portable machine guns, there was a cavalry charge by the famous Dragoon Guards. Not since the German legions first swept down through Belgium and the western front seen horsemen advancing to the charge. The trench warfare put an end to that. The charge won. The Guards dashing over a terrain pocked with shell holes, swept through the German ranks and, turning swept back. The Germans fled from the position they were organizing. The British losses were small.

And, while this picture brought to staring infantrymen a vision of other days, scores of duels were being fought above earth by British and German aviators. Low hanging clouds handicapped the fliers, and the battles were fought within easy sight of the foot soldiers beneath. General Haig Sunday night announced that seven German machines had been shot down in the last day.

The War Office has given out a statement by the commanding general which shows that the British in the two weeks of fighting have advanced four miles from the German first line. Two successive systems of powerfully organized positions, including field works, redoubts, trench labyrinths, dugouts, underground mazes and supported by a number of fortified villages, have been carried.

Sir Douglas Haig says in his report: "All continues to go well on the British front, and at one point we forced the enemy back to his third system of defence, more than four miles to the rear of his original front trenches at Pricourt and Mametz.

In the past 24 hours we have captured over 2,000 prisoners, including a regimental commander of the Third Guards Division, and the total number of prisoners taken by the British since the battle began now exceeds 10,000."

With the exception of heavy bombardments there were no events of importance on the Somme battle front Sunday. The British admit a withdrawal from the sections of the German third system of defence they penetrated yesterday.

A night attack against the French resulted in the recapture of Biaches and La Maisonette. The War Office at Paris Sunday night claimed that both villages had been won back. The Teuton attack in this region was delivered in a fog, the French defenders of the town being taken by surprise. Before the Germans could organize themselves in the two hamlets, however, General Foch sent forward strong reserves, whose counter-attacks forced the Germans to retire.

While the German main headquarters officially tells of spirited fighting on the British front, General Haig Sunday night disposed of the engagements as "of no importance." That the British are preparing for another surge is indicated, however, by the announcement that the big guns are steadily bombarding the German lines. The howitzers, which have enabled the British to batter their way through two systems of defence, have been brought up across the captured terrain, and are now battering at the third line.

That the Germans in their retreat from their second line left behind great quantities of war stores, including some powerful guns, was made known Sunday night in the regular report from headquarters in France.

Five heavy howitzers and four 77-millimetre guns were captured by the British.

Deutschland Is Merchant Ship.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The State Department formally ruled Saturday that the German submarine Deutschland is a merchant vessel and entitled to treatment as such. In announcing the ruling, Acting Secretary Polk said it was not to be taken as a precedent and that any similar cases arising in the future would be dealt with on their own merits.

Has Raised Age Limit.

COPENHAGEN, July 17.—It is reported that Germany has raised the military age limit above 45.

DISMAY IN GERMANY.

Amazement at Success of Second Blow Gives Way to Anxiety.

ROTTERDAM, July 16. — The British army's new blow has caused the deepest anxiety in German hearts when the forward movement, perhaps, is only in its first stages. It is fully realized that this success is not only of importance itself, but has infinitely a greater significance than the assault on the first line.

Whilst German headquarters were prepared for the necessity of giving way at some points when the British offensive was first launched they believed that the second line could be able to withstand all pressure.

The positions just captured were defended with great strength. After taking of the first line by the tremendous British attack efforts were made to reinforce the second line with men and guns and troops brought up, not from other fronts, but large drafts of even fresh formations from depots behind the front and also in Germany.

The Germans reckoned on a repetition of the Neuve Chapelle-Loos-Champagne, when, by concentrating troops at the points threatened, they prevented any further advance.

That the second British blow succeeded is recognized as the most significant fact associated with any of the Allies' military operations since the beginning of the war. It is possible that the Germans did not realize in time the tremendous force the Allies would put into their blow, and they did not abandon the offensive against Verdun.

Although a certain number of troops were hastened away to some districts, they were quickly replaced with drafts from depots.

The German Government, through the press, is represented the fighting on the Meuse as of real importance in the situation on the western front. On the successful British offensive the military critics are silent with unanimity which cannot be accidental, whilst all the newspapers give prominence to trivial German successes in the Verdun district.

A neutral traveler from Berlin states when the report came that the English offensive had really commenced the people were amazed, and for two days did not believe it. The amazement now, however, has given way to dismay. The moral effect of the British success is even of greater importance than the results achieved on the field. The British effort is a spiritual equivalent to an invasion of Germany.

COUNTER-BLOW AT VERDUN.

General Nivelle Makes Progress Against Besiegers.

LONDON, July 17.—General Nivelle, defender of Verdun, Sunday launched a strong counter-offensive against the Germans on both banks of the Meuse. Throughout the day the French have made progress, especially in the region of Fleury, one of the key positions on the north-eastern front, according to the midnight report from Paris.

The French attacks, which began Saturday evening, realized gains not only south and west of Fleury, but south-west of Thiaumont, on the eastern bank of the river, and east of Hill 304, on the western bank, in addition a movement by the Germans which sought to penetrate the wooded section between the Meuse and Pepper Hill was broken up.

The Berlin statement received Sunday afternoon admits a French success near Thiaumont.

The Russian forces sent to France are on the Champagne front.

Fight in Sydenham.

OWEN SOUND, July 17.—Saturday morning Magistrate Creasor imposed a fine of $30 and costs upon Robert Artley, of Sydenham Township, on information laid by Albert Gillesby, a neighboring farmer, who charged Artley with assault. The case arose out of a long-standing feud in the neighborhood of Sheppard Lake. Artley struck Gillesby in the face, smashing his cheek bone so seriously that he had to go to the hospital for an operation. Artley laid a counter-charge against Gillesby and his son, but the charge was dismissed with costs. The feud has caused a lot of sensational talk as the Artleys are heavy land owners in the section. In fining the accused, the police magistrate severely reprimanded Artley, and his brothers, all of whom are unmarried, and said that they should be serving their country instead of fomenting trouble.

Paper No Longer Barred.

LONDON, July 17.—Abbe Lemire, of Hazebroucke, priest deputy in the French Chamber, has been permitted to resume his ecclesiastical duties, and the ban has been removed from his paper, La Cri de Flandre. Abbe Lemire fell under the displeasure of the Catholic Church owing to his attitude in the dispute between Church and State over the Separation Law. Having made an apology and rendered special services as Mayor of Hazebrouck, which is an important town for military purposes, the Abbe has been restored to the favor of the Pope.

Famous Frenchman Dead.

PARIS, July 17.—Prof. Elie Metchnikoff, famous bacteriologist, is dead. Prof. Elie Metchnikoff was world-famous as an exponent of theories for the prolongation of human life. He was most popularly known as the great advocate of the "sour milk cure" for old age.

Prof. Metchnikoff was the author of a number of books, and in 1908 received $20,000 as his share of the Nobel Prize for medical research.

St. Thomas Man Fell Dead.

LONDON, Ont., July 17.—James Webster, Curtis street, St. Thomas, 64 years of age, dropped dead Saturday at the plant of the McCormick Manufacturing Company, where he has been employed for six weeks.

Farm Laborers Wanted

The Western Province of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of Farm Laborers for Spring Seeding and Summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada moreover, it was always necessary to bring from twenty five to thirty thousand Laborers from Eastern Points for the Harvest Season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy, and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the Lines of the Canadian Northern Railway on account of the difficulty experinsed in obtaining Labor which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C. # The Canadian Echo

VOL. XL.—No. WIARTON, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1916 $1.50 per year, 1.00 if paid in advance W No

Forced To Raise
The Subscription Rate Of The Echo

On September 15th the subscription rate of The Echo will be advanced to $1.50 per year. By far the greater number of county weeklies are now $1-50. Last February the majority of the weeklies in Bruce County adopted this rate, and to-day The Echo is about the very last to fall into line. Last February we had no idea of following the others, we had decided to remain at the one dollar,to-day we are determined to strike out, hit or miss, for we know that a weekly paper, of the same class as The Echo cannot be published under present conditions less than $1.50. If anyone thinks that it can he is welcome to the job. It is now just 13 years ago since The Echo became the property of the present manager. Wages to day are just 100 per cent higher than they were then, while every article that goes on the table has increased practically 100 per cent. Is it then justice, or British fair play, to expect a paper at the some old price? When The Echo was established 40 years ago it took one days pay at $1 to subscribe for it, now a days pay is $2, so at $1.50 it is cheaper to the day laborer than it was 40 years ago. It took over 12 doz of eggs at 8 cents to pay for it, now it takes 6 doz of eggs at 25c to pay for it at $1.50 so at the advanced rate it is easier for the farmer to pay for it than it was 40 years ago- Just as Reeve Craig, of Amabel said a few days ago the local papers are cheaper to-day at $1.50 than they were at $1 ten years ago. We do not think it necessary to go on explaining the reason of our action, it would be an insult to the intelligence of our readers They know that practically everything has advanced, and the man who does not advance with the tide must expect to go down to an early grave. Everything that goes into the production of a paper has so advanced in price that a country weekly, that is worth reading, is compelled to raise its rates.

Well, how does the advanced rate work? This is the point we wanted to know. The Bruce Herald, Walkerton, reports that it lost 3 subscribers since it adopted this rate and have taken on about 30 new subscribers. The Port Elgin Times has practically the same story, and this is what we hear from all quarters If the people in these places are reasonable why should we think they are not here. So far we have every reason to suppose The Echo will have the same story.

"You might just as well have the $1 50, said Mr Cecil Swale, as he wished to pay that amount last January. "Go ahead at your $1.50 and I'll stand by you said Mr H. F. Lowey, Oxenden. We will not do without it for $1,50 said both Mr. James Greig, Barrow Bay, and Mr. Lytle Spears, Tobermory. "It is easier for me to pay $1.50 said Mrs. because I get a higher price for my butter and eggs."

Now, gentlemen, this is our story. We have been endeavoring to give you a good local paper If we are to keep it up to its present standard we must advance the rate, and we intend to improve the paper. After all why should we talk so much about a paltry 3 cents per week matter and that is all the whole thing amounts to.

The newspaper is about the cheapest thing in the world. It is a paying investment, just as Mr Krugg, Mar, said it is worth more than $1.50 per year to a farmer to learn about the auction sales, and many households save many dollars by learning of a cheap sale. But you say The Family Herald has not advanced its price. Well if we could get the advertising rate of papers in this class we would not either, Where there is a cheap paper there is always a fat advertising rate, or big money behind the enterprise.

Up to September 15th 1916, renewals for one year, new subscriptions and all arrearage can be settled at the rate of $1 per year, but after that date $1.50 will be charged to everyone without any exception.

OLIPHANT

The concert held at the Bechtel cottage on Thursday evening and gotten up principally by members of the 'Merry-go-round' was a complete success and $43 will be forwarded to the Belgian relief fund as the result. Mr King ably performed the duties of chairman and the program was excellent. Miss Kilborn from Owen Sound delighted the audience with her singing and the Misses Edith and Ruth Bechtel gave excellent readings, the latter rendition of a humorous poem concerning "Uncle Sam's" attitude regarding the European struggle was exceedingly well given and kept the large crowd laughing. Refreshments were sold and some little side shows brought in good returns. All went home quite satisfied.

A number of young ladies from Chesley have been occupying their inn cottage and they entertained a few officers of the Bruce battalion among whom were Lieutenants Roland, McDonald, Hay and Private Hoover. Lieut. Patterson from Wiarton is also here.

Our own boys Privates Wm. McKenzie Frank Eyre and Roy Mooro returned home last week and will remain for a time.

Ptes. Garnet Bartman of Tobermory and J. Carter of Purple Valley with Misses Bennet and Duke spent an afternoon at Oliphant on their way home.

Miss Margaret Hardie, of Chicago, and Ray Herrett of Lima Olin arrived last week and Rev. J. S. Hardie of Lochalsh, Rev. Mr Henderson of Hanover and his son Chantcer of Vermont came on Monday.

Kenneth Appleby of Harrisburg P. A. is the latest arrival to the cottage on Smoke-house where his mother and sister are holidaying.

Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Rothsay, is occupying the castle and on Thursday Mr Reiger of Hamilton joined the party while Miss Anderson, of Rothsay came on Monday.

Revs. Mr. Mahaffey and Ferguson are in the latters cottage and Rev. Mr Cole and family are also in their summer home. Mrs Daniels and family came last week and Rev. Mr. Daniels is coming soon.

Dr. W. M. Rudell and family from Guelph are living in Dr. Hays cottage. The other summer homes on Hawk's Nest Island are occupied. Dr. A. J. Rudell and family, Mr. Weir and family from Berlin and Mrs Yates and her daughters are summering there.

Mr. Somers of Toronto is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fox.

Miss Violet McKenzie and her friend Miss. Guardhouse from Owen Sound spent Thursday at the formers home.

Rev. Mr. Danard is still lingering here. His recovery is improbable.

Mr. and Mrs. Nursey of Chicago are visiting their daughter Mrs. Dodge in their cottage here. We hope the pure air of Oliphant will benefit Mrs. Nursey's health.

Mrs. Wright of Wiarton and a band of young folks spent last week in one of their cottages. We are glad to have her with us.

Several cottages are still vacant the shortage of young men has made it impossible for some heads of families to leave their business during the summer but doubtless August will see a large number of new arrivals.

Service was held in the campers church on Sunday and a large audience listined most appreciatingly to an excellent sermon delivered by Rev. Mr. Mahaffey of Millverton and Mrs. Bean delighted the people with her singing.

Sons Of Bruce

(London Advertiser)

If there is a battalion in the Canadian forces which deserves to go overseas, and to the front line trenches with its identity preserved and its ranks unbroken, that battalion is the 160th (Bruce) in command of Lieut. Col. A. Weir.

In the first place, it is without doubt the most representative purely Canadian unit which has been recruited in the province of Ontario. In the second place it is one of the few, if not the only rural battalion which is over strength. In the third place, as is fitting for the county of its organization it is about 75 per cent Scotch-Canadian.

The other day when a small guard was turned out, there were 24 "Macs" in line. What do ye ken about that?

The boys of Bruce—farmers, sons of farmers, professional men, lumberjacks, men in 90 different occupations—first heard the call for a county battalion late in December, and early in March the unit was up to strength. One fine day the church and school bells of the county rang out in chorus to tell the people of the county that the battalion was recruited and that 250 men were required for a base company There was something of the cross of fire tradition in the spirit of Col- Weir when he set out to stir the manhood of his native county. There was something of the wild ardor of the Highlands in the response that came to the chieftain's call.

London is proud to have had this magnificent body of men in its midst for a few weeks. They have never marched along in this city without setting the blood of other men tingling. How fine they would look in the kilts! They might claim the right. but perhaps they prefer to be thought of as the hardy, transplanted outgrowth of a great, free race, ever blood-pledged to "lay the proud oppressor low." Well, might these sons of Bruce appropriate for their marching song the battle hymn of Scotland:

Welcome to your gory bed
Or to victory!

The Presbyterian Church To Continue

To The Editor of The Canadian Echo.

A large and representative meeting of the Executive of the Organization for continuing the Presbyterian Church in Canada, was held in Knox Church, Toronto, 6th July inst. Communications were received from all parts of the Dominion, all expressing a more resolute determination on the part of the people to continue the Presbyterian Church in Canada, in unity and harmony, as heretofore, with all other Evangelical Churchs. After lengthened conference the following statement was agreed upon.

Inasmuch as the Presbyterian Church in Canada consists of its communicant membership, voluntarily banded together on the Banks basis of certain standards of Doctrine and Church Government, while the members of the General Assembly and of other Church Courts are but the servants of the Church, chosen by the people to carry on the work of the Church, within the Church and on behalf of the Church in accordance with those Standards, and for no other purpose whatsoever. and are pledged in their ordination vows to such a course, so long as they remain ministers or elders of the Presbyterian Church

Inasmuch as the General Assembly, in resolving, by a majority to terminate the separate existence of the Presbyterian Church in Canada as a member of the world-wide Presbyterian family. and to merge it into a new organization, has exceeded its rights and powers. and its decision is therefore merely the expression of the individual opinion of the members of the Assembly who thus voted, and is of no binding authority upon any others.

Inasmuch as those members of Assembly who thus voted being less than one-seventh of the ministers of our Church. and less than one fiftieth part of the elders of our Church, and representing the the expressed desire and vote of only one-third of the communicant membership of our Church have stated their purpose of seeking legislation to take away, by force of law, the name and civil rights and property of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and transfer the same to a new Church Organization.

It is therefore recommended to all who do not approve of the unlawful action of the majority of the Assembly, that, in accordance with the protest made to the Assdmbly by those who voted against such unlawful action, said action of the Assembly be disregarded, that the Presbyterian Church in Canada be continued, and that all proper steps be taken to protect the interests and rights of the people as members of the Presbyterian Church-

Committees were appointed to make arrangements for a General Convocation in Toronto, early in September, of those who purpose continuing the Presbyterian Church.

As the action of the Assembly has made necessary the duty of defending our own Church, involving considerable expenditure, those who wish our Church to continue are asked to share the burden, and to send their contributions for the same, as soon as possible. to the Treasurer; Mr. C. S. McDonald, 13 Queen St. East, Toronto.

Signed: John Penmon,
Chairman
T. Wardlaw Taylor,
Secretary.

Walkerton

During the electrical storm which passed over this section on Wednesday afternoon the Royal Bank at Cargill was struck by lightning. The bolt entered an upstairs bedroom at the south-east corner, and after upsetting all the furniture in the room, passed along the electric light wire into the bathroom and turned the entire furnishings around. It then followed the wire through the floor into the manager's office, breaking the electrical fixtures, blacking all the wall and scattering everything about the room. It stayed with the wire and its exit out of the building into the ground, after filling the entire bank with smoke and gas. The fire brigade was called out, but found it unnecessary to turn on water as there was no blaze of any kind.

The honor for making the biggest haul of trout for the present season goes to Mr. Wm. MacIlorne and his two sons Roy and Whitney, who on Saturday morning last hooked no less than thirty speckled beauties in the neighborhood of Dornock, the entire haul weighing about thirty pounds, which is the limit both in weight and numbers that the trio could legally take in one day from the stream. The fact that the three angled in public waters rather than in some private preserve makes their achievement all the more remarkable and shows that contrary to the general belief, there is still some spot in the land where a plebeian may successfully cast his line without running foul of some prohibitory sign and treading on the sacred rights of some favored fishing club, who stock its stream from Dominion fish hatcheries and prohibits the populace from angling for the fish that the public have already paid for. It's no trick to catch fish in a well stocked, preserve, but to land the limit in a public stream is some feat, and the Walkerton trio have some reason to feel chesty over their achievement.

Mr. George D. MacKay left on Saturday for London to look further into the position of chief recruiting agent for Western Ontario, which was recently offered him.

Keep Children Well During Hot Weather

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and stomach troubles are rife at this time, and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tab. lets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the tablets prevents stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Chesley

Yesterday we had a call from an old Chesley boy who left this town 22 years ago, John Magee, son of a former caretaker of our school. Mr. Magee, is connected with the industrial branch of the Salvation Army in Philadelphia and was on his way to see his mother in the American Soo.

Dr. Jas. L. Savage, son of the late Samuel Savage of 12th con. Sullivan, passed away at his home in Fargo, N. D., after an illness of more than a year from heart trouble Deceased was born in Sullivan in 1865 and had been in North Dakota since 1892, He is survived by a widow and family of three, the eldest of whom is 12 years old.
